INTRODUCTION

I.

The institution of supervision and control of the central Chinese government in the Qing period over the interior situation of the remote Western dependency of Tibet, in the professional literature mostly called “the Chinese Protectorate in Tibet” (L. Petech) and which I have chosen to call “the Ambanate” in the present study, actually represented the developmentally latest form of supervision and control, called forth by specific circumstances, of the state suzerain (i.e. China) over the state vassal (i.e. Tibet).

Government of Imperial China of many preceding dynasties, beginning with the Zhou Dynasty through the Qing Dynasty, did execute - or at least tried to - supervision and control in one form or another over the Empire's border regions and their population. To do so, various supervision and control institutions and bodies different mainly just in name rather than in activity and purpose were established in individual periods both in the centre of the country and in the peripheral areas. As for the central metropolitan-based supervising bodies dealing with the border territories, let us mention the following in a brief historical list: Da (Xiao) xingren [see Finding List of Chinese Characters], “Senior (Junior) Messenger” (H. 5957 and 2401), under the Zhou Dynasty (1027-256 B.C.); Dianke, “Chamberlain for Dependencies” (H. 6600) under the Qin Dynasty (221-207 B.C.); Da xingling, “Director of the Messenger Office” (H. 5955), which under the Han Dynasty (206 B.C. - A.D. 220) followed the tradition of its predecessor Dianke (in the first year of the Taichu era of Emperor Wudi, i.e. 104 B.C., this office was renamed Da honglu, “Chamberlain for Dependencies” [H. 5947]); under the same name Da honglu the institution kept functioning also under the Wei (220-263) and Jin (265-420) Dynasties. Others were the Honglu si, “Court for Dependencies” (H. 2906), with subordinate branch offices Dianke shu, “Office of Receptions” (H. 6605), and Dianfan shu (from c. 604 the official variant of Dianke shu; H. 6573) under the Sui (581-618) and Tang (618-907) Dynasties; the offices Kesheng, “Visitors Bureau” (H. 3200), Yinjin si, “Office of Presentations” (H. 7978) and Sifangguan shi, “Commissioner (shi) of the Hostel for Tributary Envoys” (H. 5618) in the Song era (960-1279); the Zongzhi yuan, “Supreme Control Commission” (H. 7097; renamed Xuanzheng yuan), “Commission for Buddhist and Tibetan Affairs” [H. 2654], in 1288) under the Yuan Dynasty (1271-1368); and the Taichangsi, “Court/Office of Imperial Sacrifices” (H. 6145 and 6144, M. 228) in the Ming era (1368-1644). Finally, under the Qing Dynasty (1636-1911) there was the well-known Menggu yamen, “The Mongol Agency” (H. 3972), renamed Lifan yuan, “Court of Colonial Affairs” (H. 3603, M. 183), in 1638. In 1906, Lifan yuan was once more renamed Lifan bu, “Ministry of Colonial Affairs”.

During almost 300 years of its existence, the last of the above-mentioned offices, a multi-branched Court of Colonial Affairs, Lifan yuan (lit. “Ministry of Frontier-regulating”), underwent a number of reforms aimed at increasing the efficiency of its work as well as its specialization. Apart from Tibet, particularly Mongolia and Chinese Turkestan were administered and/or controlled by this office. Among its duties with regard to Tibet were: (a) to supervise the regular payment of tribute; (b) to recommend the conferment of titles on local nobility, and to propose the amount of their income from the State Treasury; (c) to arrange audiences with the Throne for various Tibetan envoys, both secular and ecclesiastic; (d) to take care of smooth trade relations of Tibet with other dependencies as well as with China proper. Whereas the nomination of officers of the lower echelons in the Chinese administration in dependencies rested with the Lifan yuan, all major decisions both of military and administrative character (including appointments of Imperial Residents and Vice Residents) were made by the Junji chu or the “Council of State” (H. 1735, M. 136; established in 1730 by reorganizing a similar older institution called the Neige or the “Grand Secretariat” [H. 4193, M. 137]). The Imperial Residents (Ambans) of Tibet were in direct contact with the Junji chu under normal circumstances while in the times of crisis the contacts with the centre were mediated by a Governor-General of the neighbouring province of Sichuan. Economically and from the point of view of transport and communications, the Amban’s office in Lhasa was administered, and financially supported, by the provincial authorities in Sichuan.

The development of the central Chinese government’s “Resident Authorities” which were established in important places in marginal territories in order to facilitate management and control of local affairs and to establish a fast and reliable contact with the headquarters, underwent basically a similar process. Such sort of “Permanent Residencies” of the central authorities can be found as early as under the Han Dynasty on the territory of today’s Mongolia, Qinghai and Xinjiang; similarly under the Tang Dynasty in Mongolia and Xinjiang; under the Yuan Dynasty in the same places as well as in Qinghai (Duq-Gans du yuanshuai fu, “Chief Military Command of A-mdo and Khams” [cf. H. 7337]), and in Tibet (Wusi-Zang du yuanshuai fu, “Chief Military Command of Dbus and Gtsang”; H. ibid.). In the Qing era, Imperial Residents, or Ambans (banshi dachen, “Grand Minister Superintendent” [H. 4414], also called zheng dachen, “Principal, or Senior, Grand Minister” and Assistant Imperial Residents, or Assistant Ambans (bangban dachen, “Grand Minister Assistant Administrator” [H. 4443], also called fu dachen, “Deputy, or Junior, Grand Minister”) can be found in several places in Outer and Inner Mongolia, Xinjiang, Qinghai and Tibet. The post of Assistant Amban of Tibet with its seat in Lhasa was changed in 1910 to the zuo (Left, or Senior) and you (Right, or Junior) canzan (“Consultant”) residing in Anterior (Dbus) and Ulterior (Gtsang) Tibet respectively.

II.

It is well-known that the first contacts between the Qing rulers and the Tibetan leaders were established long before the Manchus seized China. As early as 1640 an invitation was sent to the Dalai Lama to come to visit Emperor Taizong (1627-1643) in Mukden. A new invitation, this time to visit Emperor Shunzhi (1644-1661) in Beijing, was sent to both the Dalai Lama and the Panchen Lama in 1648. The contacts, however, especially the Dalai Lama’s visit to Beijing in 1652, did not yet result in any adjustment of Tibet’s political relations with China’s
Manchu rulers.\(^1\) The Court did not maintain any official contacts with the Dalai Lama as before. "This period," to quote L. Petech, "is characterized by the absence of direct political action in Tibet, the Manchu emperors possessing only that shadowy form of suzerainty, which they inherited from the Yuan and the Ming dynasties."\(^2\)

Licentious interferences of the military commander of Tibet, the Mongol Lajang (Tib. Lha-bzang) Khan (1697-1717) with internal affairs of the secular and ecclesiastical administration of Tibet, such as killing the Regent (sde-srid) Sangs-rgyas-rgya-mtsho in 1705 and proclaiming himself Regent, deposing and deportation of the Sixth Dalai Lama Tshangs-dbyangs-rgya-mtsho in 1706 and setting up as Dalai Lama a candidate of his own choice in 1707, etc., brought about great displeasure in the country. Complaints continued to reach Beijing, denouncing the Regent's arbitrary conduct. Consequently, Emperor Kangxi\(^3\) (1662-1722) sent in 1708 a commission under the "Academician of the Grand Secretariat" (neige xueshi,\(^4\) H. 4196) or "Sub-Chancellor of the Grand Secretariat" (M. 142) the Manchu Laduhun\(^5\) to investigate the situation in situ. In his report of Lajang Khan's activities in Tibet it was suggested:

"Considering that the Princes of the Koko-nor are dissatisfied with Latsang and his management of affairs in Tibet, the latter should not be left to manage them alone and an official should be sent to Lhasa to assist him."

Laduhun's recommendation was promptly realized. In the following year (1709), the Emperor dispatched the first Manchu commissioner, the shilang,\(^6\) "Vice Minister" (H. 5278) or "Vice President of a Board" (M. 161) Heshou,\(^7\) to Lhasa "to assist [Lajang Khan] in managing Tibetan affairs" (xieli zangwu).\(^8\) The Qingshi gao reports this appointment with the following comment: shi wei Xizang sheguan banshi zhi shi,\(^9\) "This marks the beginning of setting up in Tibet of an office to manage [Tibetan] affairs."\(^10\) Heshou's mission to Lhasa should be considered the first successful attempt of the Manchu Court at direct intervention in Tibetan affairs, rendered possible, however, by Lhabzang Khan's pro-Manchu policy.

The stormy events in Lhasa between 1717-1720 (the fall of Lajang Khan's pro-Manchu régime and the Dsungar invasion) made Kangxi launch two successive punitive expeditions in 1718 and 1720, respectively, against the Dsungar occupants and to re-establish the new order in the country: a provisional military junta was established for the period 1720-1721, headed by the Commander-in-chief of the second expeditionary force, the Manchu general Yanxin,\(^11\) a new - the

\(^1\) W. W. Rockhill, the noted American diplomat and scholar, giving an account of this visit, based primarily on Chinese sources, says (The Dalai Lamas of Lhasa and their Relations with the Manchu Emperors of China, 1644-1908, T'oun Pao, Vol. 11, 1910, p. 18): "He [i.e. the Fifth Dalai Lama - JK] had been treated with all the ceremony which could have been accorded to any independent sovereign, and nothing can be found in Chinese works to indicate that he was looked upon in any other light; at this period of China's relations with Tibet, the temporal power of the Lama, backed by the arms of Gushi Khan and the devotion of all Mongolia, was not a thing for the Emperor of China to question."

Seventh Dalai Lama was enthroned in the Potala palace; the office of sde-srid (Regent) was abolished and replaced by a four-man Ministerial Council (bka'-gshags) headed by the First Minister Bsod-nams-rgyal-po, called Khang-chen-nas, “Of Khang-chen” (in Ulterior Tibet; this Ministerial Council functioned under the supreme supervision of the Manchu commandant of the imperial troops in Lhasa); to secure the orderly functioning of the new régime after the Manchu punitive armies returned to China, a strong garrison was left behind in Lhasa, consisting of about 3,000 men and smaller units were also stationed along the Sichuan-Tibet road.

The next Emperor Yongzheng’san (1723-1735) Tibetan policy brought several important changes: in 1723, the financial difficulty of maintaining numerous government troops in so remote an area as Tibet led the Emperor to order their reduction and later the withdrawal of the imperial troops from Tibet; in 1727, a new boundary was drawn between Sichuan and Tibet, formed by the Ningjingshan Range dividing the waters of the Jinshajiang River (Upper Yangtze) from those of the Lancangjiang River (Mekong), etc.

Yongzheng’s temporarily decreased interest in Tibet brought to a head dissensions in Lhasa between the pro-Manchu members of the Ministerial Council, Khang-chen-nas and Bsod-nams-stobs-rgyal, called Pho-lha-nas, “Of Pho-lha” (in Southern Tibet), and their nationalistic adversaries (the remaining two ministers of the bka'-gshags and the father of the Seventh Dalai Lama) to such an extent that the two adverse camps clashed which cost the First Minister Khang-chen-nas his life. At that time (1727) two imperial envoys, Sengge and Mala came to Lhasa to arbitrate between the two factions but all their efforts were in vain because, among other things, their words were not followed by action of the imperial troops that had been withdrawn from the country after 1723. A civil war (1727-28) broke out in Tibet which brought victory to Pho-lha-nas who won the trust of the Emperor who lent him military aid. Shortly after, radical reforms of the Tibetan administration followed: temporal power in Lhasa was turned over to Pho-lha-nas, who was promoted to the rank of Beile Prince (beizi in Chinese, H. 4546); supreme control over the local administration was placed in the hands of General Jalangga, commander of the expeditionary force of some 15,000 men, and after the latter’s departure (by the autumn of 1728) in those of envoy Sengge and his assistant Mala.

In the person of Sengge and Mala, the institution of Ambans, or high officials representing in Tibet the supervising bodies of the central Chinese government, was established in 1727. The Ambans - Chief, or Senior, called zhu Zang banslli dachen, “Grand Minister Resident of Tibet” (H. 1438, M. 565), and Assistant, or Junior, called zhu Zang bangban dchen, “Grand Minister Assistant Administrator of Tibet” (H. and M., ibid.) - were supported by a garrison of 2,000 men stationed permanently in the capital. Nevertheless, they did not yet take direct part in the control of political life in the country in this early period, being - according to the words of H. E. Richardson, “little more than observers with the duty of reporting to Peking on events in Lhasa.”

H. E. Richardson, Tibet and Its History, p. 52.
After the death of Pho-lha-nas in 1747 and especially after the anti-Chinese revolt of his son and successor 'Gyur-med-rnam-rgyal (1747-1750) in 1750 which cost, among others, Residents Fuqing and Labudun their lives, the situation in the country changed radically in many respects again. The main changes in power which occurred in Tibet after the events in 1750 can be summed up as follows: (a) the institution of hereditary “kings of Tibet” (zangwang in Chinese, mi-dbang in Tibetan) was abolished; (b) the Dalai Lama was made nominal head, spiritual and temporal, of Tibet and was officially authorized to take charge of the administration of Tibet; (c) the Ministerial Council, the chief executive organ in the country consisting of four bka'-blon, or Ministers - one monk and three laymen - jointly took charge of Tibetan local affairs; (d) the bka'-gshags had to obtain the approval of the Amban and the Dalai Lama on matters of importance; (e) the powers of the Ambans were greatly increased: apart from commanding the Chinese garrison of Lhasa (which was brought up to 1,500 men) and being responsible for the mail service between Chengdu and Lhasa, they were given rights of control and supervision over the activities of the bka'-gshags - mostly as advisors to the Ministerial Council but their instructions were always supposed to be preferably followed by the Ministers.

The reorganization happened without violence to become soon commonly accepted. The newly established system remained in use without considerable changes until the Gurkha war with Tibet in 1788-92. As a consequence of the conflict in which China took a decisive stand on the side of the Tibetans, the Court found it necessary to carry out more political reforms in Tibet. The chief aim of Emperor Qianlong's reforms from the years 1792-93, known as 102-point Imperial Regulations (Qinding zhangcheng), was to create in Tibet a situation which would preclude an occurrence of any unwanted change of internal conditions in the future, and at the same time protect the country against any foreign intervention. These goals could only be achieved by placing all responsibility for military, political, economic and administrative control over Tibet upon the Chinese central government acting through the Ambans as its intermediaries.

The measures taken, on the recommendation of General Fukang'an, the victor over the Gurkha armies, were as follows: (a) the Ambans were given equal status with the Dalai Lama and the Panchen Lama and the right of a direct participation (not only supervision and/or control) in the Tibetan government; (b) the incarnations of the Dalai Lama, the Panchen Lama and other “Living Buddhas” (huofo) of the “Yellow Hat” sect in various parts of Tibet were subject to the supervision and authorization by the Ambans; (c) all the civilian and military officials of Tibetan local government below the status of the bka'-blon had to be nominated by the Ambans jointly with the Dalai Lama and appointed by the central government; (d) the promotion, demotion, removal, rewarding or punishment of the above-mentioned officials had to be the responsibility of the Ambans; (e) criminal sentences be reported to the Ambans; (f) census registers for the manors of the officials, nobles and monasteries be submitted both to the Ambans and to the Dalai Lama for reference; (g) concerning defence, the Regulations prescribed a local standing army system. The army's quota was 3,000 men, who were to garrison Lhasa, Shigatse (Gzhis-ka-rtse) and other cities; (h) the authority over foreign affairs was to be concentrated in the central government and the foreign affairs involving Tibet be left completely in the hands of the Ambans; (i) correspondence from foreign countries contiguous to Tibet which was forwarded to the Dalai Lama and the Panchen Lama was subject to censorship by the Ambans, who then undertook to give the needed replies for the Grand Lamas; (j) foreign traders had to obtain a permit issued by the Ambans and perform the necessary formalities before they were permitted to reside in Tibet; (k) in finance, the Regulations provided for the establishment of a special body which was to supervise the minting of silver coins, standardizing the purity of the metal used and fixing the rates of exchange for other currencies; (l) the local government's taxes, levies, revenues and expenditure were all to be checked by the Ambans; (m) increase or reduction of the corvée service and taxes throughout Tibet, as well as the amount of the stored grain in various parts of the region, was also to be sanctioned or regulated by the Ambans.

The introduction of the Ambans’ supreme control over the local administration meant, as a matter of fact, the disappearance of the last remnants of Tibet’s autonomy which had already been considerably curtailed by the reform in 1750, implying the actual subordination of Tibet’s local government to China’s central government in all vital spheres of its activities. With perhaps only some minor adjustment after 1906, that was the form the central administration of Tibetan affairs kept until roughly after the fall of the Manchu Dynasty in China in 1912. That is when the 185-year-old institution of the Ambans ceased to exist, under the influence of the revolution in China and as a consequence of the fall of the Qing Dynasty and the introduction of the Republican régime in the country, as well as anti-Chinese turmoils in Lhasa itself. Since then until 1934, China had no official representative in Tibet, who would follow the tradition of the preceding Ambans with his position and function.

III.

As mentioned above, there were usually two Imperial Residents in Lhasa - a chief one and an assistant. The difference between the two, however, was merely formal and in practice they enjoyed the equal authority. During the initial period of the Ambanate, i.e. in 1727-1750, no fixed number of residents dispatched was stipulated or kept and likewise their official rank differed: zongli, "Superintendent" (H. 7121) - Nos. 1, 2, and 5; xieli, "Assistant Manager” (H. 2468) - Nos. 3, 4, 6, and 9; xieban,bl “Assistant Agent” - Nos. 7, 8, 10, and 17; fu dutong,bm “Vice Commander-in-chief” (H. 2107) or “Deputy Lieutenant-General” (M. 381) - Nos. 15, 18, 19, and 23; dutong,bn “Commander-in-chief” (H. 7321) or “Lieutenant-General” (M. 380) - No. 20; zuo duyushi,bo “Left Censor-in-chief” (H. 7335) or “President of the Censorate” (M. 185) - No. 21; shilang,ag “Vice Minister” - No. 24. For the rest of the administrators during the period - Nos. 11, 12, 13, 14, 16, and 22 - no official title is given.

Lu Xingqi was appointed High Commissioner for Tibet on April 2, 1913, which was supposed to be a function following the office of Ambans; but the author adds that Lu “never had the chance to set up his office in Tibet”. Another Chinese author, Xie Bin, Xizang jiao she luoshi, 4th edition, Shanghai, 1933, p. 81, says that Lu Xingqi resided in India until 1919 expecting that the situation would improve to make it possible for him to move to Lhasa but it never happened.

It was only from 1750 onward that a system of two Imperial Residents, viz. the Amban and the Assistant Amban, was introduced and meticulously adhered to. Since then, these rotated more or less regularly at three years’ intervals. There were exceptions, however, with Amban Manggulai (No. 38) or Amban Selenge (No. 146) remaining in office for six years (1767-73 and 1879-85 respectively), and Amban Jing Wen (No. 135) retaining it even for eight (1861-69).

According to my findings, verified and supplemented with data by Wu Fengpei and Zeng Guoqing (1988, 1989), in the period of 185 years studied, i.e. from 1727 (5th year of the Yongzheng period) till 1912 (1st year of the Republic of China), a total of 173 appointments were made for the posts of Imperial Residents and/or Vice Residents in Tibet. A number of these appointments, however, were purely nominal and the persons actually never took office due to various reasons (e.g. health, etc.). In fact, only 135 people had been assigned to either of the two posts.

Throughout the years, the Ambans’ or Assistant Ambans’ prerogatives often changed or even merged to a different degree. Quite apparent, however, is a general trend aiming at extending and strengthening of their supervisory and controlling function both in the civil and military administration of Tibet.

Ambans and Assistant Ambans were mostly selected from members of the Manchu and Mongolian nobility. With only a few exceptions, the Ambans and Assistant Ambans were typical military officers or administration bureaucrats with many years of practice in other parts of the Empire who did not really become attached to their job in remote and poor Tibet, so they were happy to return home as soon as their term expired (in case they did not die in office).

Before their Tibetan appointment, these officials most often held such posts as the fu dutong, bm “Vice Commander-in-chief” (82 instances); bangban dachen, y “Assistant Amban” (21 instances); shiwei, bp “Imperial Guardsman” (H. 5333) or “Officer of the Guards” (M. 100) - 19 instances; banshi dachen, w “Amban” (15 instances); dutong, bn “Commander-in-chief” (9 instances); neige xueshi, ae “Academician of the Grand Secretariat” (8 instances); jiangjun, bq “General” (H. 694) or “Military Governor” (M. 367) - 7 instances; xunfu, br “Provincial Governor” (H. 2731, M. 274) - 5 instances; zuo shilang, bs “Left Vice Minister” (H. 5278) or “Senior Vice President of a Board” (M. 161) - 5 instances; houbudaob, bt “Expectant Circuit Intendant” (H. 2220 and 6306. M. 280 and p. 127) - 4 instances; lanling shiwei, bu “Junior Guardsman” (H. 3558) or “Subaltern of the Guards, wearing the blue feather” (M. 101) - 4 instances; lingdai dachen, bv “Commandant of the Forces” (M. 559) - 4 instances; neige shidu xueshi, bw “Grand Secretariat Academician Reader-in-waiting” (H. 4197) or “Reader of the Grand Secretariat” (M. 143) - 4 instances; buzhuang shisi, bx “Provincial Administration Commissioner” (H. 487 and 4770) or “Financial Commissioner” (M.
275) - 3 instances; dalisi qing, by "Director of the Court of Judicial Review" (H. 5986) or "Director of the Grand Court of Revision" (M. 196) - 3 instances; dao, by "Circuit Intendant" (H. 6306, M. 280) - 3 instances; duchayuan zuo fuduyushi, by "Left Vice Censor-in-chief" (H. 7183 and 7335) or "Senior Vice President of the Censorate" (M. 184 and 187) - 3 instances; shangshu, by "Minister" (H. 5042) or "President of a Board" (M. 160) - 3 instances; shilang, by "Vice Minister" - 3 instances.

As regards the ethnic origin of the 135 persons assigned to Tibet as Residents, Vice Residents etc., a positive identification as to their affiliation with one of the traditional Eight Banners (baqi; H. 611 and 4358, M. 379) of the Qing social-political-military organization was made for 125 persons, while the remaining ten defied a positive identification. Out of the 125 positively identified, eighty-eight (or 70.4%) were Manchus (of these eleven, or 12.5%, were Imperial Clansmen - zongshi [H. 7151, M. 311]), twenty-eight (or 22.4%) Mongolians, seven (or 5.6%) the so-called Hanjun (Chinese Bannermen; H. 2134, M. 379) and two (or 1.6%) non-Bannerman Chinese. It is interesting to note in this respect that the first appointment of a Chinese Bannerman, Xu Kun (No. 99), took place as late as 1833-34. To the same Hanjun class belonged also Meng Bao (Nos. 108, 109, and 114), Zhong Fang (No. 113), Jing Wen (No. 135), Yan Mao (No. 158), Qing Shan (No. 162) and Zhao Erfeng (No. 172). The only non-Bannerman Chinese among the Imperial Residents in Lhasa were the two last Assistant Ambans, Zhang Yintang (No. 171) and Wen Zongyao (No. 173), both hailing from the south China province of Guangdong.

Of a total of 135 persons appointed to the residential posts in Tibet, thirty-four held the post twice, namely (in chronological order of appointment): Jishan (Nos. 14 and 19), Suobai (Nos. 15 and 17), Fuqing (Nos. 16 and 20), Labudun (Nos. 18 and 21), Guanbao (Nos. 30 and 36), Liubaozhu (Nos. 43 and 49), Yamantai (Nos. 50 and 56), Nadanzhu alias Nadang’a (Nos. 88 and 102), Wenwei (Nos. 100 and 127), Eshun’an (Nos. 105 and 122), Ancheng (Nos. 132 and 164), and Naqin (Nos. 159 and 166).

Quite frequent were cases of an official first holding the post of an Assistant Amban and later that of an Amban, e.g. Wumitai (Nos. 29 and 42), Suolin (Nos. 40 and 45), Baotai (Nos. 46 and 57), Pufu (Nos. 54 and 55), Hening (Nos. 64 and 67), Funing (Nos. 68 and 69), Wenbi (Nos. 72 and 74), Yangchun (Nos. 76 and 77), Ximing (Nos. 82 and 83), Xingke (Nos. 95 and 96), Longwen (Nos. 97 and 98), Qinglu (Nos. 103 and 104), Haipu (Nos. 110 and 111), Mutenge (Nos. 118 and 120), Manqing (Nos. 130 and 131), Enlin (Nos. 137 and 138), Selenge (Nos. 145 and 146), Shengtai (Nos. 152 and 154), Kuihuan (Nos. 156 and 157), Yugang (Nos. 161 and 163), and Lianyu (Nos. 169 and 170). In one case it was the other way round, with a former Amban being later appointed an Assistant Amban - Shulian (Nos. 52 & 59).

In two cases one person held the post three times, namely Mala (Nos. 2, 5, and 10) and Meng Bao (Nos. 108, 109, and 114).

Many Imperial Residents and Vice Residents, though appointed, actually never assumed office due to a host of reasons, e.g. Assistant Amban Nadanzhu’s (No. 88) appointment was cancelled the day after he was nominated. Assistant Amban Dunliang’s (No. 91) carriage overturned on the way to Tibet, his leg was broken, and he was forced to return to Beijing. Assistant Amban Wenkang’s (No. 117) appointment was cancelled for health reasons. Amban Haimei (No. 125) fell ill on the way to Tibet, and therefore never took office. Mostly for health or other reasons, such as the cancellation of appointment, new appointment, illness, death on the way to Tibet, etc., altogether twenty-one Residents never took office: Lizhu (No. 9), Tongning (No. 22), Nadanzhu alias Nadang’a (Nos. 88 and 102), Dunliang (No. 91), Songlian (No. 101), Naerjing’e (No. 107), Naleheng’e (No. 112), Wenkang (No. 117), Haimei (No. 125), Wenwei (No. 127), Ancheng (No. 132), Chongshi (No. 134), Ruichang (No. 136), Xizhen (No. 144), Eli (No. 148), Shangxian (No. 151), Shaojian (No. 155), Qing Shan (No. 162), Fengquan (No. 168), Zhang Yintang (No. 171), and Zhao Erfeng (No. 172).

Largely due to health or other reasons, such as recallment, dismissal, degradation, etc., twenty-one Residents were - mostly prematurely - relieved of their post at their own request or otherwise: Aminertu (No. 34), Qinglin (No. 48), Yamantai (Nos. 50 and 56), Shulian (No. 52), Pufu (No. 55), Baotai (No. 57), Ehui (No. 60), Cebake (No. 71), Fengshen (No. 80), Shentai (No. 94), Mutenge (No. 120), Eshun’an (No. 122), Enteheng’e (No. 123), Zhunling (No. 126), Hetehe (No. 128), Yikai (No. 141), Chonggang (No. 149), Ancheng (No. 164), Naqin (No. 166), Guilin (No. 167), and Wen Zongyao (No. 173).

Amban Cebake (1804-1805), for example, was dismissed from his post, and subsequently punished as well, because he had accepted a substantial bribe from a certain Tibetan nobleman and thus, through deceit, enabled the latter’s son to obtain a seat in the Ministerial Council. Many anonymous posters in Lhasa drew attention to that scandal and condemned those murky practices. The Emperor then sent to Lhasa two Special Commissioners to conduct a thorough investigation of the affair. Cebake was found guilty, dismissed from his post and punished.

The following eleven Residents died prior to assuming office, during their journey to, or on their departure from, Tibet: Lizhu (No. 9), Aminertu (No. 34), Suolin (No. 45), Kuilin (No. 58), Keshike (No. 84), Baoqing (No. 124), Haimei (No. 125), Yujian (No. 129), Enqing (No. 133), Shaojian (No. 155), and Qing Shan (No. 162).

Nine Residents died during their term of office, namely Baojinzhong (No. 6), Mala (No. 10), Aexun (No. 11), Changzai (No. 39), Shulian (No. 59), Wen’gan (No. 87), Binliang (No. 119), Chengji (No. 140), and Shentai (No. 154).

As a result of anti-Manchu riots in Lhasa in 1750 and in Eastern Tibet in 1905, Fuqing (No. 20) and Labudun (No. 21) were killed in Lhasa (both on November 12, 1750) and Fengquan (No. 168) in Bathang (April 5, 1905).

Unless raised from an Assistant to a full Amban, or prematurely stripped of the post, or having died in office (see above), after the expiration of their term former Imperial Residents of Tibet were often appointed to hold major posts either in the central administration in Beijing or in other parts of the Empire. For example, Nasutai (No. 12) became Vice Commander-in-chief (fu dutong) of Jehol (Rehe); Jishan (No. 14) became General (jiangjun) of Ningxia; Salashan (No. 28) became General of Jilin; Guanbao (No. 30) became Right Vice Minister (you shilang) of the Ministry of Justice (xīngbù, H. 2590) or the Board of Punishments (M. 156); Funai (No. 32) became Vice Minister (shìlàng) of the Court of Colonial Affairs (Lifàn yuàn); Hengrui (No. 44) became Vice Commander-in-chief of Jehol; Chengde (No. 62) became Left Censor-in-chief (zuò dùyùshì); Helin (No. 63) became Governor-General (zōngdù, H. 7158, M. 273) of Sichuan; Hening (No. 67) became Right Vice Minister of the Court of Colonial Affairs; Chenglin (No. 70) became Commandant of the Forces (língdù dàchén) at Ili (Yīlì); Fengshen (No. 80) became General of Chengdu; Xiangbao (No. 81) became General of Xi'an; Ximing (No. 83) became General of Uliastai (Wuliyasutai); Songting (No. 90) became Right Vice Minister of the Ministry of War (bīngbù, H. 4691) or Board of War (M. 155); Xingke (No. 96) became Vice Commander-in-chief of Shanhaiguan; Longwen (No. 98) became Right Vice Minister of the Court of Colonial Affairs; Nadanzhu alias Nadang’a (No. 102) became Assistant Amban; Eshun’an (No. 105) became Surveillance Commissioner (ancha, H. 12) or Provincial Judge (M. 276) of Hunan; Naerjing’e (No. 107) became Amban at Xining; Zhong Fang (No. 113) became Amban at Hami; Qishan (No. 115) became Governor-General of Sichuan; Ruiyuan (No. 116) became Grand Minister Consultant (cānzan dachen, H. 6893) or Assistant Governor (M. 558) at Kобдо (Kебудуо); Chongshi (No. 134) became General of Chengdu; Selenge (No. 146) became Amban at Urga (Kulun); Changgeng (No. 153) became General of Ili; Zhao Erfeng (No. 172) became Governor-General of Sichuan.

There were at least fifteen Ambans and Assistant Ambans - Helin (No. 63), Hening (No. 64), Songyun (No. 65), Wen’gan (No. 87), Zhong Fang (No. 113), Meng Bao (No. 114), Wenkang (No. 117), Binliang (No. 119), Jing Wen (No. 135), Xizhen (No. 144), Wenshi (No. 150), Shengtai (No. 154), Youtai (No. 165), Lianyu (No. 170), and Zhang Yintang (No. 171) - who became famous as men of letters who in their travelogue sketches, memoirs, memorandum collections, correspondence and other papers captured the years of their activity in Tibet. The papers can serve as interesting source material for the Tibetan studies concerning the period in question. Perhaps the most important and prolific authors among these literati Ambans or Assistant Ambans included Helin (d. 1796), the alleged author of the work Weizartg tongzhict (first published in 1896); Songyun (1752-1835), among other things the author of valuable notes on the administration of Tibet; Meng Bao, among other things the author of a collection of the Chinese inscriptions on the memorial tablets in Lhasa commemorating the principal events in Sino-Tibetan relations including the various Manchu military expeditions, Xizang beiwen (1851); Zhong Fang who penned at least five works on Tibetan topics which were later included in a single volume titled Zangwu leihan; Wenkang, one of the chief editors of the collected statutes of the Court of Colonial Affairs, Lifàn yuàn zeli (1825); Binliang (1784-1848), known for his voluminous collection of verse, entitled Baochong zhai shiji (1849-50); Shengtai (d. 1892), author of a two-volume collection of diplomatic documents, Zang-Yin bianwu lu, and Youtai (d. 1910) who wrote at least six works including a travelogue titled Shi Zang riji, a tome of diplomatic correspondence between Tibet and India, Zang-Yin laiwang zhaohui, and other works.

Famous as a diplomat in his time and during the first years of the Republic of China was Zhang Yintang (No. 171) who held ambassadorial posts in the U.S., Peru, Mexico and Cuba.

Perhaps the internationally best-known Amban was Qishan (No. 115) who held office in Tibet between 1843 and 1847. His previous brilliant civil service career culminated in his controversial part in the negotiations on the cessation of Hong Kong to Great Britain in 1840-41, shortly after the end of the First Anglo-Chinese Opium War. After being dismissed from all his official posts, stripped of all honours and titles, he was finally tried in Beijing and was sentenced to be executed. But the Emperor commuted the sentence to banishment. Following his short appointment as Assistant Military Governor of Yarkand (Yeeriqiang), he was sent, late in 1843, as Amban to Tibet.

IV.

The structure of individual items in the List of Ambans and Assistant Ambans is as follows:

(a) Serial number;
(b) The name of a respective Amban or Assistant Amban, their aliases, zi (literary name), hao (style name) and shi (posthumous title), if any; their Bordered (xiang) or Plain (zheng) Banner (qi) and clan (shi) affiliation, if known; the date of birth and/or death, if known; previous position(s) held, if any.
(c) The office held in Tibet (A. = Amban, AA. = Assistant Amban), the exact date of appointment to, or recallment from, the post (and who was his predecessor and who was his successor), and wherever possible, the date of arrival to, or departure from Tibet, as well.

Note. Included in the List are even those persons who, though appointed, due to some reason, in fact, never assumed office.

40 WZTZ IX/13b, 14a (I/188, 189) mentions Chengde twice, giving the following dates concerning his two terms in office: First term - 1791 (Qian 56/X [Oct. 27 - Nov. 25, 1791]), following the discharged Baotai (No. 57) - 1791 (Qian 56/XI [Nov. 26 - Dec. 24, 1791]), when he was released in connection with a certain military expedition and replaced by Ehui (No. 60). Second term - 1793 (Qian 57/XII [Jan. 12 - Feb. 10, 1793]), replacing the discharged Ehui (No. 60) - 1794 (Qian 59/III [March 31 - Apr. 28, 1794]), when he was replaced by Hening (No. 64). According to Yang 323, No. 28, Chengde was appointed already in Qian 56/X [Oct. 27 - Nov. 25, 1791] and again in Qian 57/XI [Dec. 14, 1792 - Jan. 11, 1793]. In the latter case he was acting as Assistant Agent (xiebanbl). In Qian 58/XI [Dec. 3, 1793 - Jan. 1, 1794] he was recalled from his post.

41 According to WZTZ IX/14a (I/188). Helin reached his post in Qian 57/intercalary IV [May 21 - June 18, 1792].

42 Both QSG Biao and QS Biao, ll. cc., give Helin’s date of appointment as of Qian 58/V [June 8 - July 7, 1793] and make him to follow after Ehui (No. 60).

43 According to Deng 207.1. Helin is the author of the work, titled Weizang tongzhic, cl first published in 1895 (Guangxud np 21). Cf. also WZTZ, Ke Weizang tongzhix houxu, js [Additional Discussion of the Carving Process of the Printing Blocks of WZTZ], fol. 5a (I/3). On Songyun’s alleged authorship of the work, see below, Note 46. However, according to E. Hänisch, Eine chinesische Beschreibung von Tibet, in: Sven Hedin, Southern Tibet, Stockholm, 1922, Vol. IX, Part IV, p. 8, as well as Petech 6. the WZTZ is an anonymous work.

44 The change of the personal name (mingjk) Ning to Ying was made additionally because the personal name Minningq of Emperor Xuanzongkz (Daoguang, k2 1820-1850) in whose era Hening died (1821) included the same character ning. kb

AA [first term]. 1805 (Jia 10/X/jiashen 5 [Nov. 25, 1805]), following the dismissed Cebake (No. 71). In Tibet already in Jia 10/XI/xinwei 22 [Jan. 11, 1806].

50 Amban Cebake was dismissed from his post, and subsequently punished as well, because he had accepted a substantial bribe from a certain Tibetan nobleman and thus, through deceit, enabled the latter’s son to obtain a seat in the Ministerial Council. Many anonymous posters in Lhasa drew attention to that scandal and condemned those murky practices. The Emperor then sent to Lhasa two Special Commissioners to conduct a thorough investigation of the affair. Cebake was found guilty, dismissed from his post and punished. See L. Petech, Aristocracy and Government in Tibet, pp. 59-60 and 220. "Tse’pa-k’e [Cebake - JK] and his deputy [i.e. Chenglin - JK] accused each other of misconduct and both were cashiered. Bills written in Tibetan were found posted on the walls in Lhasa accusing Ts’epa-k’e of taking bribes in choosing bKa-blohs [Ministers - JK] and other high officials. This accusation, though made anonymously, was brought to the attention of the Emperor who, realizing that the Tibetans had become less docile, ordered a thorough investigation of the matter.” Li Tieh-tseng, Tibet Today and Yesterday. pp. 245-246, Note 174.

57 Thus WZ 1988, 143. Hummel I/391 gives Longwen's zi as Cunzhi and Yunzhang as his hao.

58 Thus WZ 1988, 146. Hummel I/377 gives Wenwei's zi as Baoren, adding Luxuan as his hao.

59 1855, as the year of Wenwei's death, is given, among others, by QSG Lie, QS Lie, Qian Shifu, WZ 1988, and Hummel, Ll. cc. On the other hand, judging from L. Petech, Aristocracy and Government in Tibet, p. 61 ("In 1854 Rdo-ring appears as rtis-dpon, accompanying the coffin of the dead amban Wen-wei on the first stages of the long journey to Peking"), one could deduce that Wenwei died in 1854.

80) Qing Shan was Amban in name only; originally he was to replace the deceased Amban Wenhai (No. 160), but, as a matter of fact, he never reached Tibet (he died on the way there). Acting in his place, and also after him, was Assistant Amban (later Amban) Yugang (Nos. 161 and 163).

AA [first term]. 1905 (Guang 31/III/renchen 19 [Apr. 23, 1905]), following the murdered Fengquan (No. 168). Reached Tibet in Guang 32/VI/dingsi 22 [Sept. 10, 1906]. — 1906 (Guang 32/X/guiwei 20 [Dec. 5, 1906]). After the departure of Youtai (No. 165) appointed Amban. Because Zhang Yintang (No. 171) resigned from the post of Assistant Amban, Lianyu in fact took over this post as well.

Fengquan never reached Tibet proper. He was originally designated for the new post of Imperial Resident at Chamdo (Chab-mdo; Changdu), "with instructions to curtail gradually the powers of the native rulers and lamas and bring the country under the more direct control of the Chinese Government...Feng Ch'uan [Fengquan] proceeded to the frontier towards the end of 1904, and travelling via Tachienlu [Dajianlu] and the main South Road, took up his residence temporarily at Batang. Here his activities in trying to interfere with the authority of the lamas soon caused disaffection and unrest...In April, 1905, the Tibetans of the neighbourhood and the lamas of the great Batang monastery rose in open revolt and attacked Chinese. Feng Ch'uan himself, whose troops were quite insufficient to quell the outbreak, escaped through the back door of his yamen by the ingenious expedient of scattering rupees amongst his assailants. He then endeavoured to withdraw down the Litang road, but was killed with nearly all his followers in a narrow gorge just outside Batang, where the spot is still marked by a memorial stone." See Eric Teichman, Travels of a Consular Officer in Eastern Tibet, Cambridge, 1922, p. 20.

170. LIANYU (see above, No. 169). Previous position: Assistant Amban in Lhasa.

In 1906 (Guang 32/IV/guimao 6 [Apr. 29, 1906]), Zhang Yintang was sent to Tibet via India to take over the place of Assistant Amban Lianyu, to which he was appointed in Guang 32/guiwei 20 [Dec. 5, 1906]. He reached Tibet at the end of November of the same year and remained there until 1910 in order “to investigate

83 Lianyu actually had been waiting on the frontier for more than a year and reached Lhasa in the autumn of 1906 only to take over the Amban post from Youtai. Cf. Eric Teichman, op. cit., p. 22. "Unlike his junior colleague, the Assistant Amban Wen Tsung-yao [Wen Zongyao; see No. 173 - JK], who was a gentleman of liberal ideas and popular with the Tibetans, Lien Yu [Lianyu] made himself intensely disliked, and through his unwise and arrogant behaviour appears to have been largely responsible for the Chinese débâcle in Tibet which followed the revolution in China.” Ibidem.
84 The new Republican Government cashiered the Manchu Amban Lianyu and appointed Zhong Ying (RMDCD 1690.3) in his place; but the Tibetans refused to let any Chinese official organization remain, not to mention the Amban Residency. On January 6, 1913, Zhong Ying and the last remnant of his troops marched out of Lhasa. See Li Tieh-tseng, Tibet Today and Yesterday, p. 69. Two years later, in the spring of 1915, Zhong Ying was put to death, being charged with failure to maintain discipline, leaving Tibet against orders, and murdering Luo Changqi, Lianyu’s chief assistant. Idem, p. 250. Note 235 (for the Presidential Mandate announcing his sentence, published in the Peking Government Gazette of March 22, 1915, see E. Teichman, op. cit., p. 40). During Lianyu’s appointment, in 1910 or 1911, two posts of “Consultants” or “Adjutants” (canzan) were established: the so-called Left Consultant (zuo canzan) - for the affairs of Anterior Tibet (Luo Changqi was appointed), and the Right Consultant (you canzan) - for the affairs of Ulterior Tibet (Qian Xibao was appointed). Cf. Ding 140; WZ 1988, 260-261; WZ 1989, 22.
85 Lianyu is the author of two works dealing with the problems of Tibet during his time there: Zhu Zang wengao and Xizang chuji. Cf. Deng 211.1 and 212.2. Lianyu’s memorials to the Throne have been recently (1989) edited for the Tibetan People’s Press by Wu Fengpei et al., under the title Lianyu zhu Zang zougao [Memorials to the Throne from Amban Lianyu].
and conduct affairs” (chaban shijian). After completing his mission in Tibet, he returned to China via India and the sea route.

172. ZHAO ERFENG, zi Jihe. A Hanjun of the Plain Blue Banner. Executed on Dec. 23, 1911. Previous positions: Minister (shangshu), Frontier Commissioner for Sichuan and Yunnan (Chuan-Dian bianwu dachen) - in the years 1906-1911, Acting Governor-General of Sichuan - in the years 1907-1908.

In 1908 (Guang 34/II/gengshen 4 [March 6, 1908]) appointed Amban. In Xuan 1 [1909], the Qing Court withdrew Zhao Erfeng from the post of Amban (Yang, l.c.), which in fact he had never assumed. According to WZ 1988 and WZ 1989, ll. cc., Zhao Erfeng held the nominal post of Amban until Xuan 3/III/xinyou 23 [Apr. 21, 1911], when he was appointed Governor-General of Sichuan.

AA. 1908 (Guang 34/VII/jimao 25 [July 23, 1908]), to assist Amban Lianyu (No. 169). — 1910 (Xuan 2/II/renxu 17 [Feb. 26, 1910]). Released on his own request. Left for Sichuan.

86 Zhang Yintang declined the nominal post of Assistant Amban shortly after his arrival in Tibet and his resignation was accepted. While in Tibet he carried out some needed reforms and made valuable suggestions (cf. Li Tieh-tseng, Tibet Today and Yesterday, pp. 247-248, Note 208). He, too, launched a strong anti-British propaganda and succeeded in having most of the Tibetan officials who had negotiated the Lhasa Convention of 1904, as well as Amban Youtai, who was in Lhasa when the treaty was concluded, dismissed, degraded, and arrested. Cf. Michael C. van Walt van Praag, The Status of Tibet, Boulder, Colorado, 1987, p. 40. Later, in 1907-8, he negotiated and signed on behalf of the Chinese Government the Tibet Trade Regulations of 1908 (for English text see, for example, C. Bell, Tibet Past and Present, Oxford, 1924, pp. 291-297). - Zhang Yintang left notes on his activities in Tibet under the title of Shi Zang jishi. See Deng 210.2. Another interesting document, a letter of the National Assembly of Tibet to Zhang Yintang, dated January 6, 1907, containing twenty-four paragraphs concerning the political conditions in Tibet and the policy of the Qing government in Tibet, has been publish and translated by R. E. Pubaev, Novyj tibetskij dokument iz kollekcii GomboZab Cybikova, Trudy Burjatskogo kompleksnogo naučno-issledovatel’skogo instituta SO AN SSSR (Ulan-Ude), vypusk 3, 1960, pp. 194-200.
