PREFACE

The "Guide to the Records in the National Archives of India, Part I (Introductory)" was published in 1959. It was then proposed to bring out the "Guide" in several parts, each covering some specified series or groups of records. Part II of the "Guide" covering the records of the Home Department/Ministry of Home Affairs (1748-1957) was brought out in cyclostyled form in 1977, and its "Preface" gave a brief background of the project.

Part III of the "Guide" has now been compiled. This part covers the records of the (A) Foreign Department (including its predecessor and successor bodies), (B) Persian Department, (C) Indian Overseas Department, (D) Commonwealth Relations Department (including its successor bodies), and (E) Political Department (including its successor bodies) from 1756 to 1954. The "Miscellaneous Records" of the Foreign Department, which fall outside the regular series, however, date back to the year 1630, and some records of the "Consulates", which did not originate in the Central Government Secretariat proper, cover the period up to 1960.

This "Guide" contains a narrative on organizational and functional changes in each Department. This is followed by a brief descriptive note on each Branch, Section or Record-Group, and an abstract-list giving necessary information on the records and their finding aids. A number of appendices showing the functions allotted to the Departments at different times, as well as some other useful information, have also been added. Part III of the "Guide", like its earlier Part II, is also being brought out in cyclostyled form, so as to make it available quickly for the use of the research scholars, members of the staff of the National Archives of India and others.

The compilation of this "Guide" was continued by the Guide Section of this office (set up on 24 June 1974) with one Archivist, and two Assistant Archivists. The Archivist, Shri M.R. Sen Gupta, has devoted himself to this exacting task with rare sincerity and exceptional ability, and none could have completed this Part III so quickly or competently. He was ably supported and assisted by Assistant Archivists Shri Doonger Singh and Shri D.K. Pant, and Shri V.N. Kohli also worked on this project for a few months. Shri S. Balasundaram, Transcriber, deserves all credit for cutting the stencils in record time. To all these colleagues I am most grateful for their devoted and competent labours. The Guide Section worked directly under my supervision, of which very little indeed was required by this hand picked team.

I hope all those interested in the holdings of the National Archives of India will find the compilation useful. We would be grateful for suggestions for improving the presentation, and for pointing out any mistake.

*The appellation "Branch" came to be designated as "Section" during the period from 1937 to 1944 in the Government of India. Some of the "Sections" in the External Affairs Department used to be named as "Branches" even after 1944. But for the sake of uniformity all the "Branches" after 1937 are mentioned as "Sections" in this Guide.

I. ORGANISATIONAL CHANGES

Factory Period

The seventeenth century was the age of largest establishment of the English East India Company's factories in the East. In India the Company had established some trading stations or "Factories", without any territorial sovereignty. The Factory Records detailed the proceedings of the Agents and Factors in their efforts to establish factories and promote trade (see Appendix—XXIV). The records in general consisted of two separate classes, viz. "Proceedings/Diaries" and "General Letters". The "Proceedings/Diaries" comprised entries of events, and the "General Letters" comprised the correspondence.

The inclusive years refer to the regular series, i.e., the "Main Series of Records" in the National Archives of India, which commence from the year 1756 (in the Secret/Select Committee) and continue upto 1953 (in the General I Section). A few files in the "Other Series/Groups of Records", also regular series are, however, available till 1960. The "Miscellaneous Records" fall outside the regular series of records.

The changes in nomenclature of the Foreign Department (including its predecessor and successor bodies) at different times are given at Appendix—XXVII.
with the Court of Directors, London. The eighteenth century was an age of transition for the Company. The trading body gradually transformed into a political power and established its own position by territorial acquisitions.

The Council of Fort William—Its Proceedings

Job Charnock, the Agent of the Company founded the city of Calcutta in 1690. Sir Charles Eyre, his son-in-law, became the first President and the Governor of Fort William, Calcutta on 26 May 1700. The Council for the management of the Company's affairs commenced recording the proceedings of its meetings from the year 1704. But the Council's proceedings prior to 1748 are not available in the National Archives of India.

Secret Committee

The conflict between Nawab Siraj-ud-daula of Bengal and the Council created a new situation for the English in Bengal. The Nawab captured Calcutta on 20 June 1756, and the members of the Council made their escape lower down the Hooghly river at Falta.

There the members appointed from themselves a Secret Committee with Roger Drake Junior, as President to conduct the political and military affairs of the Company in Bengal, and to maintain their secrecy. The sittings of the Secret Committee were held from 22 August to 10 December 1756.

Select Committee

Meanwhile the impending war with France led the Court of Directors to appoint a Select Committee to deal with matters concerning various Indian States, neighbouring powers, and other European Companies trading in India. A Select Committee was formed with Roger Drake as its President, which replaced the Falta Secret Committee.

The political eclipse of the English in Bengal was not prolonged. They recovered Calcutta on 2 January 1757, concluded a treaty with Siraj-ud-daulah on 9 February 1757, and defeated his army at the Battle of Plassey on 23 June 1757. The Company's position in Bengal, henceforth, underwent a rapid change. The Select Committee held its meetings from 21 February 1757 to 28 December 1762, when its functions were taken over by the Council of Fort William.

The functions of the Council so far were not organised into regular departments. A single Secretary's Office was amply sufficient for the transmission of all business of administration of the Council. The Council's proceedings did not bear the heading of any department except "Fort William", till December 1763. But when armies were raised, and political relations established with the Princely Indian States, it became necessary to establish new departments for the despatch of business. Moreover, due to political instability prevailing at that time, and the exigencies of war with Mir Kasim, the official work of the Council for the first time was divided between two distinct departments—"Public", and "Secret", in accordance with the resolution of the President-in-Council, dated 3 November 1763 (see Appendix-I). The resolution, however, was to take effect from 1 January 1764, but the records of the "Public" and "Secret" Departments were actually separated from 8 December 1763. This division of functions gave rise to two distinct series of records in the council, each bearing the name of the respective department. The Public Department continued to deal with all affairs, except diplomatic and political, i.e. business relating to shipping, revenue, fortifications, accounts, appointments of servants etc. and the Secret Department was entrusted with all military plans and operations, and matters relating to diplomatic and political. The "Public" and "Secret" Departments though distinct and separate, however, continued to be held by single Secretary—John Graham. The papers prior to 1764 of the undivided Council were retained in the custody of the Public Department. The records preserved in "Public" and "Secret" Departments, therefore, differed in their character. The former comprised history of the Company's early administration from the time when it enjoyed only a small territory for commercial purposes under the sanads from the Mughals. The latter on the other hand, comprised the political history of India from the critical period in the rise of Company's supremacy, when it became necessary to separate the Foreign administration from Home in 1764. Needless to say that the vast machinery of the present day Government of India, the Ministries and Departments, owe their origin to these "Public" and "Secret" Departments.

New Select Committee

The Secret Department operated for a little more than sixteen months, when its functions were taken over by a new Select Committee constituted on 7 May 1765 by Lord Clive on his arrival for the second time as the Governor of Bengal and the President of the Council. Clive's object of constituting the new Select Committee was in fact to centralise authority in the office of the Governor, and the Select Committee held full powers to regulate the political and military affairs of the Company in relation to the Indian States.

The East India Company secured the Diwani of the provinces of Bengal, Bihar and Orissa from the Mughal Emperor Shah Alam II in August 1765. A formal distribution of work between the Select Committee and the Council took place a year after when on 21 December 1766, Clive specified the powers exercisable by them. The Select Committee was vested with wider powers, i.e. with the conduct of political and military affairs, and collection of revenues arising from the grant of Diwani. The Council, on the other hand, was left with the management of trade, the zamindari of Calcutta, and the assigned districts of Burdwan, Midnapore and Chittagong.

Secret Department—Its Revival

The relative position of the Select Committee and the Council, however, changed and the powers of the former were curtailed after Clive left India in February 1767. The Secret Department in its period of interlude did not function from 7 May 1765 to 21 August 1768, and was revived by a resolution of the Council, dated 22 August 1768 under the charge of the Secretary in the Public Department. The Secret Department, henceforth, was concerned with political and military matters generally as opposed to trade, revenue etc., and the secret matters which did not come under the purview of the Select Committee. Under the provisions of the Regulating Act of 1773, Warren Hastings assumed the office of the first Governor General-in-Council of Fort William in Bengal on 20 October 1774, with four members in the Council. From that date the Select Committee was finally dissolved, and all its functions were taken over by the Secret Department. The Governor General-in-Council was empowered to control the foreign policy of the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay.

During the years that followed, the secret and political business in the Secret Department increased greatly, and it became difficult for one Secretary in the Public Department to bestow proper attention on his double duties both in the "Public" and "Secret" Departments. By a resolution of the Council, dated 23 September 1783, Warren Hastings appointed a Secretary in each department. William Bruere and Edward Hay were made the Secretary in the "Public" and "Secret" Departments respectively. Edward Hay took over the charge of the Secret Department on 3 December 1783.

Foreign Department

A week after, i.e. from 10 December 1783 the recording of consultations on Foreign nations Commenced in a separate "Foreign" series. A Foreign Department, therefore, came into existence from that date (also known as Secret and Foreign Department from 31 May 1786). But this Foreign Department was placed under the charge of the Secretary in the Secret Department, thus forming only a branch, or at best a subordinate department of the latter.

Secret and Political Department

The year 1786 saw certain important alterations in the Secret Department. The business in that department had increased tremendously. Edward Hay its Secretary, therefore, proposed that the functions of that department be divided into following four distinct departments:

(i) Secret and Political Department— to deal with all subjects of a political nature,

(ii) Secret and Military Department— to deal with all subjects of military affairs,

(iii) Secret and Foreign Department— to deal with all transactions with the European powers in India and other foreign nations, and

(iv) Secret Department of Reform— a temporary Department to deal with all matters relating to the general retrenchment of expenses, both civil and military.

This division took place with effect from 31 May 1786. Henceforth, the title of the "Secret" series was changed to "Secret and Political," a new series "Secret and Military" started, the existing "Foreign" series was renamed as "Secret and Foreign," and the "Secret Department of Inspection", which had come into existence twenty years earlier on 28 February 1766, was renamed as "Secret Department of Reform". All these series and their functions, except "Secret and Military", remained under the charge of the Secretary in the Secret Department (also known as Secret and Political Department).

Lord Cornwallis reorganised the Secretariat on the principle of concentrating power and responsibility in the hands of a single Secretary. A Secretary General was appointed on 25 July 1787 for "Public," "Secret," and "Revenue" Departments. An Assistant Secretary (subsequently denominated as Sub-Secretary from 31 January 1788) was attached to each of these three departments. Edward Hay was elevated to the position of Secretary General to the Government, and J. Lumsden was appointed as Assistant Secretary in the Secret Department.

Political Department

From 15 May 1789 the title "Secret" was dropped from the "Secret and Political," "Secret and Military," and "Secret and Foreign" series. Henceforth the series came to be known simply as "Political," "Military" and "Foreign." The respective series of records were retained under the Political Department (from 1790), Military Department (from 1786), and Foreign Department (from 1783). Thus a distinct Political Department came into existence on 15 May 1789, although its records were separated from the Secret Department from January 1790.

18. Home (Public), 'A', 10 April 1789, Nos.22-22A.
A little digression from the sequence of main events may not be out of place here. Firstly, a Secret and Separate Department had come into existence, after the Secret Department was created on 1 January 1764, although some records of the Council dating back to 27 April 1761 were retained under the former. The Secret and Separate Department was concerned with certain special questions which arose from time to time. From 1796 onwards this department acted generally as a kind of political intelligence bureau. By the very nature of functions assigned to this department, it did not meet regularly. Its records, therefore, do not form a continuous series. The Secret and Separate Department functioned as a subordinate department of the Secret Department till the former ceased to exist in March 1811.

Secondly, the growing responsibilities of the Company, and the various campaigns in which it had to take part, made it necessary to curtail superfluous expenses and bring about economy in administration. A Secret Department of Inspection was, therefore, set up on 28 February 1766 by a resolution of the Select Committee, to examine into the working of Government Offices, civil and military, and to make proper conduct of official business. Its records are not available before 1770. This department was known at different times by different names, viz., Committee of Inspection, Board of Inspection, Secret Department of Inspection, and finally Secret Department of Reform. Originally an adjunct body of the Public Department, its business was taken over by the Secret Department on 26 July 1784. The name of the Secret Department of Inspection was changed to Secret Department of Reform on 31 May 1786, and thereafter its work was transferred to Secret and Separate Department.

19. Select Committee Proceedings, 28 February 1766, p. 23.

Secret Department—Its Revival

A fresh series of "Secret Consultations" commenced from 20 January 1790. The title "Secret," which was dropped from the "Secret and Political" series from 15 May 1789, was revived and put in continuation of the records in the Secret Department. In reality, however, the "Secret" series was not absorbed with the "Political" series, but rather remained dormant, since it was often difficult to distinguish the "Political" from the "Secret" subjects. The Secret, Political and Foreign Departments continued to be administered by a single Sub-Secretary. The "Secret" series thus varied from time to time with different nomenclatures (see Appendix-XXVII).

Lord Wellesley introduced several important changes in the Secretariat on 29 October 1799. He appointed a Chief Secretary to the Government, and the Sub-Secretaries were replaced by a Secretary in each of the four existing departments, viz. (1) Public, (2) Secret, Political and Foreign, (3) Revenue and Judicial, and (4) Military. George Hilaro Barlow was appointed as the Chief Secretary, and Lieut. Colonel William Kirkpatrick was made the Secretary in the Secret, Political and Foreign Departments.

Separation of Government of India and Government of Bengal

In consequence of passing of the Charter Act, 1833, which became a law on 28 August 1833, and came into force from 22 April 1834, the Government of Bengal was separated from the Government of India. Lord William Bentinck, the Governor General of Fort William in Bengal became the Governor General of India. The Bengal Presidency was divided into the Presidency of Fort William and the Presidency of Agra. The Governor General-in-Council also acted as the Governor of the Presidency of Fort

William in Bengal from 16 June 1834 to 30 April 1854. On 14 November 1834, he took over his additional charge of the Government of Bengal. A week after, i.e. from 21 November 1834, separate series of proceedings commenced for both the Governments, from which date the term "Council" was replaced by the "Supreme Council of India." Amongst the changes made in the Secretariat, the "Secret", "Military" and "Law" Departments of the Government of Bengal were transferred to the Government of India. The remaining departments of both the Governments were grouped together under two Secretaries. Henry Thoby Prinsep took charge in each case of the General, Foreign and Financial Departments, while William Hay Macnaghten controlled the Secret, Political, Revenue, and Judicial Departments. It may be noted that the records created prior to 1834 were the records of the Supreme Government, because until that year there was no separate Government of Bengal Presidency. In 1834 the North-Western Provinces were covered into a separate Government, but the political relations of that Government still continued under the supervision of the Supreme Government.

24. In practice, however, the duties of the office of the Governor of Fort William in Bengal were performed by a Deputy Governor, appointed by the Charter Act of 1833, till under the provisions of the Government of India Act, 1853, Bengal was placed under the charge of a Lieutenant Governor. Frederick James Halliday was appointed Lieutenant Governor of Bengal on 28 April 1854, and he assumed office on 1 May 1854.

Foreign Department

The year 1843 provided a landmark in the organisational history of the Secretariat departments. The joint Secretariat arrangements for the Government of India and the Government of Bengal continued till April 1843. By a resolution, dated 29 April 1843, the Secretariat of the Government of India was completely separated from the Government of Bengal. On 1 May 1843 Lord Ellenborough reorganised the departments of the Government of Subsequently some records of the Government of Bengal, viz. Tenasserim and Martaban Papers (1830-1859), Bengal Political Paper (1834-1905), Bhutan, Sikkim and Tibet Papers (1845-1905), and Sambalpur Papers (1849-1862) were transferred to the Government of India (Foreign Department), when the business with which they dealt with was assigned to the latter Government. From 2 September 1843 the Political proceedings of the (i) Agent to the Governor General on the North-East Frontier, and (ii) Commissioners in the Tenasserim Provinces were conducted through the Foreign Department of the Government of India. However, the subjects relating to the (i) Nawabs of Murshidabad, Dacca and Mysore Princes, (ii) Agent on the South-West Frontier, (iii) Political Agent, Gossyal Hills, (iv) Commissioners on the North-East Frontier, and Tenasserim Provinces on Revenue, Judicial, and General affairs were conducted through the Government of Bengal (Foreign, Political, 2 September 1843, Nos. 4-5). It may be noted that the Revenue and Judicial Records of the Supreme Government till 1834 are retained in the State Archives, West Bengal, Calcutta.

India. A new Foreign Department came into existence to conduct external and diplomatic relations of the Government under the charge of a Secretary (see Appendix-II). J. Thomason was appointed Secretary in the Foreign Department. However, T.R. Davidson was to officiate as Home and Foreign Secretary until further orders. The existing Secret, Political and Foreign Departments were placed under the new Foreign Department as its branches.

The Government of India Act of 1858, changed the structure of the Supreme Government, and the control of Government was transferred from the East India Company to the British Crown. The "Secret" and "Political" series continued till 1859. From January to March 1860 the records of the Foreign Department were classified as "Foreign Consultations", and then from April 1860 to September 1861 as "Foreign Proceedings."

27. From 25 August 1842 the practice of recording proceedings in two separate (i) "Foreign" and (ii) "Political" series had ceased, and henceforth they were recorded in one "Political" series. The "Foreign" series of records till 24 August 1842 were retained under the newly created Foreign Department with the nomenclature - "Foreign Branch".

28. The system of recording of papers in the Government of India changed after 1859 (see Appendix-XXIII).
Creation of six New Branches

With the gradual expansion of British territory in India during the Company administration, the activities of Foreign Department had steadily increased. On 1 October 1861, Lord Canning re-organised the Foreign Department, and its functions were distributed among six newly created branches, viz., Judicial, Revenue, Finance, Military, Political, and General (see Appendix III). In order to bring uniformity in the administrative system throughout the British territory in India, the following matters hitherto treated in the Foreign Department were transferred to other departments:

1. Education (to Home Department on 4 October 1861);
2. Police (to Home Department on 11 March 1862);
3. Jails (to Home Department on 4 November 1862);
4. Customs, Salt, Opium, Stamps and Abkaree (excise) of the Punjab, Oudh, Central Provinces, and British-Burma (to Financial Department on 16 September 1864).

The following subjects relating to the Punjab, Oudh, Central Provinces, British Burma, and Coorg under the administrative control of the Foreign Department were made over to this newly created department:

- Land Revenue Settlement

- Meteorology
- Commerce and Trade

The remaining business relating to internal administration of these provinces in the like manner was transferred to the Home Department.

In 1876 Lord Lytton made a distribution of work in the Secretariat of the Government of India and issued a list of subjects for which the Foreign Department was responsible (see Appendix-IV).

Lord Ripon reorganised the recording of proceedings in the Foreign Department in 1882, and then in 1884. In September 1882, as an experimental measure, the functions of the Foreign Department were divided into four new branches, viz., Internal.

42. The "Secret Records" were introduced in Internal and External Branches from September 1882, Frontier Branch from September 1884, and General Branch from May 1905 (see Appendix-XXIII).
This arrangement, however, did not appear to be of practical use, because the bulk of the work was carried on under territorial headings. Therefore, in September 1884 the existing seven subject headings were abolished, and the functions of the Foreign Department were divided into four branches—Internal, External, Frontier and General (see Appendices V and XXIII).

In June 1893, the subjects on Statistics of Internal Trade, Forests, Archaeology, Archaeological Surveys and Conservation of Ancient Monuments, Patents, and Famine relating to Ajmer-Merwara were transferred from the Foreign to the Revenue and Agricultural Department. In 1898 Lord Elgin II made another distribution of work in the Secretariat of the Government of India. The subjects relating to Fine Arts, Gazetteers, and Ecclesiastical Service in Hyderabad Assigned Districts, British Baluchistan, and Ajmer-Merwara were transferred from the Foreign to the Home Department (for functions remained with the Foreign

branches were in existence at that time:—

(1) Frontier-A, (2) Frontier-B, (3) External-A,
(4) External-B, (5) Internal-A, (6) Internal-B,
(7) General, (8) Cypher, (9) Persian, and (10) Toshakhana. (For functions of the Foreign Department in 1905, see Appendix-VII).

In 1907 the Government of India decided for the gradual transfer of all non-political subjects from the Foreign Department to other concerned departments. In May 1912 all work connected with Imperial Service Order was transferred from the Home to the Foreign Department.

Foreign and Political Department

By 1913 the work in the Foreign Department had increased in proportion as India was becoming the pivot of the political system in Asia, and the British political rivals were drawing nearer. The Foreign Department was largely occupied with a variety of matters. Close on the heels the labour devolving upon the Foreign Department in connection with the Princely

Indian States was increasing both in complexity and volume. There had been no clear distinction between the foreign and political work in the department, and the hard-pressed Foreign Secretary combined the duties of adviser to the Viceroy, both in regard to external and frontier matters, as well as matters connected with the political control of the Princely Indian States. The Viceroy, who himself was the Member in charge of the Foreign Department, was not in favour of appointment of an additional Foreign or Political Member in the Council, since such measure, according to him, would affect the relations between the Viceroy and the Ruling Chiefs, and would not be popular with the latter. A proposal was accordingly submitted for the creation of a post of Political Secretary, who would devote his attention to questions connected with the relations between the Government of India and the Princely Indian States, leaving the external and frontier affairs to the Foreign Secretary. The proposal was sanctioned by the Secretary of State for India, and the scheme was brought into effect. From 1 January 1914, the name of Foreign Department was changed to Foreign and Political Department (see Appendix VIII). The Foreign and Political Department was reorganised into:

49. Foreign, Establishment-A, July 1913, No.21.
50. Foreign and Political Department, General-B, February 1914, Nos: 185-186.
(1) Foreign Division—controlling External-A, External-B, Frontier, General (Foreign Cases), Establishment-A (Foreign Cases), and Establishment-B (Foreign Cases) Branches, Toshakhana, and

(2) Political Division—controlling Internal-A, Internal-B, Internal-C, Cypher, General (Political Cases), Establishment-A (Political Cases), and Establishment-B (Political Cases).

On 5 July 1920 the business connected with Emigration hitherto administered in the Commerce Department was divided between that department and the Foreign and Political Department. The Foreign and Political Department was made responsible for emigration to Egypt, Palestine, Mesopotamia, and foreign countries other than Surinam, while the Commerce Department continued to deal with emigration except to Egypt, Palestine, Mesopotamia, and foreign countries other than Surinam.

In 1923 the Government of India on the recommendation of the Secretariat Procedure Committee introduced the procedure of subject-filing. In consequence, with effect from 3 April, 1923 the designations of the branches in the Foreign and Political Department were changed as follows:

52. As an experimental measure the "File System" was introduced first in the Commerce Department. The system was introduced in the Home Department in June 1921, and in 1922-23 in the Foreign and Political Department (see Appendix—XXIII).
Internal-A to Political, Internal-B to Internal, Establishment-A to Establishment, Establishment-B to Accounts, General-A to General, General-B to Honours, External-A to External, External-B to Mid-Asia, Frontier remained unchanged. (For the business conducted in the Foreign and Political Department in 1923, see Appendix-IX).

In the following years some existing branches were renamed, and new branches were created, e.g. Mid-Asia Branch was renamed as Near East Branch, and a new Foreign Office Branch was set up in 1925.

External Affairs Department

The Government of India Act, 1935 provided an important landmark in the constitutional development of the country, which necessitated several changes in the Central Government Secretariat. The most important of these changes was the splitting up of the Foreign and Political Department into two separate departments with effect from 1 April, 1937, viz., (i) External Affairs Department, and (ii) Political Department (see Appendix-X). The External Affairs Department took up all matters previously handled by the Foreign Secretary, while the Political Department took over the work connected with the exercise of functions of the Crown in its relations with the Princely Indian States. H.A.F. Metcalfe, and B.J. Glancy became the Foreign Secretary and Political Secretary respectively. The Sections which came under the purview of the External Affairs Department and Political Department are mentioned below:
External Affairs Department

Political Department

An Indians Overseas Department was formed on 14 October 1941 mainly to regulate the emigration and immigration between India and the British Commonwealth countries, and pilgrimage to Hedjaz (see Appendix-XI). The Indians Overseas Department was renamed as Commonwealth Relations Department on 30 March 1944 (see Appendix-XII). Some functions were redistributed amongst the (i) Home, (ii) External Affairs, and (iii) Commonwealth Relations Department on 26 August 1946 (see Appendix-XIII).

55. The Toshakhana remained under the combined control of both the departments, and finally came under the purview of Ministry of External Affairs in April, 1955.
Department/Ministry of External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations.

The Interim-Government in India was formed on 2 September 1946 (for the main headings of functions in the (i) External Affairs, (ii) Commonwealth Relations, and (iii) Political Departments, when the Interim-Government was formed, see Appendix-XIV). Jawaharlal Nehru, the Vice-President in the Interim-Government took over the charge of the External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations. Administrative convenience needed for a single department to conduct India’s foreign relations, whether with Commonwealth nations or with others. The Commonwealth Relations Department, which was then functioning as an independent department, therefore, combined with the External Affairs Department on 1 June 1947 forming into one Department of External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations (see Appendix-XV), with two distinct wings, viz., External Affairs Wing, and Commonwealth Relations Wing.

Before India achieved Independence most of the work relating to foreign policy was dealt with by the British Colonial or Commonwealth Office. In the domain of independent nations, India had no place and the question of having representation in these countries did not arise. The External Affairs Department had representatives in twelve countries, which included two Agencies-General in the U.S.A. and China, and Indian representatives attached to some British Missions (e.g. Persia, Afghanistan, and Tibet).

The Frontier Areas were also the concern of the External Affairs Department. Since the Member-in-Charge of the External Affairs was the Viceroy himself, the work relating to the Indians in foreign countries was entrusted to the Indians Overseas Department/Commonwealth Relations Department. There were under its control two High Commissioners in South Africa and Australia, and Agents or Representatives in Burma, Ceylon, Singapore and Malaya. The High Commissioner in London, whose main function at the time was to look after India's interests in the U.K., was under the control of the Commerce Department. During the period of Interim Government the number of representatives abroad raised to twenty-three.

58. Before World War I, Indian Stores Department used to conduct purchasing of operations in London for the Government of India. Later, on the recommendations of the Indian Industrial Commission, the Indian Stores Department was replaced by the High Commissioner for India (Industry and Labour File No. S-183(36), June 1923).
With the attainment of Independence on 15 August 1947, the British rule in India ended almost after two centuries, a new era commenced in the history of this country. The Indian Independence Act of 1947, while recognising the Independence of India, divided her into two dominions, viz., India and Pakistan. The records, however, were not partitioned between the two countries, and their integrity was preserved.

The External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations Department was designated as Ministry of External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations on 29 August 1947, and Jawaharlal Nehru, the first Prime Minister of free India, remained in charge of the portfolio.

Henceforth the period was marked by radical alteration and rapid pace of expansion of the Ministry. The Government of India established diplomatic representations abroad, the foreign representations in India correspondingly increased, and multifarious activities in the Secretariat generated new Sections. A post of Secretary General (Girija Shankar Bajpai) was created earlier on 27 June 1947. To meet the need of India's growing responsibilities.

in regard to foreign relations envisaged the incumbent of the post to act as executive head, and to co-ordinate and supervise the whole work of the Ministry. The Foreign Secretary (Secretary in the former External Affairs Department; K.P.S. Menon) was placed in charge of external relations in general, while the relations with the Commonwealth countries were entrusted to an Additional Secretary (S. Dutt), who became in course of time the Commonwealth Secretary. (For the functions in the External Affairs Wing and the Commonwealth Relations Wing in 1948 soon after Independence, see Appendix-XVI).

The Indian Foreign Service was created earlier as a specialised service for the conduct of the whole range of India's foreign relations, political, consular and commercial by a decision of the Cabinet of the Interim Government in October 1946.

61. But for a short break from June to August 1952, the post of Secretary General was in continuous existence. On 30 November 1964 the post was abolished with the retirement from service of M.J. Desai, its last incumbent.

62. A temporary post of Special Secretary was subsequently created. The post was abolished during the years 1952-53, and was revived again in 1956. In 1960 the work relating to Africa and West Asia, which had increased substantially, was also entrusted to the Special Secretary.

63. In 1956 the Indian Foreign Service (B) was formed as a Junior Service for manning posts abroad and at headquarters of a ministerial character, and some higher non-Ministerial posts not usually held by I.F.S. Officers.
An Economic Affairs Division was created in 1947. But three years later when the incumbent of its "Head" was transferred to other duties, the post was left unfilled as a part of economy drive. The division co-ordinated and dealt with the internal economic questions in the formulation of a closely integrated politico-economic policy.

A Legal Affairs Department was envisaged, and a beginning was made with the appointment of a Legal and Treaties Adviser on 28 October 1947, who held the office for a short period.

In order to secure more effective co-ordination with the foreign policy, the External Publicity work was transferred from the Ministry of Information and Broadcasting to this Ministry with the relevant complement of staff in June 1948. The External Publicity Division was responsible for directing India's foreign publicity effort, dissemination of publicity material, and all briefings at New Delhi. A number of publicity organisations were spread out in different foreign countries. The division worked in close co-ordination with various divisions of the Ministry and other concerned Ministries of the Government of India. Close co-ordination was maintained in particular with the All India Radio, more especially its External Services Division, and with the Press Information Bureau.

Ministry of External Affairs

On 16 March 1949, the Ministry of External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations was renamed as Ministry of External Affairs, and its two wings, viz., External Affairs Wing and Commonwealth Relations Wing merged (see Appendix-XVII). With effect from the same date the names of the following existing Territorial Sections were changed and their functions reallocated:

External Affairs Wing

Central Asian (CA) to China, Japan and Korea (CJK); Europe (Eur) to Europe I (Eur I); External (X) to Europe II (Eur II); Far East and America (FEA) to Indonesia, Australia and New Zealand (IANZ); and Arab World and Turkey (AWT) to Arab World and Turkey I (AWT I). Besides, "Cash" was renamed and "Administration III" from 2 August 1949, and consular work from the Territorial Sections was taken over by "Protocol II" from 15 November 1949.

Besides, "General" was renamed as "Administration II." The Siam, Indo-China and Malaya Section soon became defunct, and its subjects were transferred to other sections.

The Historical Division came into existence on 18 March 1949 with K. Zachariah as its first Director. The long term work of the division was to prepare monographs on subjects of lasting interest. The short term objective was the preparation of notes setting international events in their historical background. This division was to sketch the background of events and to provide the raw material on the basis of which a policy could be framed. The Historical Division continues to compile these analytical papers on international affairs as a part of its normal task of historical research. The Research and Intelligence Section working under the direction of this division brings out Monthly Summaries for official use. The Ministry's Library and the Record Management Section (the Records Cell) also function under the supervision of this division.

It was found necessary to bring together all consular work hitherto handled in different Territorial Sections in a self-contained Consular Division. As an experimental measure, a separate Consular Section was first formed in August 1951 by taking over the consular work from the Territorial Sections. Subsequently it was raised to a "Division." The Consular Division was responsible for guiding the Indian Missions abroad on consular work, and offered assistance and advice on consular matters to foreign Missions in India.

The Foreign Service Inspectorate was set up in May 1954 for the purpose of reviewing scales of allowances and amenities in the Missions abroad. An Organisation and Methods Division for office procedure was created in the Ministry in November 1954.

To sum up, the Ministry during the post-Independence period had been steadily growing and grew into one of the biggest Ministries in the set up of the Government of India, carrying its activities with countries all over the world, regardless of their economic or political system. Outside the country, Indian Embassies, High Commissions, Consulates and Legations etc. had been increasing. In 1948 soon after Independence the Secretariat of the Ministry was organised into 42 Sections (E.A. Wing: 31, and C.R. Wing: 11), which rose to 53 Sections (placed under 13 Divisions) in 1954.

The above narrative gives an account only of the broad organisational and functional changes in the Foreign Office for about two centuries, since the inception of the Secretariat/Select Committee in 1756 till the functioning of the Ministry of External Affairs in 1953, whose records are preserved in the National Archives of India. A large bulk of records of the Ministry for the post-Independence period are not yet transferred to this office, the narrative for this period is, therefore, based partly on records, and partly on published reports.

71. See Appendix -XIX. By 1979, when this "Guide" was published the Ministry of External Affairs was organised into about 90 Sections. Needless to say that the "Sections" are the main record-creating agencies of the Government.

The records of as many as 134 Branches, Sections and Groups of the Foreign Department (including the predecessor and successor bodies) are the holdings of the National Archives of India. A brief descriptive note followed by abstract-lists of records of each branch etc. is given in the following pages. The abstract-lists contain the names of the series of records, their inclusive years, bulk, the shelf-space (in linear metres) occupied by them, and other related information. The annual gaps in the series, if any, are indicated as far as possible. The combined volumes of the proceedings, files, indexes etc. are also mentioned for the benefit of the research workers.

The records, where necessary, are grouped broadly under three heads, viz., Company Period (i.e., pre-1860), Crown Period (i.e., 1860-1946), and Post-Independence Period (i.e., from 1947 onwards). The records under these three heads, however,

73. For the total bulk of records of the Foreign Department (including the predecessor and successor bodies) and the shelf-space occupied by them (in linear metres) (see Appendix XXVI).

74. The annual gaps in a particular series are sometimes covered by other series. For example, some gaps in the Proceedings are covered by their Original Consultations and vice-versa, some gaps in the Despatches to and from Court of Directors/Secretary of State for India (volumes) are covered by their unbound records and vice versa, some gaps in the 'A' Proceedings are covered by their 'B' Proceedings and vice versa, some gaps in the Indexes in a particular branch are covered by Decennial Indexes etc., and so on.
form continuous series without any break from one head to another. In quite a number of cases the Company Period documents are bound up with those of the Crown Period and vice versa, and retained under either head. This holds good for the records of the Crown and the Post-Independence Periods also.

The record-holdings of the Foreign Department (including its predecessor and successor bodies) in the National Archives of India, are arranged into three Sections; (i) Main Series of Records (1756-1953), which were created in the Supreme Government Secretariat proper, (ii) Other Series/Groups of Records (1825-1960), which were created within as well as outside the Supreme Government Secretariat, and (iii) Miscellaneous Records (1630-1953) a large collection of heterogeneous but valuable papers, which fall outside the regular series of records.
II. RECORDS SERIES AND THEIR FINDING AIDS

(i) Main Series of Records (1756-1953)

1. SECRET/SELECT COMMITTEE (1756-1762; 1766-1774)

The invasion of Calcutta on 16 June 1756 and its consequent capture by Nawab Siraj-ud-daulah created a new situation for the English in Bengal. Three days later the English Governor Roger Drake Junior, with most of the Members of the Council made their escape lower down the Hooghly river at Falta, and Fort William surrendered to the Nawab of Bengal on 20 June 1756.

At Falta the Council continued to meet on board the Phoenix Schooner. In order to maintain secrecy of their political and military affairs, they appointed from themselves a Secret Committee, consisting of Roger Drake Junior as President, William Watts, Major James Killpatrick, and John Zephaniah Holwell as Members. The first meeting of the Secret Committee was held on 22 August 1756, and the sittings continued till 10 December 1756, the last consultation bearing of the same date.

Two days later a despatch arrived from the Court of Directors, dated 11 February 1756, received at Calcutta on 12 December 1756. Due to impending war with France the Despatch authorised the English to appoint a Select Committee to transact affairs with the country Government, and neighbouring powers, including the French, the Dutch and other Europeans and to take such measures which would best conduce to the protection and preservation of the Company's estate, rights and privileges in Bengal. But the Committee was not to disburse any of the Company's treasure or cash without the concurrence of the majority of the Council in Bengal. A Select Committee was, therefore, formed consisting of Roger Drake as President, William Watts, Charles Manningham, Richard Becher, and Lieut-Colonel Stringer Lawrence, which replaced the Secret Committee.

After the return of the English to Calcutta on 2 January 1757, their position in Bengal underwent a rapid change. The Select Committee held its first meeting on 21 February 1757 and continued to operate till 28 December 1762, when its functions were taken over by the Council at Fort William.

A new Select Committee was constituted on 7 May 1765 with Lord Clive, the Governor, as its President, and William Bightwell Sumner, Brigadier General Carnac, Harry Verelst and Francis Sykes as Members, to restore peace and tranquillity into the Company's affairs in Bengal. Clive's object of constituting the new Select Committee was in fact to centralise authority in the office of the Governor. Clive asserted that all correspondence with the country powers should be carried on through him alone, and not in the name of all the sixteen Members of the Council.

On 21 December 1766, Clive specified the powers exercisable by the Select Committee as well as the Council. The Select Committee was vested with the conduct of military and political affairs, collection of revenues arising from the grant of Diwani. The Council on the other hand left with the management of trade, the zamindari of Calcutta, and the assigned districts of Burdwan, Midnapore and Chittagong.

The relative position of the Committee and the Council, however, changed on Clive's departure from India in February 1767. In 1768, the power of the Select Committee was further defined and curtailed. The Court of Directors empowered the Select Committee to carry on political negotiations subject to the

6. In a Despatch dated 23 March 1773, the Court of Directors ordered the appointment of a "Committee of Revenue" consisting of a President and four other Members. The Committee was entrusted with the entire management of Revenue affairs, which formed part of the duties of the Select Committee.

Council's final approval, and authorised the Governor singly to respond with the country governments within the knowledge of the Committee.

The Select Committee functioned till October 1774, when the Governor General and Council took over the entire civil and Military Government of Bengal under the Regulating Act of 1773. Thereafter the Select Committee was dissolved, and all its functions of political nature were henceforth considered by the Council in its Secret Department.

The Select Committee records, evidently, are not continuous. One group of records consists of the Falta Secret Committee (August–December 1756) and Select Committee (December 1756–December 1762). This group practically covers the period of the Seven Year's War, which left the French without any military settlement in India. Another group is from May 1765 to October

10. J. Talboys Wheeler in his _Memorandum on the Records in the Foreign Department_, Calcutta, 1864, p. 21, observes:
"The Secret Letters from the Select Committee to the Court of Directors, and those from Court of Directors to the Select Committee are of considerable value, both as literary productions and as historical materials. Those from the Select Committee are marked by a vigour of style, and by practical commonsense views, which seem to indicate that they were drafted by Clive's own hand; whilst those from Court of Directors contain expressions of opinion respecting the policy to be pursued in India towards the Native powers which are at variance with those of Clive, and may possibly owe their inspiration in some measure to Warren Hastings, who was in England at that time."
1774, when the Select Committee was dissolved. The Select Committee, therefore, did not exist from 29 December 1762 to 6 May 1765. The records of the Falta Secret Committee, though not strictly belonging to the Select Committee, are grouped with the latter.

These records furnish an excellent narrative of the political and military situation in India of that time. The Mughal King of Delhi, the Nawab Vazir of Oudh, the Rohillas, the Pathans, the Marathas, the Sikhs, the Jats, the Nizam of Hyderabad, the Nawab of the Carnatic, the Nawab of Bengal, Haider Ali of Mysore, Ahmad Shah Abdali, the invader, the rival European powers, viz., the French, the Dutch, the Portuguese, the Danes, the Swedes, as well as the vassals, dependants and officials of these potentates figure in some diplomatic transactions, or participate in eventful wars. The policies and intrigues of different parties, their constantly changing relations of friendship and hostility, how such surroundings necessarily influenced the position of the East India Company, or encouraged them in acquiring territorial possessions, and several material questions concerning their trade are noticed in these records. The documents also contain information about the early naval activities of the English in Asia, and afford a glimpse into the condition of Europe and the East generally so far as the same had a bearing on the Company's interest.
The following are a few concrete specimens of topics dealt with in these records:

(1) War declared between England and France; measures recommended by the Court of Directors for the defence of the Company's settlements in India (Letters from Court of Directors, Vol. 1756-71, pp. 5-6).

(2) Events leading to the end of Siraj-ud-daulah's rule and elevation of Mir Jafar as Nawab of Bengal (Cons. 1, 17, 19 and 27 May, 11 June, and 30 July 1757).

(3) Abdication of Mir Jafar and accession of Mir Kasim as the Nawab of Bengal (27 September, 26 October, and 19 November 1760).

(4) Grant of the Diwani of Bengal, Bihar, and Orissa to the Company, various farmans and agreements (10 August and 7 September 1765).

(5) Regulation for carrying on the salt-trade, and participation of the Company's servants in the same (3 September 1766).

(6) Review of the situation in India by Lord Clive prior to his departure for England (16 January 1767).

(7) Treaty between the Nizam of Hyderabad and the Company in conjunction with the Nawab of the Carnatic (27 April, 1768).

(8) Attempt of Mir Kasim, the ex-Nawab of Bengal to regain his authority with the help of the other princely powers (28 January, 16 February 1770).

(9) Terms of the peace concluded between the Marathas and the Rohillas (7 February 1771), and (10) Maritime and military intelligence at Mauritius (15 April 1772).

The following records of the Secret/Select Committee (Company's Period), and their finding aids are available in the National Archives of India:

Manuscript and typescript)

(i) The proceedings are recorded from 22 August 1756 to 28 December 1762, and then from 7 May 1765 to 6 October 1774.

(These include two bound copies in manuscript from 5 January to 28 December 1761, and one bound typed copy from 4 January to 21 December 1769).

(ii) The following typed copies were obtained in the early years of this century from the India Office, London to fill up the gaps:
- (a) 10 September 1765-16 August 1769 (one volume).
- (b) 25 September 1769-29 December 1770 (one volume), and
- (c) 16 January 1771-6 October 1774 (one volume).

(iv) Combined volumes; 1756-1759 (printed two copies), and 1772-1773 (manuscript).

(v) One volume of Select Committee Proceedings (incomplete) (4 January-7 November 1758) mostly relating to revenue matters is preserved in the State Archives, West Bengal, Calcutta. The volume covers some gaps in the Select Committee proceedings (1758) preserved in the National Archives of India. This volume was printed in extenso by W.K. Firminger in 1914.

* The Secret/Select Committee existed from 1756 to 1762, when its functions merged with those of the Fort William Council in Bengal. In 1765 a new Select Committee was constituted, which was dissolved in 1774. The Select Committee, therefore, did not exist for 16 months, and non-existence of records of the Committee from 29 December 1762 to 6 May 1765 should not, therefore, be considered as lacunae. But in the India Office Library and Records, London (List of Consultations, Proceedings & C, Bengal; 1704-1858, London, 1899, p. 359), the following two volumes include Select Committee Consultations for 1763-44:
Nos.P/A/5(8 December 1763-21 November 1764), and P/A/6(26 November 1764-27 December 1765).

William Foster, however, mentions that there is some confusion in the India Office List (William Foster, op.cit., p. 42): These records for 1763-44, although listed under the head "Select Committee Consultations are in fact, Secret Department Consultations, mixed up with Select Committee Consultations.

2. Original Consultations; (Unbound; manuscript and typescript in one carton box)

(i) Only a few documents are available. The earliest letter is dated 30 May 1762 (English translation from French—a typed copy). The first original letter is dated 26 May 1770.

(ii) Gaps: 1756–61, 1769, and 1771–72. (Some of the gaps are covered by their proceedings at item no. 1).

3. Typed copies of Proceedings (Unbound)

(i) These are typescripts of the faded documents at item no. 1 made in the National Archives of India.

4. Body Sheets (Unbound; manuscript)

(i) Only two Body Sheets, dated 18 February and 26 May 1770 are available.

(ii) The Body Sheets consist of summary of the minutes of the meetings of the Committee/Board, and differ from the proceedings in this respect that while the latter embody a full record of discussion, and reproduce in extenso every document received by or issued at the instance of the Committee/Board, the former confine themselves to a brief precis. These are useful... particularly when the proceedings are missing. The Body Sheets stop with 1857, the year which witnessed the discontinuance of the Consultation system. (Item Nos. 2-4 are retained in one carton box).

5. Letters Received
(copies) 1771-1772
(One volume; Manuscript)

The letters received by the Select Committee from various places in India are dated from 10 December 1771 to 24 November 1772.

6. Letters Issued
(copies) 1765-1768
(3 volumes; Manuscript and typescript)

(i) The letters issued by the Select Committee to various places in India are dated from 7 May 1765 to 23 December 1768. These include one volume of typescripts from 5 January to 29 December 1767.

(ii) Gap: 1766.

7. Letters from Court of Directors (a) 1756-1771
(2 volumes; Manuscript).

and (b) 1757-1767

(i) The Committee's/Board's correspondence with the authorities in London were maintained from the outset as a district series. Letters from and to Court of Directors have been printed in extenso till 1800 in the "Indian Records Series: Fort William India House Correspondence", and published by the National Archives of India. Each volume is edited by an eminent historian, and contains the text of correspondence together with a comprehensive introduction, copious notes, a select bibliography, and an exhaustive index, besides a number of illustrations. The correspondence gives a bird's eye view of the Company's activity in all its aspects. Volumes XIV-XVIII cover Foreign, Political and Secret Letters (see Appendix-XXII).

(ii) A number of Secret Letters from and to Court of Directors were misplaced among the records of the Public Department and press-listed accordingly. For convenience of references, these were summarised in an Appendix to the Press List of Records of the Select Committee (1756-74) (see item no.8 below). See also item nos.31-55. "Miscellaneous Records" of the Home Department (Part II of the "Guide to the Records in the National Archives of India").

8. Press-List of Records belonging to the Foreign Department of the Government of India, Series I: Select Committee (1756-74) (Published by the Imperial Record Department, Calcutta, 1917).

9. List of Foreign Department Records in the Imperial Record Office (1756-1859), Part I, Calcutta, 1906. (The printed list which is popularly known as Octavo list is without subject and for official use only).

10. Index to Foreign and Political Department Records, Volumes I and II, published by the National Archives of India in 1957 and 1968 respectively. The Secret/Select Committee records are indexed in Volume I. The two volumes cover the following records series:

A. Volume I (1756-80):
   (i) Select Committee (1756-62, 1765-74)
   (ii) Secret and Separate Branch (1761-62, 1773-74)
   (iii) Secret Branch (1763-65, 1768-80)
   (iv) Secret Department of Inspection (1770-1778)

B. Volume II (1781-83):
   (i) Secret Branch (1781-83)
   (ii) Foreign Branch (10 December-31 December 1783)
   (iii) Secret and Separate Branch (1781-83).

11. Parts or abstracts of the records of the Secret/Select Committee were printed in the following publications:
   (iii) W.K. Firminger: Proceedings of the Select Committee, 1758. Published by the Government of Bengal, Calcutta, 1914.
   (iv) G.W. Forrest: Bengal and Madras Papers, Vol. II (1670-1688) II (1688-1757), and III (1757-1785). Published by the Imperial Record Department, Calcutta, 1928. The documents were collected from the Madras Central Record Office, by G.W. Forrest about the year 1891. These were supplanted by extracts obtained from the records of the Bengal Government preserved at the India Office, London.* The earlier portion (1670-1744) recounted the growth of the British power in India, and the latter portion (1746-1785) threw added light to the career of Lord Clive in India. The entire collection was arranged chronologically, so far as possible, distributed in three volumes, and published by the Imperial Record Department, Calcutta, in 1928. The latter portion (1746-1785) was also press-listed and published by the Imperial Record Department, viz., Press List of Bengal and Madras Papers (1746-1785), Calcutta, 1902.

The three volumes mentioned above were also published earlier under the heading A Collection of Papers made from Bengal, Madras and India Office relating to the years 1671-1785, Calcutta, 1892-93.
2. SECRET DEPARTMENT/BRANCH (1763-1859)

The Council at Fort William, Calcutta, commenced recording regularly the proceedings of its meetings from the year 1704. No department had then come into existence, and the proceedings did not bear any heading except 'Fort William' till December 1763. Due to political instability prevailing at that time, and the exigencies of war with Mir Kasim, the functions of the Council were re-organised under two distinct departments 'Public' and 'Secret', in accordance with the resolution of the President-in-Council, dated 3 November 1763 (see Appendix-I). The resolution, however, was to take effect from 1 January 1764, but the records of the Public and Secret Departments were actually separated from 8 December 1763. This gave rise to two distinct series of records in the Council, each bearing the name of the respective department. The

1. The Secret Department was created on 1 January 1764. It became, what is popularly known, a Branch of the Foreign Department, when the latter came into existence on 1 May 1843.

2. The proceedings of the Council at Fort William, Calcutta from 1704 to 1747 are not available in the National Archives of India. (See Part II of the Guide to the Records in the National Archives of India, Public Branch: 1748-1950, Foot Note No. 7). However, efforts are being made to acquire their microfilms from the India Office Library and Records, London.

The proceedings of the Council from February 1748 till the separation of records of Public and Secret Departments on 8 December 1763, are preserved with the records of the Home Department (Public Branch) in the National Archives of India.
Secret Department was entrusted to deal with all military plans and operations, and matters relating to diplomatic and political.

The functions of the Secret Department were taken over by a Select Committee constituted by Lord Clive on 7 May 1765 on his arrival for a second time as the Governor of Bengal. A formal distribution of work between the Select Committee and the Council, however, took place in 1766, and the Select Committee was vested with very wide powers, and had exclusive control over all the Political and military affairs of the East India Company. But the powers of the Select Committee were curtailed after Clive left India in February 1767. By a resolution of 22 August 1768, the Council decided that on all occasions where secrecy was requisite, the Council formed itself into a Secret Department, to which the Select Committee was to report on all such matters of confidence. Thus a Secret Department was reconstituted on that date, under the charge of the Secretary to the Public Department. The Secret Department, henceforth, dealt with military affairs, transactions with country government, with Madras and Bombay, with British Residents, with foreign powers— in short, political matters generally.

as opposed to trade, revenue etc., and secret matters which did not come under the purview of the Select Committee. The Select Committee was finally dissolved in October 1774, and its functions were taken over by the Secret Department.

Due to increase in secret and political business, the Public and Secret Departments were entirely separated, when by a resolution of the Council on 23 September 1783, a Secretary to each department was appointed. William Bruce was appointed Secretary in the Public Department, and Edward Hay became the Secretary in the Secret Department. Hay took over the charge of the Secret Department on 3 December 1783.

The Secret Department was reorganised on 31 May 1786. The title of the "Secret" series was changed to "Secret and Political," a new series of "Secret and Military" started, and the existing "Foreign" series was renamed as "Secret and Foreign". These series dealt with the following subjects:

Secret and Political Series: All subjects of a political nature. All correspondence with the Presidents and Councils at other Presidencies on political subjects. All correspondence with the Agents or Residents at the courts of various Indian Princes, and every military operation or movement of troops, which was either ordered or undertaken. All Secret plans and views of other European nations in India.

Secret and Military Series: All personal applications from persons in the Military service, whether belonging to the King's troops or the Company's troops. All military affairs, except accounts and political matters. All correspondence with the Presidents and Councils at the other Presidencies on military matters.

Secret and Foreign Series: All transactions with European powers and other foreign nations. All correspondence with other Presidencies respecting them, except such matters as related to secret plans and views.

The "Secret" series, renamed as "Secret and Political" series continued to operate from 31 May 1786. On 15 May 1789 the title "Secret" dropped from the various series, and henceforth the series became simply "Political", "Military", and "Foreign". The "Secret and Political" was changed to "Political" consultations. The "Political" consultations from May to December 1789 are, however, retained in the Secret Department, while those from January 1790 onwards in the Political Department. The "Military" consultations from 31 May 1786 onwards are kept in the Military Department, while the "Foreign" consultations from 10 December 1783 onwards are preserved in the Foreign Department. The Political and Foreign Departments, however, remained under the charge of the Secretary to the Secret Department.

7. See Political Department/Branch (1790-1859).
8. See the records under the Military Department.
9. See Foreign Department/Branch (1783-1842).
A fresh series of "Secret" consultations started on 20 January 1790 and put in continuation of the records in the Secret Department. Thus the "Secret" series varied from time to time with different nomenclatures (see Appendix - XXVII).

The next major change took place, when on 1 May 1843 a new Foreign Department was created to conduct external and internal diplomatic relations of the Government of India (see Appendix - II). From the same date the Secret, Political and Foreign Departments (as they were then called) were placed under the new Foreign Department as its branches. The "Secret" series continued till 1859. From January to March 1860 the records in the Foreign Department were classified as "Foreign Consultations", and then from April 1860 to September 1861 as "Foreign Proceedings."

With effect from 1 October 1861 the functions of the Foreign Department were distributed into six branches, viz., Judicial, Revenue, Finance, Military, Political and General. New series of "Secret" proceedings again started in the Foreign Department from 1868, which continued till 1882.

Some of the subjects covered by the records in the Secret Department/Branch are:

* The annual gaps of the "Secret" series are 1766-67. But there are many more other gaps in the records for the subsequent years. For example, the proceedings for 1806 have the following gaps:

1 3-8,10-15,17-22,24-29,31 January, 1-5, 21-26, 28 February,

Similarly, the proceedings for some other years have also more or less identical numbers of lacunae.
The Government of India published
(i) Decennial Indexes of the proceedings of the Foreign Department from 1830 to 1839 (i.e. 1830-39, 1840-49, 1850-59 and 1860-69), and (ii) Combined Indexes from 1870 to 1889 (i.e. 1870-75, 1876-79, 1880-84 and 1885-89). The Decennial Indexes were printed during the years 1885 to 1892, and the Combined Indexes from 1880 to 1897. Annual Indexes (Printed) are available from 1868 (see also Appendix-XXIII).

5. Body Sheets 1765-1798
(10 volumes; manuscript)

(i) Originally the Body Sheets were mixed up with their Original Consultation. Later, these were sorted out from them, and preserved separately.

(ii) One volume containing (i) Body Sheets, and (ii) Draft Secret Proceedings (7 July 1778 to 15 December 1779) is also preserved. The rough notes of the drafts are not available in the regular series.

6. Body Sheets 1776-1859
(Unbound: manuscript in 31 carton boxes).
The volume contains drafts and orders recorded in the Council from December 1763 to December 1764, which are also available in the proceedings volumes.

These are copies of letters received and issued by Fort William (Secret Department) to different places like Arakan, Rangoon, Prince of Wales Island, Military Department, etc. Copies of these letters were also sent to the Secret Committee of the Court of Directors. Some lists of packets sent to the Court of Directors are also available.

(i) Some of the volumes have their duplicate copies.

(ii) The typescripts in the bound volume (15 April 1789 to 31 December 1840) were obtained from the India Office, London.

(iii) Gaps: 1836-55.

(24 volumes: manuscript)

The Summary Inventories (with subject) of the Secret proceedings are being compiled by the National Archives of India. The proceedings for the following years have been covered so far. The inventories for some of the years are not yet complete, and the compilation work is being continued. Each item mentioned below is bound in a separate volume:-
27. Portions of Secret Department records are also published in the following books:—

(i) House of Commons, London. Appendix to the Fifth Report from the Committee of Secrecy appointed to enquire into the causes of the war in the Carnatic and of the condition of the British possessions in those parts, London 1782.

(v) G. W. Forrest, Selections from Letters, Despatches and other State Papers preserved in the Foreign Department of the Government of India, 1772-85. 3 volumes, Calcutta, 1890 (Selections are not included from the records for 1777, and January-June 1780).
3. SECRET AND SEPARATE DEPARTMENT/BRANCH
(1761-1811)

The 'Public' and 'Secret' Departments, as noticed earlier, were created with effect from 1 January 1764 (see Appendix-I), and two distinct series of records of the Council came into existence. But some records of the Council dating from 27 April, 1761 on certain exceptional and secret questions, and generally disconnected with any of these departments, were dealt with separately. Thus a new series of records grew, which subsequently was named first as 'Separate', and then as 'Secret and Separate'.

The records of this series from 27 April 1761 to 27 September 1762 do not bear heading of any department. There is a break from 28 September 1762 to 24 January 1773. From 25, or precisely from 28 January 1773 to 10 October 1788, the heading of the series appears as "Separate". A gap follows from 11 October to 30 January 1788. From 31 January 1788, the nomenclature "Secret and Separate" appears in the series, which continues up to 15 March 1811.

In India Office Library and Records, London, the Secret and Separate series of records are available from 2 November 1797 to 22 March 1811, with breaks for the years 1798 and 1800-1808.

The records prior to 2 November 1797 are not available in that office, but a portion of Secret and Separate proceedings (15 May-8 December 1788) is on record in Volume No. 369 of the "Home Miscellaneous series" (1600-1900).

It, therefore, appears that the Secret and Separate Department came into existence after the Secret Department was created, although some records of earlier period of the Council are also retained in the former. The Secret and Separate Department functioned as a subordinate department or branch of the Secret Department till the former ceased to exist in March 1811.

The records in the Secret and Separate Department necessarily are not continuous. These mainly deal with confidential subjects. From 1796 onwards the department acted generally as a kind of political intelligence bureau, and many intelligence reports of that time are preserved in the series.

Some of the subjects covered by the records of this Department/Branch are:

1. Conduct of Ram Charan Roy, a political banian in the East India Company's service, who carried on criminal correspondence with Kamgar Khan against the English (1761-62).
2. Enquiry into the conduct of Raja Shitab Rai, Naib Diwan of Bihar, for alleged maladministration of revenues (1773).
3. Trial of Muhammad Riza Khan, Naib Diwan of Bengal, for alleged monopoly of grain during the famine of 1770, misappropriation of revenues and conspiracy (1773-74).
4. Capture of the

(6) Revision of the civil establishment and reduction of political charges at Princely courts (1788-90).

(9) Insurrection at Benares headed by Wazir Ali, the deposed Nawab of Oudh (1799).
(10) Diplomatic negotiations with Arabia, Persia, Turkey, Kabul, Sind, Ranjit Singh and other Princely powers; expeditions against the settlements of hostile European nations in India and the East, e.g., Macao, French Islands, Java, etc.; rising of Amir Khan of Tonk and the Pindari troubles (1808-11).

4. SECRET DEPARTMENT OF INSPECTION/REFORM (1770-1787)

The Secret Department of Inspection was known at different times by different names, viz., Committee of Inspection, Board of Inspection, Secret Department of Inspection, and Secret Department of Reform. The department was created under Lord Clive on 28 February 1766 by a resolution of the Select Committee to examine into the working of the various Government offices, civil and military, to make arrangements for proper conduct of official business, and to curtail superfluous and unnecessary expenditure. The department examined the working of some establishments, and brought about abolition and reduction of some offices.

The Committee/Board of Inspection was originally an adjunct of the Public Department. It was on 24 April 1772 that the President and Council first decided to meet as a Board of Inspection in their Public Department. The first meeting in this capacity took place on 27 April 1772.

The business of the Board of Inspection was transferred to the Secret Department from 26 July 1784, and henceforth the Board was known as the Secret Department of Inspection. The object of this transfer was perhaps to keep secret the retrenchment, which was then pending, and which might affect the interests of a considerable section in the Company's service. The retrenchment was followed by reform, and the name of the Secret Department of Inspection was changed to Secret Department of Reform from 31 May 1786. As originally proposed, the Members appointed to conduct business in this department did not meet regularly. The last minutes of the department are dated 20 February 1787, and thereafter its work was transferred to Secret and Separate Department.

The bulk of records of the Secret Department of Inspection, though small, affords an insight into the details of the East India Company's administration during the latter part of the eighteenth century, and illustrates handling of various delicate and intricate problems concerning public affairs. Although the Department was created in 1766, its original consultations are available only from 1770.

Some of the documents mentioned below give an outline of the subjects which came within the purview of this body:

audit of public accounts (1785). (6) Board's resolution regarding the curtailment of military charges (20 December 1784, No. 2). (7) Governor General's minute on the need for economy and the Board's resolution effecting retrenchments in respect of appointments and salaries (27 June 1785, No. 1). (8) Question of extending patronage to the Bank of Bengal (9) March 1786, No. 8). (9) Changes and reduction in the army (14 March 1786, Nos. 1-2). (10) Liquidation of the Company's bonded debts (1 August 1785, Nos. 1-2).

The following records of the Secret Department of Inspection/Reform (Company Period) are available in the National Archives of India. But no records of this series now exist in the India Office Library and Records, London:

William Foster writes that a register of about 1812 (Home Miscellaneous, Volume No. 718) in the India Office Library and Records, London, shows that there were then at the East India House the following series:

(i) Board of Inspection (17 April 1772-6 November 1780),
(ii) Secret Inspection (20 August 1782-14 March 1786),
(iii) Reform (22 March 1786-December 1787), and
(iv) Secret and Separate (31 January 1788-27 August 1790).

None of these can now be traced at the India Office Library and Records, though a number of extracts from the Board of Inspection (1772-1780) are included in Home Miscellaneous, Volume Nos. 357-359, and a portion of Secret and Separate Proceedings (15 May-8 December 1788) is on record in Volume No. 369 of the series preserved in that office. A Guide to the India Office Records, 1609-1858, by William Foster, London, 1919, p. 49 (Reprinted in 1966).

5. Index to Foreign and Political Department Records, Volumes I and II, published by the national Archives of India in 1957 and 1968 respectively. (The records of the Secret Department of Inspection are indexed in Volume I). The two volumes cover the following records series:

A. Volume I (1756-80)
(i) Select Committee (1756-62, 1765-74)
(ii) Secret and Separate Branch (1761-62, 1773-74),
(iii) Secret Branch (1763-65, 1768-80), and
(iv) Secret Department of Inspection (1770, 1778),

(Two consultations of 1770 and one of 1778 are the only documents of Secret Department of Inspection which are covered by this volume).

B. Volume II (1781-83)
(i) Secret Branch (1781-83),
(ii) Foreign Branch (10 December-31 December 1783), and
(iii) Secret and Separate Branch (1781-83).

The 'Public' and 'Secret' Department were entirely separated, when by a resolution of the Council of 23 September 1783 a Secretary to each Department was appointed. On 10 December 1783 the Council resolved to record its proceedings regarding foreign nations in a separate Foreign Department, under the charge of the Secretary in the Secret Department. The Secret Department was reorganised on 31 May 1786, and the "Foreign" series of records were renamed as "Secret and Foreign" series. The "Secret and Foreign" series dealt with the transactions with European powers, other foreign nations, and correspondence with other Presidencies, except such matters as related to secret plans and views. Thus from 31 May 1786, the Foreign Department was also known as Secret and Foreign Department, and from 15 May 1789 it was again called as Foreign Department.

1. The Foreign Department dealing with "Foreign" series of records was created in the Secret Department on 10 December 1783. The nomenclature of the Foreign Department was changed to Foreign Branch, when a new Foreign Department came into existence on 1 May 1843, and the former was placed under the latter.

2. See Secret Department/Branch (1763-1859).

3. Ibid.
From 1 January 1819 to 24 August 1842, the "Foreign" series was known as "General Department-Foreign Proceedings," as the Secretary in the General Department during this period, was responsible for the activities recorded in the series. After that date the "Foreign" series was discontinued, and its subjects were recorded in the "Political" series.

On 1 May 1843, a new Foreign Department was created, and the "Foreign" series of records from 10 December 1783 to 24 August 1842 were retained under that department with the nomenclature- Foreign Branch.

Some of the subjects covered by the records in the Foreign Department/Branch are:

(1) Re-establishment of the French factory at Balasore then under the Maratha Government (Con. 20 April 1784).
(2) Particulars of the French possessions seized by the English in Bengal (Con. 3 August 1784). 6. POLITICAL DEPARTMENT/BRANCH (1790-1859)

The Secret Department was reorganised on 31 May 1786, and the title of the "Secret" series was changed to "Secret and Political." On 15 May 1789, the "Secret and Political" series was changed to "Political" series, and a Political Department came into existence to deal with its subjects, under the charge of the Secretary in the Secret Department. The "Political" series from May to December 1789 are, however, retained in the Secret Department, while the series from January 1790 onwards in the Political Department. The "Political" series was concerned with the subjects usually of political nature, i.e., correspondence with the Presidents and Council at other Presidencies, the Agents or Residents at the courts of various India Princes etc. After 24 August 1842 the subjects dealt with in the "Foreign" series also merged with the "Political" series.

On 1 May 1843 a new Foreign Department was created, and the Political Department became a branch of the former.

Prior to 1 October 1861, the papers in the Foreign Department irrespective of subjects used to be recorded under one head, viz., "Foreign Proceedings". With the increase in work in the Foreign Department, this system of recording of papers underwent a change. From 1 October 1861, six distinct branches were created in the Foreign Department, viz., Judicial, Revenue, Finance, Military, Political, and General, and the relevant papers were dealt with in these branches. The Judicial Branch was confined to all questions relating to civil courts, criminal courts, police, cases relating to suppression of 'Thagi and Dakaiti' etc. Another Judicial Branch was also functioning in the Home Department. The Judicial Branch in the Foreign Department mainly dealt with the work relating to Judicial business, which fell outside the jurisdiction of the Home Department.

In the year 1862 all matters relating to Police and Jails in respect of the areas under the control of the Foreign Department were transferred to the Home Department. In 1867, all Judicial business not only of the British Non-Regulation Provinces, but also of those Princely States administered by the British Government (e.g., the Hyderabad Assigned Districts, and Mysore), was transferred to the Home Department.

In September 1882, the system of recording of papers was changed, and the Foreign Department was again divided into four branches, viz., Internal, External, Frontier, and General, but the former subject headings were not abolished until August 1884. From September 1882 to August 1884, the proceedings of each branch began to be recorded separately with the initial letter of the name of the branch added to the record headings mentioned above. Thus the Judicial Branch proceedings from September 1882 to August 1884 were recorded as 'A' Judicial-E (i.e., External), 'B' Judicial-E (i.e., External), 'A' Judicial-G (i.e., General), 'A' Judicial-I (i.e., Internal), and 'B' Judicial-I (i.e., Internal).

From 1 September 1894, the subject headings—Judicial, Revenue, Revenue-Irrigation, Finance, Military, and Political were abolished, and the records in the Foreign Department were henceforth classified simply as Internal, External, Frontier, and General, until further changes were effected.

11. REVENUE BRANCH (1861-1884)

It is noticed earlier that from 1 October 1861, six distinct branches were created in the Foreign Department, viz., Revenue, Judicial, Finance, Military, Political and General, and the relevant papers were dealt with in these branches. Before October 1861, all subjects were recorded in the "Foreign Proceedings". The Revenue Branch when created was confined to all questions relating to land tax, special cesses, sayer, transit duties, customs etc. A Revenue-Irrigation Branch was created in the Foreign Department in January 1870, and the irrigation work relating to land revenue was taken over by this branch.

Another Revenue Branch was also functioning in the Home Department, and its subjects were transferred to the Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce Department on the latter's formation on 6 June 1871. The subjects relating to land revenue and settlements etc., relating to the Punjab, Oudh, the Central Provinces, British Burma, and Coorg, which were being dealt with in the Foreign Department, were also transferred to the Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce Department from the same date. Henceforth the Revenue Branch in the Foreign Department mainly dealt with the work relating to revenue, which fell outside the jurisdiction of the Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce Department. For example, the business relating to land revenue in British Baluchistan, and Ajmer-Merwara remained under the purview of the Foreign Department.

In September 1882, the system of recording of papers was changed, and the Foreign Department was again divided into four branches, viz., Internal, External, Frontier, and General, but the former subject headings were not abolished until August 1884. From September 1882 to August 1884, the proceedings of each branch began to be recorded separately with the initial letter of the name of the branch added to the record headings mentioned above. Thus the Revenue Branch proceedings available from September 1882 to August 1884 were recorded as 'A' Revenue-E.

12. REVENUE-IRRIGATION BRANCH (1868-1884)

The irrigation work relating to land revenue was taken over from the Revenue Branch, and a separate Revenue-Irrigation Branch was created in the Foreign Department in January 1870 to deal with the subject.

In September 1882, the system of recording of papers was changed, and the Foreign Department was divided into four branches, viz., Internal, External, Frontier, and General, but "Revenue-Irrigation" heading was not abolished until August 1884.

From September 1882 to August 1884, the Revenue-Irrigation proceedings began to be recorded separately with the initial letter of the name of the branch added to the record headings mentioned above. Thus the Revenue-Irrigation Branch proceedings available from April 1883 to March 1884 were recorded as 'A' Revenue-Irrigation-I (i.e., Internal) proceedings.

From 1 September 1884, the subject heading 'Revenue-Irrigation' was abolished, and the records in the Foreign Department were henceforth classified simply as Internal, External, Frontier and General, until further changes were effected.

The Finance Branch, which was created on 1 October 1861 in the Foreign Department, was confined to all questions relating to the funds for support of Contingents, Pensions, Nizamat Funds, reports on the financial condition (as distinguished from administration) of Princely States and British Provinces, etc. Before October 1861, these subjects were recorded in the "Foreign Proceedings."

In September 1882, the system of recording of papers was changed, and the Foreign Department was divided into four branches, viz., Internal, External, Frontier, and General, but the former subject headings were not abolished until August 1884. 14. MILITARY BRANCH (1861-1884)

The Military Branch which came into existence on 1 October 1861 in the Foreign Department dealt with all questions relating to the organisation and discipline of the armed forces under the jurisdiction of that Department. Before October 1861 these subjects were recorded in the "Foreign Proceedings".

In September 1882, the system of recording of papers was changed, and the Foreign Department was divided into four branches, viz., Internal, External, Frontier, and General, but the former subject headings were not abolished until August 1884. From September 1882 to August 1884, the papers of each branch began to be recorded separately, with the initial letter of the name of the branch added to the record headings mentioned above. 15. POLITICAL BRANCH (1861-1884, 1923-1936)

A Political Department was created in the Secret Department on 15 May 1789, which became a Branch of the Foreign Department, when the latter came into existence on 1 May 1843. The Political Branch existed till December 1859. From January 1860 to September 1861, the records in the Foreign Department were classified as "Foreign Consultations/Proceedings." On 1 October 1861, six distinct branches were created in the Foreign Department, viz., Political, Judicial, Revenue, Finance, Military, and General, and the Political Branch was confined to all questions relating to the Princely States, except those entrusted to other branches.

In September 1882, the system of recording of papers was changed, and the Foreign Department was again divided into four branches, viz., Internal, External, Frontier, and General, but the former subject headings were not abolished until August 1884. From September 1882 to August 1884, the proceedings of each branch began to be recorded separately with the initial letter of

1. The Political Branch ceased to exist from 1 September 1884, and most of its functions were taken over by the Internal Branch. It was again revived on 3 April 1923. From 1 April 1937, it was placed under the newly created Political Department.

the name of the branch added to the record headings mentioned above. Thus the Political Branch proceedings from September 1882 to August 1884, were recorded as 'A' Political-E(i.e., External), 'B' Political-E(i.e., External), 'A' Political-G(i.e., General), 'B' Political-G(i.e., General), 'A' Political-I(i.e., Internal), and 'B' Political-I(i.e., Internal).

From 1 September 1884, the subject headings—Political, Judicial, Revenue, Revenue-Irrigation, Finance, and Military were abolished, and the records in the Foreign Department were, henceforth, classified simply as Internal, External, Frontier, and General.

The Political Branch, therefore, ceased to exist from 1 September 1884, and most of its functions were taken over by the Internal Branch. Some branches in the Foreign Department were reorganised in September 1902, and the Internal Branch was split up into two branches, viz., Internal-A and Internal-B.

With effect from 1 January 1914, the Foreign Department was designated as Foreign and Political Department. On 3 April 1923, the Internal-A was renamed as "Political Branch," and Internal-B

Political matters not specifically classified relating to Indian States. Employment in Indian States (excluding cases of military employment). Claims against Ruling Princes and Chiefs. Finances of and loans to Indian States. Births, deaths, education, training, marriages, successions, adoptions, installations, abdications, depositions, investitures, and powers of Ruling Princes and Chiefs. Nazrana and tribute. Famines, floods, mints, currency and coinage, in so far as they relate to territories other than those dealt with by Frontier, Near East, and External Branches, and Foreign Service (excluding military appointments).

On 1 April 1937, the Foreign and Political Department was bifurcated into two separate departments, viz., (i) External Affairs Department, and (ii) Political Department, and the Political Branch was placed under the latter.

The following records of the Political Branch (Crown Period) are available. The records are listed below as they are classified and arranged, i.e., (i) October 1861-August 1882, (ii) September 1882-August 1884, and (iii) 1923-1936. 16. GENERAL BRANCH (INCLUDING GENERAL I AND II SECTIONS) (1861-1953)

It is already noticed that from 1 October 1861 six distinct branches were created in the Foreign Department, viz., Judicial, Revenue, Finance, Military, Political, and General. The General Branch dealt with the questions relating to leave (except leave of military officers out of India), the Clergy, the Medical Department etc., and generally all correspondence (except those allotted to the other Branches mentioned above).

In September 1882, the system of recording of papers was again changed, and the Foreign Department was divided into four branches, viz., Internal, External, Frontier, and General, but the former subject headings were not abolished until August 1884. For these two years the proceedings of each branch began to be recorded separately with the initial letter of the name of the branch added to the record headings mentioned above. The General Branch proceedings from September 1862 to August 1884 were recorded as A-General-E (i.e., External), B-General-E (i.e., External), A-General-G (i.e., General), B-General-G (i.e., General), A-General-I (i.e., Internal), B-General-I (i.e., Internal) etc. With the abolition of the subject headings from

1. See Appendix -III.

2. Ibid.
1 September 1884 the papers were recorded, as previously, as or 'B' proceedings within each branch, till the filing system introduced in 1922-23.

The General Branch again underwent changes, and in 1903 it dealt with the following subjects:-

Appointments, books and maps, cypher codes, Foreign Consuls, Foreign Office, Foreign Service, leave and furlough, pay and allowances, political pensions, residency buildings, returns and reports, service pensions, Star of India, Toshakhana, and other miscellaneous matters (which included Crown of India, Honours and Decorations etc).

On 1 January 1914, the Foreign Department was designated as Foreign and Political Department, and the General Branch was made responsible for all matters relating to:-

Political pensions (excluding the Afghan refugees, but including the allowances to State prisoners), Orders in Council, Commercial Treaties and Conventions, preparation and supply of official publications and maps, returns and reports, import and export licences for arms, Arms Act, jails, convicts, sanitation, pilgrim traffic, plague and cholera, foreign settlements, passports, Foreign Consuls, exhibitions, conferences and congresses and other miscellaneous matters.

With the increase in the volume of work in the General Branch it was bifurcated into two branches, viz., General-A and General-B, and the items of work relating to the 'Honours' were allotted to the latter. On 3 April 1923 the General-A Branch was renamed as General Branch, and the General-B as Honours Branch. From 10 March 1930 the subject relating to 'Examinations' was transferred from the External Branch to the General Branch. The Honours Branch took over the following functions from the General Branch:

3. Foreign Department, General-B, February 1904, No. 133, pp. 64-65.

- Birthday greeting messages to the King and others, New Year and Christmas messages, condolence messages, and flags.

On 1 April 1937 the Foreign and Political Department was split up into two separate departments, viz., (i) External Affairs Department, and (ii) Political Department, and the items of work in the General Branch were also bifurcated into these two departments. The following subjects were allotted to the General Branch in the External Affairs Department:

5. Foreign and Political Department File No. 577-G/1922, p. 53. See also Honours Branch (1923-1937).

6. Foreign and Political Department File No. 12-F.0./1930, p. 11.

8. See also General Section (1937-1949) in the Political Department/Ministry of States.

9. External Affairs Department File Nos. (i) 80-F.0./1937, p. 29, and (ii) 66-F.0./1940, p. 28.

The General Branch also dealt with the following miscellaneous subjects, provided they did not fall under the headings of any other branch, and were ordinarily of a general type:

Returns and reports, maps, petitions, jails and convicts, plague, cholera, sanitation, excise, opium, salt, customs, aviation, posts and telegraphs, irrigation, forests, geology, mines and mining concessions, industrial concerns, education, agriculture, archaeology, epigraphy, zoology, Kharitas, stores, holidays, Government of India Act and rules made thereunder, etc. (From 4 February 1946 the subjects relating to Passports, Visas, and Nationality, which were also dealt with by the General Branch, were transferred to the newly created Passport Section).

Due to pressure of work, the General Branch was split up into two Sections on 7 June 1948, viz., General I, and General II. The items of work distributed to these two Sections are noted below:

General I Section: Purchase and supply of books, typewriters and stationery to Consular posts abroad, National Flag, Air and Sea passages and other travel arrangements. Purchase or renting of Embassies, Consular offices, Customs, Aviation, Letters of introduction, etc.

General II Section: Messages of congratulations and condolences, Gifts or presents received or issued on behalf of the Government of India. Dress Regulations, Arms Act, Return of state prisoners, Declarations or eligibility for employment under the Government of India in respect of the subjects of Indian States, Foreign Office circulars, Rules and regulations, Amendments and corrigenda, Custody of, and access to Government Records, Treasure Trove, Census, Ecclesiastical, Petitions for mercy and correspondence for death sentences. Other miscellaneous subjects dealt with by the General Branch in 1937, noted above, were also allotted to the General II Section.

From 2 September 1948 the supply of publicity and cultural materials to foreign posts of the Ministry of External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, such as supply of books, newspapers, film projectors, gramophone records, paintings etc., was taken over by the External Publicity Section from the General I Section. In return, the General I Section took over the matters relating to supply of stationery, books of references, furnitures etc. to the Information Offices.

On 16 March 1949 the Ministry of External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations was renamed as Ministry of External Affairs. By an order dated 29 March 1949 the General I Section took over the co-ordination work connected with the Constituent Assembly of India (Legislative), while the work connected with the supply of stationery, books, publications to Missions overseas was transferred to the Administration II Section.

SECRET RECORDS
(1905-1937)

Prior to 1 May 1905 the Secret papers of the General Branch were recorded with those of the Internal and other Branches. This practice was discontinued, and the General Branch commenced recording its Secret papers under its own heading from 1 May 1905.

The Confidential 'A' and 'B' Proceedings (1891-1921) (Nos. 21-22) listed below, however, were not originally recorded with the Secret papers. But subsequently they were placed and retained along with these Secret records.

The documents suggest that the General Branch recorded some of its Secret papers under its own head even before 1905. As no other 'Secret' paper is available in the General Branch before 1905, it appears that the practice was in vogue only for a short period. As already stated above the General Branch commenced recording its regular series of 'Secret' papers under its own head from 1 May 1905.

17. ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH BRANCH (1867-1870)

Before the year 1856 the subject relating to Electric Telegraph was dealt with in the Public Branch of the Home Department. In 1856 distinct Electric Telegraph Branch was created in that department to deal with the subject. In August 1867, all business connected with the Electric Telegraph was transferred from the Home Department to the Foreign Department. A separate Electric Telegraph Branch was created in the Foreign Department to deal with its business. The subject Electric Telegraph remained in the Foreign Department for a little less than three years, when on 30 April 1870 it was transferred to the Public Works Department.

The records relating to "Telegraphs" in the Foreign Office, Simla, were made over to the Public Works Department, "the remaining portion being transferred at the Presidency". On 1 March 1905, the Department of Commerce and Industry was created, and the subjects relating to (i) Post Office (in Finance and Commerce Department), and (ii) Telegraphs (in Public Works Department) were transferred to this newly created department.

On 1 April 1914, "Post Office" and "Telegraphs" were amalgamated under a single Director General of Posts and Telegraphs. On 3 August 1921, the work relating to "Posts and Telegraphs" was transferred from the Commerce Department to the Public Works Department, and on 16 April 1923, it was again transferred to the administrative control of the Department of Industries and Labour, and a separate Branch (viz., Posts and Telegraph Branch) was formed to deal with the subject. On 8 November 1937, the Department of Industries and Labour was bifurcated into two departments, viz., (i) Department of Labour, and (ii) Department of Communications, and "Posts and Telegraphs" was made over to the latter.

During the Second World War, in July 1942, the Department of Communications was further bifurcated into two departments, viz,

5. Home (Public), 'A', April 1905, Nos. 151-157, p. 23, Statement A. The records of the Post Office Branch (1855-1867) are preserved in the Home Department. In 1867, the work relating to Post Office was transferred to the Financial Department. In 1879 the Financial Department was designated as Finance and Commerce Department.

(i) Department of War Transport, and (ii) Department of Posts and Air, and "Posts and Telegraphs" came under the latter. In 1948, the Department of Posts and Air was reorganised and redesignated as the Department of Communications.

The following records of the Electric Telegraph Branch (Crown Period) in the Foreign Department are available. For the records relating to Posts and Telegraphs before 1867, and after 1870, see the relevant branches of the other departments concerned.

18-22. SECRET PROCEEDINGS (1868-1882)

Prior to January 1860 the regular series of records in the Foreign Department were classified as (i) Foreign Consultations, (ii) Political Consultations, and (iii) Secret Consultations. The Secret Consultations were discontinued in 1859. However, the 'Secret Proceedings' were revived from 1868 and classified under the following different heads:

The above mentioned five heads of Secret Proceedings recorded from 1868 to August 1882 deal mostly with the foreign affairs relating to Afghanistan, Central Asia and Russia.

In September 1882 the "Secret Records" were introduced in the existing branches of the Foreign Department. They were inducted in Internal and External Branches from 1882, Frontier Branch from 1884, General Branch from 1905, and Reforms Branch from 1920. Henceforth both the non-secret and secret proceedings were recorded separately under the heads of these branches. It may be noted that although the non-secret proceedings of the General Branch were recorded under its own head, its secret proceedings were recorded

1. See Appendix-XXIII. For Secret Consultations till 1859, see under Secret Department/Branch (1763-1859).
2. See Appendix-XXIII.
in the Internal Branch until 1 May 1905. The subjects (non-secret and secret) dealt with in the Frontier Branch were also recorded in the External Branch till the end of August 1864.

In course of time more branches were set up. Some of the branches created their non-secret and secret records simultaneously, but preserved them separately, e.g., Establishment Branch, Reforms Branch. Some treated their entire series as 'secret', e.g., Central Cypher Bureau, War Branch, Special Bureau of Information, Frontier Watch and Ward Committee. Many others retained their non-secret and secret files together, e.g., Political Branch, Near East Branch, Foreign Office Branch. Subsequently, all the secret records now in the custody of the National Archives of India were declassified and downgraded.

For Secret Despatches from and to Secretary of State for India, see under "Secret Despatches (1860-1901)".

The Secret Proceedings under the five heads: (i) Secret Home Proceedings, (ii) Secret India Proceedings, (iii) Secret Miscellaneous Proceedings, (iv) Secret Proceedings, and (v) Secret Supplementary Proceedings, are listed below separately:

4. See Appendix-XXIII.
18. SECRET HOME (S.H.) PROCEEDINGS (1868-1871)

The Secret Despatches from the Secretary of State for India addressed to the Foreign Department of the Government of India are retained as a separate series. These despatches were sent from the "Home Government" in England, and were, therefore, named as "Secret Home Proceedings", to distinguish from the "Secret India Proceedings". The Secret Home Proceedings consist of printed Secret Despatches from the Secretary of State for India on various subjects without any proceedings.

These heads were renamed as "Secret Proceedings" from July 1871 to August 1882. The word "Cypher" denotes secret means of communication, or writing in secret language. A Cypher Branch was set up in the Foreign Department in 1904 for communication through secret codes within and outside India, and for receipt and disposal of such telegrams. Earlier the subject used to be dealt with in the General Branch. In 1925 the Cypher Branch was renamed as Cypher Bureau and in 1930 it was designated as Central Cypher Bureau.

The 'filing system' was adopted by the Government of India from the year 1923, but the same was introduced by the Central Cypher Bureau in 1933. Before 1933, the papers in the Central Cypher Bureau are recorded as 'Proceedings'.

During the World War II, communications by sea and air became slow, irregular and precarious. The state of affairs naturally led to greater use of telegraph, and as almost all wartime telegrams were of secret nature, the greater was the use of cypher system. Besides, the Central Cypher Bureau catered to the needs of whole of Government of India.

2. Ibid.
The following 'Confidential', and 'Deposit' proceedings and files of the Cypher Bureau, which are available, relate mainly to receipt, issue, and safe custody of cypher codes. The records from 1904 to 1907, and from 1940 onwards are not available.

The Establishment Branch was created in September 1908 to deal with the matters relating to establishments and accounts in the Foreign Department. It was soon divided into two branches, viz., Establishment-A and Establishment-B, and the following items of work were allotted to them:

Establishment-A Branch: Matters relating to political and medical, and other miscellaneous establishments, appointments, Foreign Service, employment of Europeans in Indian States, etc.

Establishment-B Branch: Matters relating to budgets, public works, service pensions, equipments, languages and language examinations, local corps (exclusive of matters of the constitution, rank and file of such corps), etc.

On 1 January 1914 the Foreign Department was designated as Foreign and Political Department, and the Establishment-A and -B Branches continued to function in that department. The Establishment-A and -B Branches were subsequently combined into one. The 'Accounts' portion of the work was separated from the Establishment Branch in 1922. However, the files relating to 'Accounts' for the years 1922-1923 are preserved. Along with the records of the Establishment Branch, the labels on the boards of the bundles indicating them as Establishment-Accounts Branch. From the year 1924, the files relating to Establishment and Accounts are kept separated, although the two branches remained interlinked with each other.

On 1 April 1937, the Foreign and Political Department was bifurcated into two separate departments, viz., (i) External Affairs Department, and (ii) Political Department, and the function of the Establishment Branch were also bifurcated under these two separate departments.

On 1 April 1940, the Establishment portion of the Establishment/Accounts Section was separated in the External Affairs Department. As the work-load in the Establishment Branch increased, it was again divided into two Sections on 18 March 1947, viz., Establishment I, and Establishment II, and the following subjects were allotted to them:

4. See also Establishment Section (1937-1949) in the Political Department/Ministry of States.
5. External Affairs Department, File No. 66-F.U./1940, p. 46
Establishment I Section: Appointments, pay and allowances, conditions of service, leave, pensions, gratuities of officers (excluding Indian Foreign Service) and establishments serving under the External Affairs Department in North-West Frontier, Baluchistan, Afghanistan, Gilgit, Gilgit Corps of Scouts, Zheb Militia, Chagai Levy Corps, Pishin Scouts, Khyber Rifles, Chitral State Scouts, Frontier Irregular Corps, North East Frontier, Assam, and Assam Rifles.

Establishment II Section: Appointments, pay and allowances, conditions of service, leave, pensions, gratuities of officers (excluding Indian Foreign Service) and establishments serving under the External Affairs Department in U.S.A., China, Persian Gulf, Iran, Jedda, Iraq, Kamaran, Nepal, Sikkim, Bhutan, Tibet, Pondicherry, Nova Goa, Siam, Indo-China, and Kashgar.

On 1 June 1947 the Commonwealth Relations Department was combined with the External Affairs Department, forming External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations Department, redesignated on 29 August 1947 as Ministry of External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations. Soon after Independence, some of the items of work in the Establishment I and II Sections were interchanged.

On 16 March 1949 the Ministry of External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations was designated as the Ministry of External Affairs, and the two wings, viz., (i) External Affairs Wing and (ii) Commonwealth Relations Wing were amalgamated. From the same date the Overseas IV Section (created in November 1946 in the erstwhile Commonwealth Relations Department to deal with the work relating to budget, establishments and accounts of the offices of the Indian Representatives abroad) was redesignated as the Establishment III Section, and was entrusted with all administrative matters concerning the staff serving abroad in all Commonwealth countries and Burma. (The budget and accounts portion of the work of the Overseas IV Section was transferred to the Accounts Section, and the work connected with passages, supply of books and publications etc., was transferred to the General Section.) The Establishment III Section, however, was short-lived, and it was designated as Foreign Service Personnel II (FSP II) Section. The work relating to non-gazetted establishment in the Establishment III Section was made over to Establishment I and II Sections.

29. WAR BRANCH (1914-1920)

The First World War which commenced on 28 July 1914, led to great increase of work in the various departments of the Government of India. A War Branch was created in the same year in the Foreign and Political Department to deal with the following subjects:

- Information regarding outbreak of war. Prohibition of export during the war. Arrangements for despatch of telegraphic messages. Requisition of vessels for war purposes. Disarmaments of Germans and Austrians in India and cancellation of all licences held by them.
- Affairs in Turkey, Abyssinia, Persia, Aden and in other countries. Anglo-Persian Oil Company.
- Patrolling of seas by ships. Prisoners of War.
- Contribution to the British Red Cross Fund. Peace Conference, and other allied topics.

The First World War lasted a little more than 4 years and 3 months, and ended on 11 November 1918. But the records of the War Branch are available till March 1919 when the branch ceased to exist.

During the days of Russian Revolution, a Special Bureau of Information (Secret) was set up in the Foreign and Political Department to check the possible repercussions of the revolution on the Indian scene. The Government initially took measures to suppress the news on the Bolshevik Proclamation. The first document in this group of papers is a telegram from the Secretary of State for India, dated 6 December 1917. A few Intelligence Weekly Summaries only are now available in this group. For more papers on the subject, see the records of other branches in the Foreign and Political Department.

The Government of India Act of 1919 had granted instalment of constitutional reforms to India. To deal with the matters relating to the reforms, an independent, "Reforms Office" was created on 13 December 1919. This "Reforms Office" was not placed under any other controlling Department. But to deal with the work relating to reforms, and implementing the policy of Central Government's relations with the Indian States and the Chamber of Princes, a Reforms Branch was created on 2 February 1920 in the Foreign and Political Department. The Reforms Branch was concerned with all matters connected with the reforms in the Indian States (except which came under the headings of Establishment A and B Branches). The Reforms Branch was abolished in 1922, as a result of the recommendations of the Retrenchment Committee (Inchcape Committee), that the establishment should be reduced to its pre-war strength. The work in the Reforms Branch was, therefore, transferred to the Political and Internal Branches.

1. Legislative Department, B, January 1920, No. 97; Reforms Office, General, A, February 1920, Nos. 27-52. See also the records of the Reforms Office (1919-1948) preserved as a separate series in the National Archives of India.

2. Foreign and Political Department, General-B, April 1920, Nos. 8-11, p. 5.

3. Foreign and Political Department, File No. 22-F.O./1928 (Office Order, dated 29 March 1928).
The Reforms Branch was revived again on 2 April 1928 taking over the following functions from the Political and Internal Branches to afford relief to them:

1. From the Political Branch:
   Matters connected with the reforms, the Chamber of Princes and the Standing Committee. Acquisition of property in British India by Ruling Princes and Chiefs. Visits of British officials, Europeans and others to Indian States. Employment in Indian States (excluding cases of military employment).

2. From the Internal Branch:

The Reforms Branch existed till 1934, when its functions were again redistributed to Political and Internal Branches.

The subject relating to honours and awards was previously dealt with by the General Branch in the Foreign Department. This subject was also being handled by the Home Department (Public, Political, and Police Branches), as well as Office of the Private Secretary to Viceroy. The normal procedure was that the Viceroy in his individual and personal capacity as representative of the British Crown used to receive recommendations for conferment of honours to the British subjects in India and in Princely Indian States from the Governors, Lieutenant-Governors, Chief Commissioners of the Provinces, Members of the Viceroy's Executive Council, the Foreign and Political Department, Home Department, etc. The Viceroy, in turn, used to forward his recommendations to the Secretary of State for India for approval of the British Crown.

On 1 January 1914, the Foreign Department was designated as Foreign and Political Department, and the 'Honours' work remained with the General Branch. With the increase in the volume of work in the General Branch, it was bifurcated into two branches, viz., General-A and General-B, and the 'Honours' work was allotted to the latter. On 3 April 1923, the General-A Branch was renamed 2 as General Branch, and the General-B Branch as Honours Branch. 3

The main items of work, which were allotted to the Honours Branch are noted below:

- Armorial bearings, British, Indian and Foreign Orders.

On 1 April 1937 the Foreign and Political Department was split up into two separate departments, viz., (i) External Affairs Department, and (ii) Political Department. The Honours Branch ceased to exist. The honours and titles portion of the work of the Honours Branch was transferred to the Office of the Private Secretary to Viceroy. The remaining items of work were made over to the General Section in the Political Department, as noted below:

- Armorial bearings. Scrutiny of recommendations for Honours received from Political Officers. Bestowal of Foreign Orders on Ruling Princes and their subjects, and British Indian subjects. Grant and enhancement of

The Mid-Asia Branch, which was created on 3 April 1923 in the Foreign and Political Department was redesignated as Near East Branch on 1 May 1925. The following subjects were allotted to this branch:

- Matters relating to Egypt, Somali Coast, Red Sea, Turkey, Palestine, Aden and the Hinterland, Arabia, Iraq, Persia and the Persian Gulf, except which appertained to other Branches. Matters relating to Iran, Afghan refugees, Kamaran and Baluchistan were subsequently added.

The Foreign and Political Department was split up into two separate departments, viz., (i) External Affairs Department, and (ii) Political Department on 1 April 1937, and the Near East Branch was placed under the former.

35. TOSHAKHANA (1925-1946)

'Toshakhana' (i.e., Store House) was created as a separate branch in the Foreign Department on 1 July 1904. Prior to that date the work relating to Toshakhana was the responsibility of the General Branch. The Toshakhana dealt with the following subjects:

- Custody of presents made to the Governor General and other officers of the Government of India. Purchase of 'Khilats', and return of presents.
- Arrangements for transport etc. for visits of Governor General to Indian States.
- Arrangements of reception of the Government guests.
- Valuation, sale, and maintenance of presents received, etc.

The Foreign Department was designated as Foreign and Political Department on 1 January 1914. The latter was bifurcated into two separate departments on 1 April 1937, viz., (i) External Affairs Department, and (ii) Political Department. After bifurcation, the Toshakhana continued to be the responsibility of both the departments. As the Political Department had more of Toshakhana work, the post of Superintendent, who was looking after the work, was retained in the cadre of the Political Department/Ministry of States. With the reorganisation of the Princely Indian States, the Toshakhana work in the Ministry of States became almost negligible.

On the other hand, there had been a corresponding increase of Toshakhana work in the Ministry of External Affairs due to increased

The Foreign Office Branch was created in 1925 in the Foreign and Political Department to deal with the following subjects:

- Recruitment, promotion, confirmation etc.
- House allotment in New Delhi and Simla.
- Annual moves of Foreign and Political Department from New Delhi to Simla and back.
- Preparation of lists containing subjects dealt with by various branches.
- Tour programmes of all high officials, except the Viceroy.
- Preparation of electoral rolls in connection with Legislative Assembly.
- Preparation of India Office weekly letters.
- Miscellaneous matters, except those came under the headings of other branches.

The Foreign and Political Department was bifurcated into two separate departments on 1 April 1937, viz., (i) External Affairs Department, and (ii) Political Department. The Foreign Office Section was placed under the External Affairs Department, and its new counterpart, viz., Crown Office Section was created under the Political Department.

38. SPECIAL BRANCH (1930-1931)

In December 1927, the Secretary of State for India appointed the 'Indian States Committee', popularly known as the Butler Committee, with Sir Harcourt Butler as its Chairman, to investigate into the nature of relationship between the Paramount Power and the Indian States, and to make recommendations for the adjustment of economic and financial relations between the British India and the Indian States. The Committee submitted its report in 1929. A Special Branch was created in 1930 in the Foreign and Political Department to deal with the work arising from the report, and to consider the question of future economic and financial relations between the British India and the Indian States in connection with the discussions to take place at the Round Table Conference.

39. AITCHISON TREATIES (AT) BRANCH (1933)

The Foreign Department/Foreign and Political Department was responsible for compilation and publication of a Collection of Treaties, Engagements and Sanads relating to India and the Neighbouring Countries, Volumes I-IV. The volumes give a background of the relations of the Government of India with the Indian States and adjacent foreign countries, in addition to the texts of various treaties, pledges etc., which regulated those relations.

C.U. Aitchison, Under Secretary to the Government of India in the Foreign Department, was first entrusted with the work. The first volume, which at that time, contained only the treaties etc., relating to Bengal, Burma and the Eastern Archipelago, was submitted to Lord Canning, Governor General, just before his departure from India in March 1862. Lord Canning recorded the following note (dated 11 March 1862) in his own hand:

1. Charles Umpherson Aitchison, B.C.S.(afterwards Sir, K.C.S.I., and C.I.E.) officiated for a short period as the Foreign Secretary in 1868 during the absence of Sir W. Seton-Karr on leave (Foreign Department, General-A, April 1868 Nos. 84-86). He became the Chief Commissioner of British Burma on 30 April 1878, was Member of the Supreme Council of the Government of India in charge of Home, Revenue and Agricultural Department (12 July-30 December 1880), became Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab on 3 April 1882, and was re-appointed as Member in charge of the Revenue and Agricultural Department, which he resigned on 17 November 1888 (List of the Heads of Administrations in India and of the India Office in England (corrected up to 1 October 1938), New Delhi 1939, pp. 19, 25, 52 and 53. He was also the author of Lord Lawrence and the Reconstruction of India, Oxford, 1992 (Rulers of India Series, edited by W.N. Hunter).

2. Foreign Department, General-A, March 1862, Nos. 45-47.
"This is the first volume of a work, the want of which in a complete and trustworthy shape has long been felt by the Government of India. So far I have been able to examine it, it appears to be admirably executed. The arrangement and the explanatory parts are very good."

The first volume was published in 1862, and 2,000 copies were printed. The volumes popularly known as Aitchison Treaties were revised in 1876, 1863, 1906, 1909, 1929, but not all volumes in the same year. The revision was made when the old volumes had become exhausted and obsolete owing to supersession of earlier treaties by new ones. For years, materials for inclusion in the new editions had been collected in the various branches to facilitate the revision. Normally on the first day of each quarter, the General Branch used to obtain from other branches an abstract in the prescribed form of all Treaties, Engagements, and Sandads recorded during the preceding quarter. These were incorporated in a supplement to the then current edition of Aitchison Treaties.

In October 1926, a special establishment by the name of Aitchison Treaties Branch was created in the Foreign and Political Department.

Department (Simla), for revision of the Aitchison's volumes, headed by an Officer on Special Duty. The revision embraced insertion of many new treaties and war-time agreements, rewriting, supplementing much of the narrative and historical portion and re-indexing. A list of A Collection of Treaties, Engagements and Sanads relating to India and Neighbouring Countries, compiled by C.U. Aitchison is given at Appendix -XXI.

The following records (Crown Period) of the Aitchison Treaties Branch for the year 1933 only are now available. These include the files on revision of treaties with various Indian States, as well as suggestions received for their revision. (The Earthquake Branch File No.52-EQ/1937 also relates to "Republication of Volume XIV of Aitchison Treaties").
The Government of India Act, 1935 (Central Part) contemplated a Federation for India, which could have come into existence by joining together of the British Indian Provinces and the Princely Indian States. But ultimately the introduction of Federation was dropped because it was not found acceptable to the national opinion of India.

The Federation Branch was created in the Foreign and Political Department on 1 March 1935 to deal with various problems arising out of the Government of India Act, 1935 involving a federation between the British India Provinces and the Princely Indian States. The branch was created before the Act was passed. To begin with it was confined to the preliminary stages of inauguration of the Federation, consequent on the report issued by the Joint Select Committee. It may be noted that the Reforms Office of the Government of India, a separate organisation, was also functioning independently on the implementation of the constitutional reforms introduced by the Government of India Act, 1935.

On 31 May 1935 at 3.03 A.M., a terrible earthquake shook Quetta, the capital city of Baluchistan and its surrounding areas. The earthquake caused a havoc resulting in huge loss of life and property. The Government of India took steps to meet the situation and organised relief measures. An Earthquake Branch was created in June 1935 in the Foreign and Political Department to deal with the subject. The Earthquake Branch was placed under the External Affairs Department with effect from 1 April 1937. After sometime when the branch was wound up, the cases relating to earthquake relief were taken over by the General Branch.

The Second World War, which commenced on 3 September 1939, led to tremendous increase of work in the Central Government Secretariat, and almost all the departments were saddled with certain new responsibilities. A War Section was created in the External Affairs Department on 28 August 1939 to deal with the following subjects:

The Second World War formally ended on 2 September 1945, but the War Section continued to exist till 30 June 1946, in order to wind up its affairs. However, most of the functions of the War Section had practically become defunct by that time, and a few with which it was then dealing with (viz., Export and Import Trade Control, Economic Control, Demonetisation, Interned, Italian Armistice, Foreign Publicity, taking over of German and Japanese Consular Archives) were handed over temporarily to the Protocol Branch.

(ii) During the Second World War, a War Publicity Section was also created, but its records are not available in the National Archives of India. A few Diaries and Despatch Registers (in manuscript) of the War Publicity Section (1942-1946) are, however, preserved in two separate bundles.

1. External Affairs Department, File No. 92-MP/1941.
The External Publicity Section was set up in the External Affairs Department in 1943 to deal with press publicity in foreign countries. But prior to 16 June 1948, the external publicity work was also controlled by the Ministry of Information and Broadcasting. In order to secure more effective co-ordination with free India's foreign policy, the External Publicity Wing of the Ministry of Information and Broadcasting was transferred with the relevant staff to the Ministry of External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations on 16 June 1948. The External Publicity Section in the Ministry of External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations was involved firstly, with a study of what was being reported in other countries about India and Indian affairs; secondly, with the formulation of a policy to encourage appreciation of the Indian point of view, or suitable refutation of adverse criticism; and thirdly, with the execution of policy thus decided upon.

The following subjects were allotted to the External Publicity Section:

External Publicity - Policy and General. Publicity material sent to Indian Consular posts abroad. Administration and control of Information Services abroad. External broadcasts and monitoring services. Publicity matters connected with the United Nations and allied international organisations. Publicity abroad for international conferences. Joint Co-ordination Committee and Operational Committee. Publicity through exhibitions in foreign countries. Supply of books, newspapers, periodicals, photographs, maps, etc. to external publicity posts. Magazines and pamphlets for external publicity. News and background of the news sent by cable etc. Supply of Government reports and other publications. Issue of weekly news from India. Supply of background information material to foreign posts. Publicity through files in foreign countries, etc.

From 2 September 1940, the supply of publicity and cultural materials to foreign posts of the Ministry of External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, such as supply of books, newspapers, film-projectors, gramophone records, paintings, etc., was taken over by the External Publicity Section from the General Section. In return, the General Section took over from it all matters relating to supply of stationery, books of references, furniture etc. to the Information Offices.

Earlier, geographically sometime a distinction was made between the countries in the Near East and the Middle East, making a line of demarcation among them. But subsequently it was no longer valid. The countries from Afghanistan in the East and Egypt and Turkey in the West formed what came to be called the Middle East region. It was on this concept that the Near East Section was redesignated as Middle East Section in 1944 in the External Affairs Department. The following items of work were allotted to this branch:

Matters relating to Persia, Persian Gulf, Baluchistan, Syria, Turkey, Egypt, Palestine, Somali Coast, Red Sea, Abyssinia, Arabia, and Kamaran, except such as matters as fell under the headings of other Sections.

On 20 June 1946 the subjects concerning Baluchistan and Persian Gulf were taken over by the newly created Baluchistan and Persian Gulf (B.P.G.) Section. The following records of the Middle East Section are available:

1. See also Special Branch (1930-31). This Special Branch was created in the Foreign and Political Department in 1930 to deal with the work arising from the report submitted by the Indian States Committee (Butler Committee).
Prior to the year 1946, the business relating to issue of passports was the concern of the General Section. But owing to army demobilisation after the Second World War, appointment of Indians as delegates to various conferences abroad, sending of large number of Indian students to the U.K., the U.S.A. and other countries for advanced courses of study, it became too great a task for the General Section to cope with the work. A separate Passport Section was, therefore, created in the External Affairs Department on 4 February 1946, to deal with all matters relating to passports, visas, and nationality.

The Passport Section was bifurcated into two separate Sections on 5 May 1947, viz., Passport and Visa I, and Passport and Visa II.

The Passport and Visa I Section was concerned mainly with:

Policy matters. Arrangements for the introduction of the New Indian Passport. Revision and compilation of passport and visa rules and regulations.

1. External Affairs Department, File Nos. (i) 137-F.0./1945, p.6-corres., and (ii) 73-F.0./1946.

The Passport and Visa II Section dealt mainly with:

The actual preparation and issue of passports and visas. Printing and distribution of passport booklets, forms of applications, sets of rules, regulations, circulars to India diplomatic and consular offices abroad, and passport issuing authorities in India. References from foreign Embassies and Consulates in Delhi for the grant of visas on foreign passports. Health requirements.

The following records of the (i) Passport Section, (ii) Passport and Visa I Section, and (iii) Passport and Visa II Section are available:

In order to relieve pressure of work in the External Branch, the Consular Section was created in the External Affairs Department in the beginning of 1947 to deal with matters relating to compilation of instructions for the guidance of Indian Consular Offices abroad, ultimately embodied in the book entitled "Consular Instructions, India." The consular work was transferred to the Protocol II Section on 15 November 1949.

However, later on it was found necessary to bring together all consular work handled in different Territorial Sections into a self-contained Consular Section. As an experimental measure, a separate Consular Section was formed in August 1951. The Consular Section was reorganised in June 1954, and was made responsible for guiding the Indian Missions and posts abroad on consular work, and offering assistance and advice on consular matters to foreign Missions in India. On 1 May 1955 the Consular Section was split up into two Consular I and Consular II Sections.

Prior to the year 1947 the work concerning the United Nations organisation was the responsibility of the Post-War Reconstruction Section, and the Co-ordination and Conferences Section. The Post-War Reconstruction Section ceased to exist from 12 July 1946, and the Co-ordination and Conference Section was split up into two sections on 25 March 1947, viz., (i) United Nations Organisation I Section, and (ii) United Nations Organisation II Section. The following items of work were allotted to the UNO I and UNO II Sections:—

UNO I Section: General policy questions relating to UN (except General Assembly), Special Agencies and International Organisations in relation to UN International Conference (except Peace Conferences). The UNO I Section, however, was not responsible for any accounts, budgetary, and establishment work relating to UN, Indian delegations, travel arrangements for delegations to UNO II Section: Preparation of briefs and connected work in regard to the General Assembly of the UN. Classification and distribution of UNO documents to various Sections of the office, all Departments of the Government of India, as well as specialised agencies.

In conformity with the United Nations Charter and international practice, the "United Nations Organisation" was referred to simply as "United Nations." Therefore, from 16 June 1948 UNO I and UNO II Sections were renamed as United Nations I (UN I), and United Nations II (UN II) Sections respectively. The work relating to United Nations General Assembly was transferred from UN I Section to UN II Section with effect from 29 July 1948.

(ii) OTHER SERIES/GROUPS OF RECORDS (1825-1960)

97-100. BENGAL GOVERNMENT PAPERS (1830-1905)

97. TENASSERIM AND MARTABAN PAPERS (1830-1859)

After the First Burmese War, Burma ceded Arakan and the Tenasserim provinces to the British by the Treaties of Yandabo concluded on 24 February 1826. By the end of the Second Burmese War (14 April 1852) Pegu was also ceded, and the whole of Lower Burma passed into the hands of the British. Arakan and Tenasserim remained part of the Bengal Presidency, and in 1862 these were included in the new province of British Burma with Sir (Lieutenant Colonel) Arthur Phayre as its Chief Commissioner. Until the appointment of Chief Commissioner, Pegu and Tenasserim were administered by two separate Commissioners.

3. Foreign, General, A, January 1862, Nos. 108-112. On 1 January 1886 Upper Burma was annexed by the British. Shortly afterwards the districts of Upper Burma were brought under regular administration, and Upper and Lower Burma were formed into a single province of Burma under a Chief Commissioner, whose designation was changed in 1897 to that of Lieutenant Governor. In 1923 Burma became a Governor's Province (Aitchison, op. cit., pp. 207 and 209).
The Tenasserim Papers (items nos. 1-7 of the list mentioned below) are the original consultations of the Government of Bengal in various branches relating to the affairs of Tenasserim. The papers consist mainly of letters to and from the Commissioner, Tenasserim Province, his chief correspondents being the Government of Bengal. The topic that predominates in these letters is "convicts". Tenasserim, at the time the letters were written, was mainly a convict settlement. From 1833 onwards there is a mention of a large number of "Thugee" convicts coming into Tenasserim. The convicts had a large hand in developing the country. They built roads, worked in tin mines, cut canals, erected buildings, and also worked in pearl fisheries. Their services were hired to private individuals, but this practice was stopped under the orders of the Government of Bengal. These papers appear to be partly incomplete.

The abstracts of weekly proceedings of the Commissioner, "Tenasserim and Martaban Provinces" (item no. 9 of the list) consisting of letters, reports, consultations, etc., throw light on the administration of the provinces, specially on marine, medical, judicial, and revenue matters. Some of the abstracts also relate to some Indo-Burma border disputes, and the transfer of officers in the various departments of the Commissioner. The Tenasserim and Martaban Papers were evidently transferred from the Government of Bengal to the Government of India, when the latter took over the administration of the places.

The research workers are advised to consult the other records of the Foreign Department relating to Tenasserim. They may also consult the following papers: (i) on Tenasserim: Home Department (Miscellaneous Records) No. 519; Foreign Department (Miscellaneous Records) Nos. 196-197; and Foreign Department (Bengal Political Papers); (ii) on Pegu: Foreign Department (Miscellaneous Records No. 369 and 385; and (iii) on Upper Burma: Home Department (Upper Burma Branch: 1886-1888).

The following Tenasserim and Martaban Papers are preserved in the National Archives of India. No subject-list of the papers is available at present:

BENGAL POLITICAL PAPERS (1834-1905)

This group of papers of the Government of Bengal comprise:

(a) Original Political Consultations relating to North-East Frontier of India, South-West Frontier of India (later Sambalpur), Tenasserim Provinces, Khasia Hills, affairs of the Nawabs of Murshidabad and Dacca, and the Princes of Tipu Sultan's family of Mysore,

(b) Original Foreign Consultations, with Body Sheets, with regard to transactions with the foreign powers, and

(c) Original Political Proceedings on varied subjects.

Under the Charter Act of 1833, which came into force in 1834, the Governor General of Bengal became the Governor General of India. On 1 May 1843 the Secretariat of the Government of India was completely separated from that of Bengal. These Political and Foreign papers of the Government of Bengal were transferred to the Government of India in October 1843, when the business with which they dealt with was assigned to the latter Government.

1. See also Sambalpur Papers (1849-1860).

2. See also Tenasserim and Martaban Papers (1830-1859).

3. The Political Consultations of the Government of Bengal from 21 November 1834 onwards are preserved in the State Archives, West Bengal, Calcutta. From that date, separate series of proceedings were recorded for Government of Bengal and Government of India, and the term 'Council' for the latter was replaced by 'Supreme Council of India.'
The following papers are preserved in the National Archives of India. No index or subject-list of these papers is now available:

The Bhutan, Sikkim and Tibet Papers (1845-1905) in the National Archives of India are preserved in two groups, viz., (i) 1845-1859 and (ii) 1860-1905.

The papers (1845-1859) represent a number of original consultations and copies recorded by the Government of Bengal in the General, Judicial and Political Departments from time to time relating to the British diplomatic relations with Bhutan and Sikkim. The documents give a glimpse of Anglo-Bhutanese relations after the isolation of Bhutan was broken by the impact of powerful forces, represented by the British Government of India, and the unsatisfactory nature of Bengal-Quars frontier drew the attention of the Indian Government. A British cantonment was posted on the frontier of Jalpaiguri. A few documents also throw side-lights on Anglo-Sikkim relations and the question of opening of Sikkim to traders.

The collection is not complete, and apparently many documents, including those of the earlier period (1834-1844) relating to Bhutan Sikkim, as well as Tibet, were lost. In all, 64 items of documents in 210 shell-covers (1845-1859) are now preserved in one big-size carton box. Four typed copies of subject-list of this collection are available.
A few notable documents in the collection (1845-1905) are mentioned below:

2. Boundary line between Bhutan and Cooch Behar (10 April 1850, Nos.92-93, 19 June 1850, Nos.85-96, 8 January 1851, Nos.64-67, 5 February 1851, No.84).
3. Report regarding the State of affairs on the Bhutan frontier (19 June 1850, Nos.96, 98-102, 10 November 1853, Nos.88-89).
4. Instructions given to the Raja of Sikkim to correspond with the Government of Bengal in all matters connected with the civil and military affairs (3 December 1857, Nos.81-85).
5. Opening out Sikkim to traders (25 March 1858, Nos.113-115, 17 March 1859, No.16, 7 April, 1859, Nos.1-3).

The collection of Bengal Government Political Proceedings relating to Bhutan, Sikkim and Tibet (1860-1905) also deal with the British relation with these States during the period. The Bengal Government (Political Department) compiled two printed lists of these papers (with subjects) entitled (i) List A and B Papers relating to Bhutan, Sikkim and Tibet (1860-1905), Calcutta, 1908, and (ii) List of A and B Papers relating to Bhutan (1864-1866), Calcutta, 1909. A few copies of these printed lists are available.

Some notable documents in the collection (1860-1905) are mentioned below:

1. Aggression of the Bhutias in the British Frontier (5 January 1860, Nos.10-12 (No.11 is wanting)).
2. Occupation of the Bhutia Mahal to the west of Teesta river (26 April 1860, Nos.58-59).
3. Movement of troops into Sikkim (November 1860, Nos.21-23).

The Government of Bengal (Political Department) transferred these papers (1845-1859) and (1860-1905) to the Government of India (Foreign Department), when the subjects dealing with these areas were assumed by the latter. The papers were subsequently transferred to the Imperial Record Department (now National Archives of India) in separate instalments for custody. The following papers are available:-

COMPANY PERIOD (1845-1859)

Bhutan, Sikkim and Tibet Papers
( Unbound: manuscript, in one outside carton box)

1. Most of the papers are out-size documents and kept in an out-size carton box.

(ii) Gaps: 1846-47 and 1856.

There are many monthly gaps in between. In some cases, for example, only one document for 1845, four documents for 1852, and three documents for 1854 are available.

CROWN PERIOD (1900-1905)

Bhutan, Sikkim and Tibet Papers
( Unbound: manuscript and printed, in 10 carton boxes)

Some of the 'A' and 'B' Procedings are folded, and a few papers relating to Bhutan are very brittle.
Sambalpur, now a district in Orissa, was under the dominion of the Marathas from 1755 to 1803, when it was ceded to the British Government. In 1806, it was restored to the Bhonsle Chief of Nagpur, but in 1818 on the deposition of Appa Sabib, it reverted to the British Government, and was finally ceded to the latter by the Treaty of 1826.

In 1833 Sambalpur was placed under the control of the Agent to the Governor General for South-West Frontier. It was placed under the control of the Bengal Government in 1849, the area being directly administered by the Principal Assistant to the Agent for the South-West Frontier till 1854, and later by the Principal Assistant to the Senior Assistant Commissioner, Chotanagpur. In 1860 Sambalpur was transferred to the Orissa Division of Bengal, and in 1862 it was made over to the newly constituted Central Provinces. In 1905 the bulk of the district was re-transferred to the Bengal Province, and in 1912 to the newly created province of Bihar and Orissa. Under the provisions of the Government of India Act of 1935, Orissa was separated from Bihar in 1937, and Sambalpur formed a district in the former.

The Sambalpur Papers preserved in the National Archives of India, consist of two sub-groups of Original Consultations of the Bengal Government in the (i) General Department (1849-1850, 1857), and (ii) Judicial Department (1857-1862). These are artificial collections having been formed by means of isolated documents taken away from the two parent series of the Bengal Government. The Bengal Government itself did not create a separate series of Sambalpur Papers.

The Papers mainly relate to correspondence of the Bengal Government with the Principal Assistant to the Agent to the Governor General for the South-West Frontier, and the Principal Assistant to the Senior Assistant Commissioner, Chotanagpur on matters relating to Sambalpur, and other connected papers of the same period. The records were evidently transferred to the Government of India on the incorporation of the area in 1862 to the Central Provinces, which was then a centrally administered territory.

Being selections from Bengal Original Consultations, the consultation now preserved in the National Archives of India are not continuous. The State Archives, West Bengal, Calcutta, has in its custody the Bengal Government, Political Department as well.

2. For other records relating to Sambalpur for 1803-1848, see also the records of Political Branch (1789-1859), and Bengal Political Papers (1834-1905).
as General Department Consultations from 1834 onwards. The Political Consultations are separately recorded there up to March 1844, and from April 1844, to July 1858 (except 1852), they are included in the General Department.

The following "Sambalpur Papers" are preserved in the National Archives of India. No subject-list of these papers is available:

Saadet Ali, the Nawab Vazir of Oudh ceded part of his territories, i.e., tracts of Rohilkhand and the Lower Doab to the East India Company by a treaty concluded on 10 November 1801, in return for a guarantee of protection. These territories were termed as "Ceded Provinces". Lord Wellesley provisionally appointed his brother Henry Wellesley as Lieutenant Governor of these provinces, aided by a Board of Commissioners - Ceded Provinces. The territories ceded by the Nawab of Oudh were divided into seven districts, viz., Gorakhpur, Allahabad, Cawnpore, Etawa, Bareilly, Moradabad, and Farrukhabad, the last one being ceded by the Nawab of Farrukhabad.

On 18 January 1803 Henry Wellesley resigned from his post. In February 1803 the Board was dissolved, and the "Ceded Provinces" became part of Bengal, and were placed under the administration of a special department of the Board of Revenue at Fort William. The Board of Revenue dealt with matters of revenue and justice.

relating to these territories. The other heads of business pertaining to them were conducted through other departments of the Supreme Government.

After Lord Lake's campaigns of 1803, the "Conquered Provinces" consisting of the present Meerut Division, the rest of the Agra Division, the districts around Delhi, and the districts of Banda and Haripur were added to the "Ceded Provinces", and Cuttack was also added. The name of the special department of the Board of Revenue under which the administration of these provinces were placed was accordingly changed to Board of Revenue - Ceded and Conquered Provinces. On 27 November 1804 the Board was also styled as Department of Ceded and Conquered Provinces. The proceedings of this department were recorded under three heads - Revenue, Judicial, and Public, the subject embraced by them being respectively Revenue proper, Judicial, and Separate Revenue (i.e., Customs, Salt and Opium). On Wellesley's recall, the Department of Ceded and Conquered Provinces was abolished in August 1805, and its functions were then distributed among the regular Secretariats, viz., Revenue, Judicial, and Public Departments.

5. B.B. Misra, op. cit., p. 51
Two years after on 11 June 1807, a Board of Commissioners-Ceded and Conquered Provinces was appointed and was vested with all the duties and powers hitherto exercised by the Board of Revenue-Ceded and Conquered Provinces, with the exception of Cuttack, which continued to be administered by the Board of Revenue at Fort William. Next year the Board was reconstituted. In 1809 Benares, which had been previously under the administration of the Board of Revenue at Fort William, was added to its jurisdiction. The Board of Commissioners-Ceded and Conquered Provinces was then renamed as Board of Commissioners-Upper Provinces (again redesignated as Board of Revenue-Western Provinces from 1 May 1822).

Meanwhile during the years 1807-1810, when the Board of Commissioners-Ceded and Conquered Provinces was engaged in its work, the Board of Revenue at Fort William continued to transact other business relating to the Ceded and Conquered Provinces.

6. Ibid., pp. 142-143.

7. The Ceded and Conquered Provinces were given a new name "Upper Provinces". Except for some minor internal matters, the Upper Provinces continued to be directly governed by the Supreme Government up to 1834, when the Upper Provinces were separated from the Presidency of Bengal and given the name of Presidency of Agra. The Ceded and Conquered Provinces formed the foundation on which the North-Western Provinces was built (History and Administration of the North-Western Provinces (1803-1858) by Dharma Bhanu, Agra, 1957, pp. 30-31).

8. On 1 May 1822 the division of the revenue administration was revised, and three new Boards were constituted, viz., (i) Board of Revenue-Lower Provinces (1822-1829), (ii) Board of Revenue-Central Provinces (1822-1829), and (iii) Board of Revenue-Western Provinces (1822-1829). The three Boards existed till 1829, when the revenue administration was again revised.

3. Board of Commissioners- Bihar and Benares (1816-1822).

The Charter Act of 1833 divided the Government of Fort William in Bengal into two distinct Presidencies—the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal and that lying to its north-west as Presidency of Agra. Bengal proper remained under the direct administration of the Governor-General-in-Council, and a separate Governor was appointed for the Presidency of Agra. The Act became a law on 28 August 1833 and came into force from 22 April 1834. But the scheme was not fully carried out, and the Section 38 of the Act, which had created Agra as a separate Presidency was suspended.

From 29 February 1836 a new administrative unit was constituted as "North-Western Provinces" to include the Presidency of Agra and Delhi territories under the administrative jurisdiction of a Lieutenant-Governor. The Lieutenant-Governor was also entrusted with the superintendence of Political Agencies in Rajputana (including Ajmer, to which Merwara was added later on).

From 29 February 1836 Alexander Ross acted as the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces. Sir Charles I. Metcalfe assumed the charge on 13 April 1836, and remained in office till 31 December 1837.

"Saugor and Nerbudda Territories" which were being administered by an Agent to the Governor-General since 1820, were included in the North-Western Provinces in 1836, taken away in 1843, restored again in 1853, and remained part of the North-Western Provinces until the creation of the Central Provinces in 1861. Between 1840 and 1853 Jhansi and parts of Jalaun and Hamipur were also added to the North-Western Provinces. Immediately after the Great Revolt of 1857, the Delhi territories were transferred to the Punjab in 1858, and Ajmer-Merwara was taken over by the Central Government in 1871.

Oudh was annexed by the East India Company by a treaty signed in February 1856. From February 1856 to January 1877 Oudh was maintained a separate Chief Commissionership.

4. Foreign (Political), 2 May 1836, Nos.46-47.
5. (i) Home, Public, 10 January 1838, No.7; (ii) Dharma Bhanu, op.cit., p.135.
On 17 January 1877 it was amalgamated with the North-Western Provinces with headquarters at Allahabad. Sir George Couper, the Chief Commissioner of Oudh was appointed as the Lieutenant-Governor of the new administrative unit. It was, however, a tentative arrangement, and Oudh maintained a separate identity for sometime more, with its headquarters at Lucknow. To avoid confusion the combined Province was given the name of the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, when the North-West Frontier Province was created in 1901 on the north-western frontier of India.

The majority of records of the North-Western Provinces are Political Consultations of the Government of North-Western Provinces, and some are Judicial, Revenue, and General Department Consultations on the affairs of certain principalities, e.g., Bundelkhand, "Saugar and Nerbudda Territories" etc., which were at one time within the administrative jurisdiction of the Government of North-Western Provinces, but subsequently came under the control of the Government of India. Necessarily the papers represent only portions of the series to which they belong. These records were transferred to the Government of India presumably when the change of jurisdiction took place.

The following records (in all 636 unbound documents and 2 bound volumes) of the North-Western Provinces (Company Period) are preserved in the Foreign Department as a separate series. The figures in brackets indicate the number of documents. For other papers relating to the North-Western Provinces, the research workers may consult the records of the Home Department (Public, Revenue, Judicial Branches), as well as the "Miscellaneous Records" of the Home Department: Nos. 486-508, 553-556 (Bound Volumes), and "Miscellaneous Records" of the Foreign Department: Nos. 7, 46-47, 110, 181-185, 190, 205, 236, and 381-382:

II. Political Department,
Abstract of Proceedings of Sir Charles Metcalfe, Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces

(One volume: manuscript)

Sir Charles Metcalfe assumed charge of Lieutenant-Governorship of North-Western Provinces on 13 April 1836. He resigned his office on 8 August 1837, but was relieved by Lord Auckland, Governor-General, with effect from 1 January 1838. (Home, Public, 10 January 1838, No. 7).

III. Abstract of Proceedings of the North-Western Provinces

(One volume: manuscript)
The Burmese had conquered Manipur in 1813. But after the First Burmese War (1824-26), Burma had agreed to abstain from interference there by the Treaty of Yandabo concluded on 24 February 1826, and Manipur practically became a British Protectorate.

The "Manipur Papers" preserved in the National Archives of India consist of several printed copies of Appendix I (extracts from correspondence regarding the Kubbo Valley up to the time of its cession to Burma in 1833), and Appendix II (extracts from correspondence regarding the cession of the Kubbo Valley to the Burmese, and the laying down of the Manipur-Burma boundary: 1833-34).

Each printed copy of the two combined Appendices contain 65 pages, and covers relevant extracts from notes, correspondence, secret consultations, minutes, memoranda etc. of the Governor-General, Chief Secretary, Commissioners, Residents etc., since the final phase of the First Burmese War to the Manipur-Burma boundary question (1833-34). See also Miscellaneous Records of the Foreign Department (Nos 247-249).

The China Papers comprise original correspondence, copies of letters and accounts of the Government of India in the Foreign Department in connection with the "China Expedition" (Anglo-Chinese War, 1839-42), otherwise known as the Opium War, and subsequent events. These, however, are not the only papers relating to China, or British expedition against that country among the holdings of the National Archives of India. There are many more in other series of the Foreign Department, as is only natural, since during the last quarter of the 18th and the first half of the 19th century, it was the China trade which sustained the expensive political and military establishment of the East India Company in India. Yet this small series was distinguished by that title. This series of records bears evidence to the part played by India under the East India Company in those momentous happenings which, by the Treaty of Nanking (1842), gave Hong Kong to Britain and opened out commerce of China to the world.

The documents reveal that India became the main source of supplies to the British expeditionary force, and the supplies ranged from stores of almost all kinds. The Governor General of India was personally placed in charge of conducting the expedition. Thus it was that the Governor-General, in his personal capacity had the direction of the China War, and he drew upon the Indian sources at his command for conducting the war successfully for Britain. The documents describe the conduct of the war, the policy followed from time to time by the British Government in London, the reaction of the Chinese Government as well as other connected events.

The records are not complete, and apparently many documents in the series were lost, it is not known, when or how. The Chinese affairs having been handled personally by the Governor General of India, the records relating to it automatically found their way among the other records of the Central Government.
And yet since the Governor General in this case was not acting as the Governor-General-in-Council, but in his individual capacity, and entirely on behalf of, and other instructions direct from the British Government, these documents were not recorded along with the regular series of records of the Foreign Department. These were transferred to the National Archives of India (then Imperial Record Department) by the Foreign and Political Department along with the bulk of their non-current records.
According to the then prevailing practice, these records were folded and tied up in bundles. After transfer, these papers were given expert treatment in the National Archives of India for better preservation, unfolded, flattened and kept inside shell covers.

The China Papers cover the years from 1839 to 1850. Most of the papers are in manuscript and very few are printed. Among the notable documents, mention may be made of a draft (copy) of the treaty containing 13 articles dated Nanking, 29 August 1842 (enclosure to Despatch no. 33 of 1842). The year 1855 has only one lengthy document, which is a copy of a treaty relating to the British trade with Siam.

The China Papers are not indexed, and they are preserved in 13 carton boxes in the following order:

(i) Gaps: 1846, 1849, and 1851-54.

(ii) Although a few letters for the year 1839 are available amongst the China Papers in the National Archives of India, many more letters for that year are preserved in the India Office Library and Records, London, Volume No. L/P&S/9/193 (China-Foreign Office Instructions and Correspondence, 1839-40, Volume 1, Secret Department). Similarly, the letters for the years 1846, 1849, 1851-54, are preserved in the India Office Library and Records, Volume No. L/P&S/9/201 (China-Home Correspondence Miscellaneous, 1844-54, Volume 9, Secret Department-Instructions to Lord Ellenborough).
The collection known as the "Kabul Papers" are printed copies of letters (Secret and Political) received and issued from the Foreign Department of the Government of India during the years 1839 to 1859. The papers relate to the British relations with Afghans.

The period of twenty years was eventful in the Anglo-Afghan relations, which witnessed the beginning and end of First Afghan War (1839-1842), revolts of Afghans against the British officials in Afghanistan, British annexation of the Punjab in 1849 bringing the northern frontier of British India right up to the borders of Afghanistan, British concern over the gradual expansion of Russian sphere of influence in Central Asia, etc. These printed papers have their original manuscripts preserved in the Foreign Department along with their indexes. The relevant Foreign (Secret and Political) documents were printed from their original manuscripts at a time when the joint Boundary Commission of British and

1. See also Kabul Mission Papers (1920-1923).

2. In 1884 the joint Boundary Commission was set up by Britain and Russia for fixing the line of demarcation between Afghan and Russian frontiers. Major-General Sir Peter Lumsden and Brigadier-General Zelenoe were appointed to the Commission as British and Russian Commissioners respectively (Foreign, Secret, 8, August 1884, Nos. 74-110). The 'Panjdeh Incident' (1885) stalled the progress of the Commission for some time. After prolonged negotiations, the Russo-Afghan boundary from Oxus to Gulikar Pass was amicably settled and a protocol was signed in 1887.
Russian officers was appointed in 1884 to fix the northern boundary of Afghanistan. These printed papers were termed as "Kabul Papers", and later on transferred to the National Archives of India (then Imperial Record Department) from the Foreign Department as a separate collection.

The collection consists of 132 unbound documents (Secret and Political Consultations), 18 unbound documents (Letters from Secret Committee of the Court of Directors), and 29 unbound documents (Letters to Secret Committee of the Court of Directors) preserved in 8 carton boxes. In addition, 3 bound volumes (in duplicate) of the above mentioned printed papers are also retained separately. No subject-list of these papers is available but each unbound document bears its brief subject in the beginning. The printed papers in the bound volumes, however, do not bear such subject. The research workers may consult the indexes of the "Secret and Political Department" (1839-1842) and "Foreign Department (1842-1859) for these records. The Imperial Record Department, Calcutta, published a booklet entitled Kabul Papers (1839-59)- Jagir Settlements (1847-57) in 1919. The list of "Kabul Papers" (without subject) is printed in that booklet. The subject-list of the papers is not yet prepared. The following papers (Company period) are available:-
1. Original Consultation 1839-1859
   (Unbound: printed)
   Gaps: 1842-50, and 1853.
   (There are numerous monthly gaps in the collection, e.g., the year 1839 has only one document, dated 21 August. The years 1851 and 1852 have two documents each and so on. The Foreign (Secret and Political) documents needed in connection with the work of Boundary Commission were only printed and termed as "Kabul Papers").

2. Letters from Secret Committee of the Court of Directors

3. Letters to Secret Committee of the Court of Directors

4. Volumes 1839-1859
   (6 printed volumes)
   These are printed papers of items nos. 1-3 mentioned above, bound in three separate volumes (each in duplicate) as stated below:
   (a) Volume I: 1839-1859, Nos. 1-60 (2 copies)
   (b) Volume II: 1839-1859, Nos. 61-117 (2 copies)
   (c) Volume III: 1839-1859, Nos. 118-179

The word 'Jagir' is Persian, which means 'place-holding'. The Mughal Government used to set apart portions of lands for assignment to Court-favourites etc., and when offices or titles were conferred upon individuals, a fixed grant went with them as an appanage. Such grants were called 'Jagirs'. The officer who kept the 'Jagir' account was called the 'Dewan-i-Jagir', and the person who held it was called 'Jagirdar'.

The East India Company continued the practice of granting 'Jagirs' to the Indians. After the First and Second Anglo-Sikh Wars (1845-46, 1848-49) many old 'Jagirs' were confiscated, and new 'Jagirs' granted to individuals, institutions etc. in the Punjab. The conferment of 'Jagirs' in the Punjab were dealt with in the Foreign Department of the Government of India. The Foreign Consultations bearing on 'Jagirs' granted during the years 1847 to 1858, were taken out by the Foreign Department from their original series at a subsequent period, and preserved as a separate collection. The consultation numbers, however, were not changed, but the docket cover of each consultation, or a group of consultations was given an additional serial number from 1 to 224. The Imperial Record Department, Calcutta, published a booklet entitled Kabul Papers (1839-59)-Jagir Statements (1847-57) in 1919. The list of Jagir Papers (without subject) is printed in that booklet. It appears that the additional serial numbers on the docket covers of the papers were given by the Imperial Record Department, when the booklet was printed, for the sake of re-arrangement of this collection. The reason for segregation of the original consultations from their parent series is not known. Their copies, however, are available in the relevant proceedings volume of Foreign Department. Besides the Jagir Papers, a few Registers of Rent-Free Investigations/Holdings, and a few Pension Statements of the members of the Royal Family of Oudh are also preserved in the collection.

No subject-list of the papers is available, but the consultations are indexed in the Foreign Department Decennial Indexes. The subjects of a few papers are given below to get a glimpse of the nature of records preserved in this collection:

As early as 1786 the island of Penang was acquired by the English. Malacca was taken by the English from the Dutch in 1795. In 1805 Penang was constituted as a separate Presidency with a Governor and Council. Malacca was restored to the Dutch in 1818. A settlement was established at Singapore in 1819. It was for sometime subordinate to Beneoolen (Fort Marlborough) in Sumatra, but in 1823 it was placed under the Government of Bengal. By virtue of a treaty concluded on 17 March 1824, all the British possessions in Sumatra were made over to the Dutch in exchange for Malacca, and the Dutch settlements in India.

Malacca and Singapore were added to the Penang Presidency in 1826, the seat of the Government remaining at Penang until ten years later, when it was transferred to Singapore. The Straits Settlements were finally made over to the Colonial Office on 1 April 1867.

The Malacca papers in the National Archives of India consist of narratives of the proceedings of Government of the Strait of Malacca (latterly Straits Settlements). The two volumes (item no. 1 of the list mentioned below) are quarterly narratives mainly relating to the conduct of Raja of Sarang Coast, Pedier Island of Sumatra. The papers also relate to the development of education amongst the Malayan youth at Singapore, and grants-in-aid to several institutions for spread of female education, etc.
The three other volumes (item no.2 of the list) written in beautiful hand, consist of abstracts of proceedings of the Governor of the Strait of Malacca, and his correspondence with Resident Counsellor at Malacca, and the Chiefs of various islands, e.g., Somgheyiyoung, Lancat, Sarang, and others. The papers relate to the subjects like the seizure of the ship "Schooner Dolphin", murder of the Captain by the pirates, trade relations with the foreign countries such as China, Burma, Siam, Cambodia, Afghanistan, etc.

The following Malacca Papers are preserved in the National Archives of India. No index or subject-list of the papers is now available:

112. NOTES (1860-1905)

The term "Notes" assigned to this collection of papers in the Foreign Department appears to be a misnomer. The collection of sixty bundles consists mostly of duplicate copies of important printed notes, memoranda, reports, minutes, narratives, telegrams etc. on various subjects, which form part of the proceedings of the Foreign Department. The duplicate copies of the proceedings of the Foreign Department, however, are not available in this collection, nor the numbers and dates of the proceedings are printed on these papers. The excess printed copies (in some cases more than one) of these notes etc. are grouped together and formed into an artificial collection. Major portion of these notes etc. are kept under docket covers, and an artificial serial number is allotted in ink to each cover, e.g., Nos. C-8, C-11, C-13, C-14/351, C-26, C-27-54, C-48A/284, C-500, C-501/444 and so on. The alphabet 'C' refers to "Collection". The collection is not chronologically arranged. The serial numbers on the docket covers are also not continuous and some documents still remain undocketed. Very few manuscripts are also available in this collection, e.g., No. C-461A/378.

No Subject-List on this collection is available. However, the Transfer-List (Register No. 38, pp. 1-268), which is for official use only, bears the subjects of the records in brief, but mostly without dates. The collection contains many important documents, and a detailed subject-list, when prepared, will prove useful for the research workers and others interested in these documents. A few subjects are given below.

1. Relations between the Rao of Kutch and his Bhag, the feudal chiefs of the State, 1873 (No.C-8).
2. Memorandum by J. Talboys Wheeler on "Our Political Relations with Manipur". The historical narrative was drawn up from the records in the Foreign Department, when Dr. Dillon, the Political Agent at Manipur (1862-1863) was recalled. The Memorandum does not bear date (No.C-11).
3. Punjab Frontier Policy for preventing or punishing the frontier raids, January 1870 (No.C-13).
4. Memorandum on Khelat Affairs (from A.D. 1750 to 1869), by Charles Girdlestone, dated September 1870. The 90-page Memorandum contains a List of Contents in the beginning and two Appendices at the end (No.C-23).
5. Memorandum on Northern Boundaries of Afghanistan—a narrative from 1751 to 1869. The Memorandum does not bear date (No.C-25).
7. Memorandum on under-tenures in the permanently settled districts of Bengal, by C.U. Aitchison, dated 30 September 1864. The 23-page Memorandum contains a List of Contents in the beginning and divided into 3 parts:
   I. Hindoo and Mahomedan Revenue System.
   II. The Permanent Settlement.

The title "knight of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India" was instituted by Queen Victoria by an order dated 23 February 1861, and proclaimed and published by the Viceroy in a notification in the Calcutta Gazette, Extraordinary, dated 5 July 1861. The title used to be conferred by the Crown to the British Indian subjects in recognition of services they rendered. It was customary to make use of the title in full. However, "K.S.I." was its abbreviated form. At the time of the institution of the title in 1861, there was only one class of holders, but the designation of the Knight was subsequently changed, and additional classes were added to it, e.g., G.C.S.I., K.C.S.I., C.S.I.

114. SEISTAN PAPERS (1870)

Seistan is situated in the South East corner of Persia, where the western boundaries of Afghanistan and Baluchistan meet. During the 1870s the political boundaries of Seistan were uncertain and undefined. Britain had vital interests in the Middle East, and especially in the Persian Gulf for political as well as commercial reasons.

There had been occasional boundary disputes between Afghanistan and Persia, and the Seistan Papers of 1870 noted below reflect the British offer of arbitration between the two countries. The documents of 1870 are a collection of printed copies of letters and telegrams on the Seistan Arbitration, from the (i) Secretary of

1. 'Persia' was renamed as 'Iran' from 21 March 1935 (Foreign and Political Department File No. 40-N/1935).

Seistan came to light in the beginning of 20th century, when Seistan Mission (1903-1905) under the leadership of Sir Henry McMahon brought to a completion the work of boundary delimitation by deciding that the water of the river Helmund and the territory of Seistan were divided between Afghanistan and Persia. These papers are available in the Foreign (Political) and Foreign (Secret) series.

The documents (folded) are gradually becoming brittle, and are preserved in one carton box. These are indexed along with other papers of the Foreign (Political) and Foreign (Secret) series, but are without any subject-list.

The problem of brigandage existed almost all over India during the first quarter of the nineteenth century. A "Thagi Department" was set up in the Political Department in 1829 under F.C. Smith, and Captain W.H. Sleeman (afterwards Major General Sir William H. Sleeman) was appointed as his adjutant and assistant. Since then systematic operations for the suppression of "tha7i" began.

On 24 April 1839 Sleeman (then Major) was appointed as "Commissioner for the Suppression of Decoity", in addition to his existing duties. By 1863, the Thagi and Dakaiti Department became defunct as a special agency in British territory, but maintained exclusively by the Government of India in the Princely Indian States. From 1883 the operations, however, were confined to the limits of Hyderabad, Rajputana and Central India. On 1 October 1887 a Central Special Branch and Local Special Branches were the Department, however, were made from time to time.

The subject on suppression of 'thagi' and dacoity was the concern of Judicial and Internal Branches of the Foreign Department. The group of Thagi and Djkaiti Department Papers (1889-1897) under reference consists of a few isolated reports, memoranda in manuscript and print, and negative photo-copies of documents, without bearing the name of any branch.

The Article (4) of the Durand Agreement of 1893 provided that a frontier line between India and Afghanistan should be laid down in detail and demarcated, wherever practicable for Joint British and Afghan Commissioners. Accordingly, the demarcation of the frontier in the vicinity of Dokhalim (or Alim Dok) was effected in 1895 by British and Afghan Commissioners. The question of boundary line between Chitral and Afghanistan still remained to be settled. A British Mission for Kabul started functioning from 18 December 1920. The Mission headed by Sir Henry Dobbs, Chief British Representative, arrived in Kabul in January 1921, worked till 6 December 1921, and submitted a report on the negotiations on 9 February 1922.

During the years 1920-1927, the Government of India played host to some Royal Visitors from England, Belgium and Sweden. For each visit, a separate office was created to deal with the Royal Visitors' tour programme in various places in India. The Prince of Wales (who later became Edward VIII in 1936) arrived in India on 21 December 1920, and stayed till April 1921. Months before his arrival an office, viz., "His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales' Tour Office" was created. The Duke of Connaught arrived in February 1920, and an office, viz., "His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught's Tour Office" was likewise set up. The Prince and Princess Arthur of Connaught landed at Bombay on 6 December 1924, and an office, viz., "Office of the Military Secretary to His Royal Highness Prince Arthur of Connaught" was again set up. The Crown Prince and Crown Prince of Sweden toured India from 3 December 1926 to 15 January 1927, and an office, viz., "Office of the Military Secretary, Swedish Royal Tour" was similarly set up. The King and Queen of Belgium visited India from 11 September to 18 October 1925, and an office, viz., "Office of the Military Secretary, Belgian Royal Tour" was as usual, also set up.

The Viceroy and the Foreign and Political Department were directly concerned with the Royal Visitors' tours in India. The files on these tour programmes were, therefore, preserved along with the records of the Foreign and Political Department in separate groups. The files bear their subjects on the covers, and are serially numbered in each group, as A/1, A/2, A/3...; B/1, B/2, B/3...; C/1, C/2, C/3 and so on. All serial numbers in the groups, however, are not preserved. The files are neither indexed, nor listed with subjects.

On the conclusion of the Third Anglo-Afghan War (April-May 1919), the British Government expressed their desire to give a free band to Afghanistan to regulate its foreign relations. By another treaty made in 1921, both parties agreed to respect each other's independence. In January 1922, an accredited British Minister was appointed to reside, henceforth, in Kabul and the British Legation was established there.

The files of the British Legation in Kabul (1927-37) transferred to the National Archives of India mainly relate to some aspects of Anglo-Afghan relations, and the internal situation in Afghanistan during the period. The files are not indexed, but a rough subject-list in pencil mostly without indicating the years of the files, is available for official use. Some of the subjects are quoted below:

1. One solitary file (F.No.695/1944) on the disposal of property of Uttam Chand is also preserved in bundle No.13. Uttam Chand helped Netaji Subhas Chandra Bose to escape from Afghanistan during the World War II. The file which was preserved in the British Legation, Kabul, was sent by the Embassy of India, Kabul to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, on 22 September 1957, for onward transmission to the National Archives of India. (B) PERSIAN DEPARTMENT (1755-1888)

I. ORGANIZATIONAL CHANGES

II. RECORDS SERIES AND THEIR FINDING AIDS
Persian continued to be the court language in India during 18th and early 19th centuries, and the East India Company's political and diplomatic transactions with the Indian Powers, land owners, notables and the neighbouring potentates were conducted mainly in that language. Although the major bulk of the official archives of the East India Company is in English, the Persian correspondence comes next in volume and in importance. The Persian correspondence takes a definite shape after the victory of the English over Nawab Siraj-ud-Daulah at Plassey in 1757, which gave them de facto political status in the country. The part of the Secretariat, where this class of work used to be done was known as the Persian Department. In the beginning this department was looked after by a Persian Translator, who had his Deputy and Assistant attached to his office. This department was mainly engaged in English-Persian translation of letters and documents received and issued. There was also a French and Dutch Translator for translation of French and Dutch communications into English. Subsequently a translator for the Marathi language was added to this department on a temporary basis. In course of time the Persian Department had in its establishment translators also for other oriental languages.

The Secret Department came into existence on 1 January 1764, and was entrusted with all matters relating to diplomatic and political. The recording of the Company's consultations on foreign nations commenced in a distinct "Foreign" series from 10 December 1783, and a Foreign Department was created from that date. (This department was also known as Secret and Foreign Department from 31 May 1786.) Nearly six years later, the recording of consultations on the political affairs of the Princely Indian States started in a separate "Political" series from 15 May 1789, and a Political Department was constituted from that date. The Persian Department, therefore, became an adjunct or subordinate office of the Secret, Foreign and Political Departments.

3. The Secret, Foreign and Political Departments formed into branches of a new Foreign Department, when the latter was formed on 1 May 1843.
With the expansion of British dominion in the country, the Persian Department gained importance. Lord Wellesley founded the College of Fort William at Calcutta on 4 May 1800 for instruction of the Junior Civil Servants of the Company in various subjects, including oriental languages, to qualify them for the discharge of their administrative duties. The first examination in the college was held in July 1801, and significantly it was about that time the office of the Persian Translator and his establishment of writers, munshis etc. were annexed to the office of the Secretary in the Secret, Political and Foreign Departments.

Neil Benjamin Simonstone, who was appointed as the Secretary in the Secret, Political and Foreign Departments on 1 January 1801, and a member of the Fort William College Council on 24 April 1801, also acted as the Persian Translator under the designation of Persian Secretary with effect from 20 July 1801.

5. Home (Public), 23 July 1801, No. 59.

8. Home (Public), 23 July 1801, No. 59; Foreign (Political), 23 July, No. 39, Volume No. 174, pp. 512-513 (Governor General's Minute dated 19 March 1801); Foreign (Miscellaneous Records), No. 9, p. 19.
Thus Edmonstone became the first Persian Secretary to the Government of Fort William. In the conduct of Persian correspondence, Claud Russel and M. I. Monckton were appointed as Senior and Second Assistants respectively to the Persian Secretary. The Persian Secretary had a number of other European and Indian Assistants, the chief among the latter was called Mir Munshi.

On account of great amount of business in the Secret, Political, Foreign, as well as Persian Departments, Sir George Barlow, the officiating Governor General separated the office of the Persian Secretary from the office of the Secretary in the Secret, Political and Foreign Departments on 10 July 1806. The Persian Secretary, henceforth, was exclusively engaged "to attend to the concerns, and interests of the class of natives who by rank and situation should be placed in direct communication with Government to conduct the Governor General's Persian correspondence". Apart from the political and diplomatic correspondence, the Persian Secretary also carried on correspondence on the subject of education from July 1823 to August 1830. For sometime the issue of Passports was also included among the duties of the Persian Department. On 27 August 1830 the post of the Persian Secretary was abolished and his establishment became a branch of the Political Department under the name of the Persian Office.

On 1 June 1833 an office of the "Native Correspondence" was set up under the Political Department, which used to deal with the correspondence in all oriental languages. Subsequently, the nomenclature "Persian Office" was revived in the Foreign Department. On 1 January 1914 the Foreign Department was designated as Foreign and Political Department. When the Foreign and Political Department was bifurcated into two separate departments on 1 April 1937, viz., (i) External Affairs Department, and (ii) Political Department, the Persian Office was also split up into two sections under these two departments. In the External Affairs Department, its nomenclature remained as "Persian Office", while in the Political Department it was known as "Vernacular Office."

13. Foreign (Political), 6 June 1833, No. 133.
After the Imperial Record Department came into existence on 11 March 1891 (renamed as National Archives of India from 30 August 1947), the records received here from the Foreign Department for preservation included a large collection of Persian letters received and issued, farmons, sanads, treaties, newspapers etc. From March 1902 it was found desirable of treating the Persian papers as a separate whole, and steps were taken to have them arranged and classified. Thus, though the Persian papers are part of the Foreign Department records, they are arranged, classified and preserved as a distinct series under the nomenclature "Persian Department".

The majority of the Persian letters preserved in the National Archives of India are in the Shikastah or 'broken style', and a few are in the nasta'liq or 'regular script'. The language gradually degenerated from a classical standard as Persian fell into disuse and local vernaculars took its place in the law courts. The change is most marked during the latter half of the nineteenth century. Besides Persian, fairly a large number of Arabic, Sanskrit, Bengali, Hindi, Urdu, Surumukhi, Oriya, Marathi, Tamil, Telugu, Kanarese, Malayalam, Sikkimese, Bhutanese, Siamese, Tibetan, Burmese, and Chinese documents are also available amongst the records of the Persian Department. Many documents are artistically illuminated.

14. The Treaties, Conventions etc., in the Foreign Department, also contain documents in other European languages. Specimens of letters in Persian and other oriental languages are noted in Item No. 1: Correspondence (1753–1882).

The India Office Library and Records, London, has in its custody the "Bengal Secret Persian Correspondence" (1788-1824) (V/P & S Series). This consists of translation of letters to and from Indian and certain other Asian rulers. The following two series are available there:

(i) Letters Received (1 January 1788-31 December 1824, and stray papers upto 1880), and
(ii) Letters Sent (1 January 1788-31 December 1824).

The Home Miscellaneous Series (1600-1900) (H Series) in the India Office Library and Records contains a number of letters to and from the Indian Princes in the time of Lord Clive, Warren Hastings and Lord Cornwallis (Volumes 193-194, 201-203, and 15 252-253).

The private papers, farmans, parwanas, collections, etc., acquired by the National Archives of India from other sources, will be covered in a separate part of the Guide. These include:

(i) Inayat Jung Collection relating to the Mujhal Viceregal royalty in the Deccan from the time of Emperors Aurangzeb to Shah Alam II (1685-1774 A.D.) numbering 1,37,777 documents, and

(ii) Farmans, parwanas and other papers in Persian and Urdu ranging from 15th to 20th century.
The Correspondence with Fort William (Nos. 1-14 of the list) consists of letters written mostly in Persian, as well as in other oriental languages, e.g., Hindi, Marathi, Bengali, Tamil, Telugu etc., between the East India Company's officials, viz., Governors, Political Residents, Secretaries to the Persian and Foreign Departments on the one hand, and the Princely Indian Rulers, chiefs, nobles, notables etc., on the other. The correspondence includes letters addressed to and received from the Rajas of Nepal, the Amirs of Afghanistan, the Shah of Persia, the Imams of Muscat, the Pashas of Egypt, the Amirs of Jeddah and Baghdad, the Chief of Kashgar, the rulers of Bhutan and Sikkim, the Lamas of Tibet, the King of Siam, the chiefs of Malaya- Archipelago etc. The bulk of the correspondence contains material on political and administrative matters, although quite a number of letters are of complimentary nature. The English translation of Persian letters received and issued are also in abundance in this series. The English translation (typescripts) of Persian letters from the Princely Indian Rulers, chiefs etc., addressed to Lord Minto I, the Governor General (No. 8 of the list), were acquired from the Minto family in England.
The Correspondence with Fort St. George (Nos. 15-17 of the list) consists of copies of letters exchanged between the Governor of Fort St. George, other officials, and the Princely Rulers, nobles, jagirdars, etc.

The Correspondence-Miscellaneous (Nos. 18-23 of the list) consists mostly of complimentary letters from the chiefs of the Princely States and private individuals, petitions from various persons, etc.

English Translations of Persian Letters Received (10 volumes: typescript).

The typescripts are English translation of some of the political correspondence in Persian from the chiefs, nobles and magnates of India addressed to Lord Minto, the Governor General.

During 1907-19 a large number of records were received in India from the Minto family in England. These were compared with those in the National Archives of India (then Imperial Record Department) and copies were made of all such as were wanting amongst the records of the Government of India (see also I.R.D. Proceedings, August 1918, No. 26). The following ten volumes, each with an Index are available: Volume I (January-June 1808), Volume II (July-December 1808), Volume III (January-June 1809), Volume IV (July-December 1809), Volume V (January-June 1810), Volume VI (July-December 1810), Volume VII (January-June 1811), Volume VIII (July-December 1811), Volume IX (January-October 1813), and Volume X (English Abstracts and Extracts of Letters Received and Issued) (with Index) (1807-13).

2. PROCEEDINGS (1790-1877)

These proceedings are of two categories viz., (i) Persian Department Proceedings and Consultations (in English) (Nos. 24-25 of the list), and (ii) Durbar Proceedings (in Persian and a few in Urdu) (Nos. 26-27 of the list). There is slight difference between the Persian Department Proceedings and the proceedings in other departments. While in other departments, the proceedings are those of the regular meetings of the Council, these proceedings are generally the record of the work done in the Persian Department. The correspondence with the General Committee of Public Instruction, and on educational matters are also available in them.

The Government of the day was still wedded to the oriental idea of education, with its emphasis on Sanskrit and Persian learning. The educational matters, therefore, from 18 July 1823 were

1. The General Committee of Public Instruction was appointed on 31 July 1823, which was entrusted mainly with the duties of ascertaining the state of education in the Bengal Presidency (Foreign, Political, 15 August 1823, No. 65). (See also "Miscellaneous Records" of the Foreign Department, No. 178).
placed under the administrative control of the Persian Branch of the Political Department, the correspondence being conducted through the Persian Secretary. The control on education remained under the Political Department till 27 August 1830, when consequent on the abolition of the post of Persian Secretary, the subject was transferred to the General Department.

The Durbar Proceedings are the diaries of the Durbars and leves held by the Governors General during their tours in Upper India. They contain accounts of the presents exchanged between the Government, the Princely Chiefs and other notables, and the interviews of the Governors General with them.

The following illustrate the nature of the contents available

Persian Department Proceedings (1823-1829)

institution, but desires the Committee to make an endeavour to introduce it in the course of education

27. Durbar Proceedings (in Persian) 1791-1877
(Unbound: printed, in 3 carton boxes).

(i) These are printed copies of proclamations and programmes.

Ever since the introduction of the English commerce in India, the English East India Company's officials had repeatedly attempted to secure favourable trading privileges, both from the Mughal Emperors and other Provincial Governors. The other European Companies also did not lag behind in similar efforts. The commodities produced in India had lucrative market. The Mughal Emperors and the Provincial Governors conferred various trading privileges to the merchants by granting 'farmans' or charters, and 'nishans' or letter patents. After the English East India Company acquired territorial rights in India, they concluded various political and commercial treaties with the Princely Rulers and the other European powers in India. The English also bestowed 'sanads' or diplomas carrying rewards of different kinds on Rajas, Zamindars, subordinate officials and others in recognition of their services. The process continued after the British Crown took over the Indian Administration from the East India Company, and treaties were also concluded with the neighbouring countries of India.

The farmans (1633-1712) (No. 28 of the list) of Shah Jahan, Shah Suja, and others are photo-copies obtained from the British Museum, London. These are bound in one volume. The original treaties (1759-1890) (No. 29 of the list) are in loose sheets or are mounted on cloth and rollers. These treaties belong to the Foreign and Political Departments, although many of them are in Persian language and are, therefore, retained in a separate almirah. No. 30 of the list is their printed catalogue. The texts and translations of most of these treaties have been published in "A Collection of Treaties, Engagements and Sanads relating to India and Neighbouring Countries", Vols. I-XIV, by C.U. Aitchison.

Other treaties and sanads and some of their lists, which belong to the Persian Department are mentioned at Nos. 31-35 of the list.

The treaties, conventions and other allied documents in various languages (1880-1946), which do not belong to the Persian Department, are also retained in another separate almirah (see Appendix-XX).

The volume (1633-1712) contains photo-copies of Farmans in Persian relating to the English trade, particularly in Bengal and Orissa, with their English translations in transcripts. These Farmans of Shah Jahan, Shah Suja and others are available in the British Museum, London (Additional Manuscript No. 24039). The photo-copies of the Farmans along with their English translations were received from William Foster, Registrar and Superintendent of Records, India Office, London with his letter dated 26 August 1915 addressed to A.F. Scholfield, Officer-in-Charge of the Records of the Government of India.

(in English and Persian)
(Unbound: manuscript, in one Godrej Almirah)

The Treaties from 1 December 1759 to 17 March 1890 are preserved in one Godrej Almirah. These Treaties belong to the Foreign Department, but all of them whether in English, Persian or any other language are retained at one place.

30. List of Treaties, Engagements and Sanads in the Custody of the Imperial Record Department
(Published by the Imperial Record Department, New Delhi, 1941)

This is a consolidated printed catalogue of the original Treaties, Engagements and Sanads from 1 December 1759 to 30 August 1880, and one Convention with China relating to Sikkim and Tibet dated 17 March 1890. The texts and translations.

* The Ministry of States merged with the Ministry of Home Affairs on 10 January 1955. A fresh batch of Treaties, Conventions and other allied documents in various languages (1880-1946) comprising 25 bundles (in 517 covers and 2 rolls) which had remained in the custody of the Ministry of States, was received in the National Archives of India from the Ministry of Home Affairs in February 1955 (see Appendix XX).
of most of the Treaties have been published in A Collection of Treaties, Engagements and Sanads relating to India and Neighbouring Countries, Vols. I-XIV, by C. U. Aitchison. References with regard to the entries of these Treaties in Aitchison's volumes are indicated in the catalogue (see also Appendix-XX).

4. PERSIAN AND URDU NEWSPAPERS (1824-1862)

Some of the copies of Persian and Urdu Newspapers published in between December 1824 and December 1845 (No. 36 of the list), one volume of Government Gazette of Newspapers (in Persian and Urdu) (No. 37 of the list), and a register of newspapers (in Persian) (No. 38 of the list) are retained in the Persian Department. The journals have their lacunae. For example, Jam-i-Jahan Numa, the first Hindusthani or Urdu news weekly in India commenced its publication at Calcutta from 8 March 1822. From its eighth number (16 May 1822) it was converted into a Persian-Urdu bi-lingual periodical. But its numbers are available only from December 1824 onwards, and they are also not continuous. Similarly, Mah-i-Alam Afroz started its publication from 1833, but its numbers are available only from January 1836.

1. An application from Hari Har Dutt of Calcutta for a licence for the publication of Jam-i-Jahan Numa. Lala Sada Sukh was the editor, and William Hopkins Pearce was the printer of the journal. Hari Har Dutt, who was its owner, was connected with a mercantile firm at Calcutta. The scope and object of the journal were declared to be "the promulgation of articles on news from the English papers etc., the procuring and making known of intelligence of all that passed in the principal cities of Hindusthan, whether within the Company's territories or outside". (Home, Public, 8 May 1823, Nos. 48-51).

2. Permission was granted to Wahaj-ud-deen Muhammad of Calcutta to print and publish Mah-i-Alam Afroz (Home, Public, 22 March 1833, Nos. 33-35).
The news from various places covered by some of the numbers of these journals are mentioned below:

(i) Jam-i-Jahan Numa:
News from Martaban (Burma); and Poona and Jaipur (12 January 1825, No. 83; and 12 June 1825, No. 135).

News from England, Jaipur, Jodhpur and Rangoon (26 August 1838, No. 130).

(iii) Sultan-ul-Akhbar:

(v) Akhbar-i-Ludhiana:

News about the Mughal Emperor and the English (31 May 1840, No. 171).

The Alqabnamas contain titles and forms of address observed by the East India Company's servants and British officials in their day-to-day correspondence with the Princes and notables of India and the neighbouring countries during 18th and 19th centuries. The history of the titles or forms of address throw light indirectly on the development of the concept of sovereignty and the status of nobility. The earliest entry in the Alqabnamas is dated 27 June 1798 (Vol. 69, p.275).

The following Alqabnamas are preserved:

40. Index to Titles (1798-1885), as Recorded in the Alqabnamas or Books of Titles and Forms of Address (National Archives of India, New Delhi) (In the Press)
The Mutiny Papers are a collection of the correspondence between those who took part in the Great Revolt of 1857 at Delhi and the Mughal Emperor, his Commander-in-Chief, and other Princes, as well as other miscellaneous papers connected with the Rebellion. The papers were in the custody of the Commission of Delhi and were transferred to the National Archives of India (then Imperial Record Department) by the Punjab Government in 1899.

Some of the papers are in Persian, but majority are in Urdu, some are in English, mostly translation of the Persian and Urdu papers. A few are letters from the English spies. One paper contains the defence of Bahadur Shah. The Persian and Urdu newspapers of the time, and their extracts are also preserved in the collection. There are, however, some private letters, including a few pre-Mutiny papers, having no bearing on the Revolt. Certain post-Mutiny papers are also available in the collection.

Most of these papers are found either in the palace, or in the camp of the rebel army, by the British troops after the capture of Delhi. These were brought together for the purpose of trial of Bahadur Shah, which lasted from 27 January to 9 March 1858. (see also No.376 of the "Miscellaneous Records" in the Foreign Department).

7. MISCELLANEOUS RECORDS (1769-1877)

In addition to the records listed in the previous pages, the following "Miscellaneous Records" are preserved in the Persian Department. These are in Persian as well as in English, bound in folio volumes and unbound. Nos. 56-58 of the list relate to seal - inscriptions and are useful material for sigillography, i.e., the study of seals. It may be noted that the National Archives of India has taken up a project of cataloguing the seals found on original documents lying in its custody:

I. ORGANISATIONAL CHANGES

II. RECORDS SERIES AND THEIR FINDING AIDS
I. ORGANISATIONAL CHANGES

A large number of British Indian subjects and subjects of the Indian States used to proceed to countries overseas for the purpose of engaging themselves in skilled and unskilled work. But very little is known of the attitude of the Government of India with regard to the Indian colonists before the abolition of slavery in the British colonies in 1834.¹ That year perhaps gave the first impetus to Indian emigration to the British and French colonies. The Government of India passed Act V of 1837, which was the first general law regulating emigration. The Act applied only to the Presidency of Fort William. The Governments of Madras and Bombay, however, urged the extension of the measure to their territories, and accordingly the Act XXXII of 1837 was passed on 20 November 1837. It repealed the Act V of 1837, and re-enacted it for the whole of the territories of the East India Company.²

² Royal Commission on Decentralisation (Note on Emigration) by G. Rainy, Simla, 1907, pp.1-2.
Thereafter years rolled, and many Acts were passed subsequently. But owing to the absence of a permanent and satisfactory departmental arrangement at the headquarters of the Government of India, the interests of the Indians abroad suffered greatly. The Indians were scattered throughout, Africa, Mauritius, Madagascar, Fiji, Ceylon, British Malaya, East Indies, West Indies, British Guiana, Brazil etc. as well as other countries in Europe, America, and Asia. When, in consequence of the Government of India Act of 1935, Burma was separated from India, a few million Indians were left in that country.

The subject connected with Indians in overseas countries under the heading 'Emigration' came within the jurisdiction of various departments of the Government of India from time to time. The subject was dealt with in Home Department (Public Branch, and Legislative Branch), from 1830 to 1871. The subject moved to Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce Department (Emigration Branch), when it was created on 6 June\(^3\) 1871, to Home, Revenue and Agricultural Department (Emigration Branch) on its constitution on 1 July 1879,\(^4\) to Revenue and Agricultural Department (Emigration Branch) on its formation on 6 July\(^5\) 1881, and to Commerce and Industry Department (Emigration Branch) on its creation on 1 March 1905\(^6\) (Commerce and Industry Department was designated as Commerce Department on 1 March 1920)\(^7\). On 5 July 1920 the control of 'Emigration' was divided between (i) Commerce Department (Emigration Branch), and (ii) Foreign and Political Department (mainly in General and External Branches, and in a few cases in other Territorial Branches).\(^8\) The Foreign and Political Department was made responsible for emigration to Egypt, Palestine, Mesopotamia, and foreign countries other than Surinam, while the Commerce Department continued to deal with emigration except to Egypt, Palestine, Mesopotamia, and foreign countries other than Surinam.\(^9\) On 3 August 1921 the subject on emigration dealt with in Commerce Department was transferred back to Revenue and Agricultural Department (Emigration Branch).\(^10\)

But the inter-provincial migration continued to be dealt with in Commerce Department till November 1921, when it was transferred to Industries Department (redesignated as Industries and Labour Department on 16 April 1923).

The (i) Education and Health Department, and (ii) Revenue and Agricultural Department were amalgamated to form a combined Department of Education, Health and Lands with effect from 16 April 1923. The subject on emigration dealt with in (i) Revenue and Agricultural Department, and (ii) Industries and Labour Department was placed under the charge of the Education, Health and Lands Department, and the nomenclature of the Branch dealing with the subject was changed to Overseas Branch. In 1932 the work connected with 'Lands' (in Education, Health and Lands Department: Land Revenue Branch) was transferred to Overseas Branch, designating the latter as Lands and Overseas (L & O) Branch. The subject on 'Lands' was again shifted to the Forests Branch (in Education, Health and Lands Department) in 1938, and the Lands and Overseas Branch was reverted to its earlier name as Overseas Branch.

12. Industries and Labour Department, General, Filed, August 1923, Nos.9-10 (File No.G-55/1923).

The question relating to the protection of Indians domiciled in other parts of the world (notably in British dominions), or seeking admittance into these territories against local laws, or unfairly discriminatory, or oppressive administrative action, had loomed largely on the political horizon in India. The Indian public opinion, both inside and outside the country, had long been urging the necessity of creating a separate portfolio, or department (other than Education, Health and Lands Department) in the Government of India, to deal with the affairs concerning the Indians abroad, and to keep the Government and the people of India in close touch with their general condition, political, social and economic well-being.

A new Indians Overseas Department was, therefore, created on 14 October 1941 to deal with the following heads of business (see Appendix-XI), with C.S. Bozeman as its Secretary:

1. Regulation of emigration from India to other parts of the British Commonwealth (including questions relating to rights and status of such emigrants), and of the entry into India of immigrants from such parts.

2. Pilgrimage to Hejaz, other than pilgrimage to Hejaz, via Iraq.

3. Repatriation of Indians from other parts of the British Commonwealth and of Indian Pilgrims stranded at Jedda.

The Indians Overseas Department dealt with the above mentioned subjects in the following Sections: (i) Overseas, (ii) Evacuation I, (iii) Evacuation II, (iv) Political (Evacuation), and (v) Hajj and General. The Overseas Section was inherited from the Education, Health and Lands Department from 14 October 1941. The Evacuation I and II Sections were created in April 1942. The Political (Evacuation) Section with its staff, was transferred from the Home Department on 1 October 1943. The affairs concerning the Hajj Pilgrimage were inherited from the Education, Health and Lands Department, and came under the jurisdiction of Hajj and General Section.

The records of the Overseas Section (1941-1944), and Hajj and General Section (1941-1944) created in the Indians Overseas Department are available. The records of the Evacuation I and Evacuation II Sections (1942-1944) are retained and indexed along with the records of the Overseas Section. The records of the Political (Evacuation) Section (1941-1943) originated in the Home Department, and were transferred to the National Archives of India along with the other records of the Indians Overseas Department.
The Indians Overseas Department was renamed as Commonwealth Relations Department with effect from 30 March 1944 (see Appendix-XII), and all these Sections, viz., (i), (ii), (iii), (iv) and (v), continued to function as separate sections under the latter.
II. RECORDS SERIES AND THEIR FINDING AIDS

1. OVERSEAS SECTION (1941-1944)

Prior to the formation of the Indians Overseas Department on 14 October 1941 (see (Appendix-XI), the affairs concerning the Indians in foreign countries, and emigration of the Indians were dealt with in the Overseas Section of the Education, Health and Lands Department. The Overseas Section continued to function under the Indian Overseas Department with effect from 14 October 1941, and was responsible for the following matters:

1. Regulation of emigration from India to other parts of the British Commonwealth, and the rights and status of such emigrants.

2. Immigration to India from the British Commonwealth countries.

3. Repatriation of Indians from other parts of the British Commonwealth.

The subject on emigration of Indians from 1830 to 1949, especially the emigration of Indian labour to colonial plantations, came within the purview of various departments of the Government of India from time to time in the following chronological order. The indexes to the documents during this period are available under their respective creating departments. Even the earlier papers of the Council of Fort William preserved in the Home (Public) Department from 1755 onwards provide instances of Indian slaves being exploited outside the country:-
1. Home Department (Public Branch) (1830-1871) (and also in Legislative Branch, but the records of the Legislative Branch are preserved in Legislative Department).

2. Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce Department (Emigration Branch) (1871-1879).

3. Home, Revenue and Agricultural Department (Emigration Branch) (1879-1881).

4. Revenue and Agricultural Department (Emigration Branch) (1881-1905).

5. Commerce and Industry Department (Emigration Branch) (1905-1920).

6. Commerce Department (Emigration Branch) (1920-1921).

7. In 1920, a portion of emigration work was transferred from Commerce Department to Foreign and Political Department (General, External and other Territorial Branches). The rest of the work remained with Commerce Department.

8. Revenue and Agricultural Department (Emigration Branch) (1921-1923).

(From August to November 1921; the work relating to inter-provincial migration continued to be dealt with in Commerce Department, when it was transferred to Industries Department, redesignated as Industries and Labour Department in 1923).

10. Indians Overseas Department (Overseas Section) (1941-1944).

11. Commonwealth Relations Department/Ministry of External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations (C.R. Wing) (Overseas Sections) (1944-1949), and (Emigration Section) (1944-1949).

12. Ministry of External Affairs (SIM Section, and other Territorial Sections (1949 -).

(In 1954, an Emigration Section was functioning under the African Division in the Ministry of External Affairs).
The records relating to legislation and various Acts passed on emigration by the Government of India, are available in the Legislative Department. The cases relating to immigrants and entry into India of individuals from Commonwealth countries were also dealt with in Home Department/Ministry of Home Affairs (Political-External, and Foreigners Sections), except immigrants, and individuals from Commonwealth countries to which the Reciprocity Act applied.

Besides, a large number of records on emigration are also preserved in the Maharashtra, Tamil Nadu, and West Bengal State Archives.

The Indians Overseas Department was renamed as Commonwealth Relations Department on 30 March 1944 (see Appendix-XII), and the Overseas Section continued to function under the latter. Subsequently the Overseas Section was split up into Overseas I, II, III, IV and V Sections.

2. HAJJ AND GENERAL (H & G) SECTION (1941-1944)

The performance of the Hajj as a religious duty by all Muslims, who are able to do it, is enjoined by the Holy Quran. The scene of the pilgrimage is Mecca and localities nearby, Mina, Arafat, and Muzdalfa. But the pilgrims usually confine to Hajj with a visit to the city of Medina, dear to the Muslims by its association with the life of the Holy Prophet, and the early history of Islam. By far the greatest number of Indians who go on Hajj, travel to the port of Jedda in the Hejaz on authorised pilgrim ships.

2. Ibid.
Pilgrimages to places beyond India is the responsibility of the Central Government, vide Article 17 of the Seventh Schedule of the Government of India Act, 1935. However, in the pre-Second World War years, the Government of India took no direct responsibility either for the provision of shipping for pilgrims to the Hajaz, or for booking of passages etc. The interest of the pilgrims was looked after by the Port Hajj Committees set up at Calcutta, Bombay, and Karachi, under the Port Hajj Committees Act No.XX of 1932, and came into operation in the first half of 1934. The Government of India paid subsidies at Calcutta and Bombay on "cover the deficit basis", while the Committee at Karachi was self-sufficient. Besides the above statutory bodies, there were also Provincial Hajj Committees of Malabar, U.P., N.W.F.P., and Assam. In 1938, for administrative reasons the statutory functions relating to the Port Hajj Committees exercised by the Central Government were delegated to the Provincial Governments. The Government of India prepared the estimate of costs of Hajj pilgrimage, approved the sailing programmes of pilgrim ships, and determined the fares from different ports in India to Jeddah, in case of competitive fares between different companies. The Central Government was responsible for the administration of Part IV of the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1923 relating to pilgrim ships, the Indian Pilgrim Ships Rules, 1933, the Port Hajj Committees Act, 1932 and the rules framed thereunder. Special arrangement was also made for the vaccination and inoculation of Hajj pilgrims at the ports of embarkation. Besides, the Government of India also incurred expenditure on police guards provided for pilgrim duty at the ports, and repatriation of destitute pilgrims from Jeddah. Under the Anglo-Putch Agreement of 1926, the Government of India was also responsible for the administration of the Kamaran Quarantine Station set up under the provisions of the International Sanitary Convention, 1926. The statutory functions delegated to the Provincial Governments, however, were resumed by the Central Government in June 1945, and the Port Hajj Committees were directly placed under the Government of India. 5

The pilgrimage to places beyond India was dealt with by the Education, Health and Lands Department (Overseas Section)

till 13 October 1941. The subject relating to pilgrimage to Hejaz, other than pilgrimage to Hejaz via Iraq, and repatriation of Indian pilgrims stranded at Jedda, was taken over by the Indians Overseas Department, when it was constituted on 14 October 1941, and was assigned to its Hajj and General Section. The External Affairs Department on the other hand, dealt with the work connected with the pilgrimage from India to Iraq and Iran, and that portion of the Hajj pilgrimage which related to the travel of foreign pilgrims to Mecca, via India.

3. POLITICAL (EVACUATION) SECTION (1941-1943)

The subject relating to evacuation of European and non-European political refugees in India during the Second World War was the responsibility of the Political (Evacuation) Section of the Home Department. A post of Officer-on-Special Duty was created in the Home Department for dealing with the evacuation work with effect from 1 December 1941. The Political (Evacuation) Section along with its staff and records was taken over by the Indians Overseas Department on 1 October 1943. The records of the Political (Evacuation) Section created in the Indians Overseas Department from 1943 are not, however, transferred but those from 1944 onwards are available in the Commonwealth Relations Department.

(D) COMMONWEALTH RELATIONS DEPARTMENT/
COMMONWEALTH RELATIONS (C.R. WING)
(1944-1949)

I. ORGANISATIONAL CHANGES

II. RECORDS SERIES AND THEIR
FINDING AIDS
The Indians Overseas Department which was created on 14 October 1941 mainly to regulate the emigration and immigration between India and British Commonwealth countries, and pilgrimage to Hedjaz was renamed as Commonwealth Relations Department with effect from 30 March 1944 (see Appendix-XII). So long India's relations with the Empire countries were conducted partly by the Indians Overseas Department and partly by the Commerce Department. Henceforth the Commonwealth Relations Department was entrusted with the conduct of relations between India and the Dominions (which included British Colonies, Protectorates and Trust Territories), in addition to the functions which were inherited from the Indians Overseas Department. The External Affairs Department for all practical purposes was an Agent of the British Government in the United Kingdom responsible for conducting the foreign relations of the British Empire with countries on India's frontiers. That department also had a special responsibility for the Tribal Areas both on the North-West Frontier (including Baluchistan) and the North-East Frontier of India. With the formation of the Commonwealth Relations Department, the responsibility of the External Affairs Department for the conduct of relations with these countries and areas, and of the Commerce Department for the conduct of commercial relations with all countries, however, remained unchanged.

The Commonwealth Relations Department was made responsible for the following subjects:

1. Conduct of relations between India and the Dominions.

2. Welfare and safeguarding of interests of Indians proceeding to or domiciled in other parts of the British Commonwealth.

3. Administration of the Indians Emigration Act and the rules framed thereunder.

4. Regulation of emigration from India to other parts of the British Commonwealth.

5. Administration of the Reciprocity Act, 1943 and the Reciprocity (South Africa) rules, 1944, framed thereunder.

6. Enquiries in respect of relatives in India of Indians domiciled in South Africa and Northern and Southern Rhodesias for purposes of their entry into those countries.

7. Miscellaneous enquiries in respect of Dominions and Colonies within British Commonwealth.

8. Repatriation of indigent Indians from Dominions and Colonies.

9. Pilgrimage to Hedjaz, other than pilgrimage to Hedjaz via Iraq.

10. Repatriation of Indian pilgrims stranded at Jedda.

(11) Whereabouts and welfare of British subjects stranded in Japanese occupied territories within or, without the Empire.

(12) Maintenance of evacuees in India, including questions relating to employment of evacuees other than Government servants and European British subjects.

(13) Repatriation from India of evacuees of their homes and questions connected therewith.

(14) Immigration into India in relation to Reciprocity Act, 1943.

(From 26 August 1946 some functions were redistributed amongst the Home, External Affairs, and Commonwealth Relations Department, see Appendix XIII).

The Indians Overseas Department had under its control Government of India's Representatives in South Africa, Malaya, Ceylon and Burma. With the formation of the Commonwealth Relations Department, more representatives were appointed from time to time in other Commonwealh countries.

The Interim Government in India was formed on 2 September 1946, and Jawaharlal Nehru, the Vice-President of the Interim Government took over the charge of the External Affairs Department and the Commonwealth Relations Department. The actual overseas work of the two departments differed in technique by reason of the fact that while the former was concerned with India's relations with foreign countries, the latter dealt with areas in the British Commonwealth. Furthermore, while the former discharged a special responsibility for the Tribal Areas both on the North West Frontier and the North-East Frontier, the latter dealt with the special problems arising out of large number of Indians in Commonwealth countries. Both the departments were concerned with a growing number of activities which were at least parallel and frequently identical, and in these the highest possible degree of co-ordination was desirable. Such activities were factual research, historical, political, economic, protocol, preparation of treaties, issue of passports and permits of all kinds for the movement of Indians abroad and for their protection, service and establishment cases arising particularly, from the creation of the new Foreign Service in October 1946. Administrative convenience needed for a single department to conduct India's foreign relations, whether with Commonwealth countries or others.\(^2\)

The Commonwealth Relations Department, therefore, combined with the External Affairs Department on 1 June 1947 forming into one Department of External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations with two distinct wings, viz., (i) External Affairs Wing, and (ii) Commonwealth Relations Wing (see Appendix-XV). On 29 August 1947 the External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations Department was designated as Ministry of External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations,\(^3\) and Jawaharlal Nehru, the first Prime Minister of India, remained in charge of the portfolio. To co-ordinate and supervise the work of both the wings of the Ministry, a post of Secretary General^4 (Girija Shankar Bajpai) was created earlier on 27 June 1947. The records of the Evacuation I and II Sections in the Indians Overseas Department are not preserved as separate series, but are numbered along with the files of Overseas (OS) Section. The following items of work were allotted to these sections:

The Political (Evacuation) Section which was transferred with its staff from the Home Department to the Indians Overseas Department on 1 October 1943, continued to function under the Commonwealth Relations Department with effect from 30 March 1944. The work connected with European refugees in India was taken over by the High Commissioner for the U.K. in India on 1 September 1947.

Consequent upon the partition of the Indian Sub-Continent into India and Pakistan in August 1947, it was decided to divide the assets and liabilities of the two countries. The Special Committee was replaced by the Partition Council, when the partition of the country was announced, to represent the interests of the two Governments.

The Steering Committee was consisted of two Members (H.M. Patel and Muhammad Ali), which in its turn worked through a series of ten Expert Committees and various Sub-Committees to present their recommendations to the Partition Council. In fact, the Steering Committee acted as a liaison between the Partition Council and the Expert Committees.

The Expert Committees, on the other hand, dealt with problems on division of armed forces, organisations, personnel, records, revenues, currency etc., i.e., assets and liabilities. Each Expert Committee received assistance from the departments concerned of the Government of India.

The entire work on partition, i.e., division of assets and liabilities was operated through the Partition Office (Partition Secretariat) set up by the Government of India in June 1947. Circulars, questionnaires etc. were issued by the Partition Office to all the departments of the Government of India to collect necessary information from them.

These Partition papers are concerned with the Commonwealth Relations Wing. The (i) External Affairs Department, and (ii) Commonwealth Relations Department were combined on 1 June 1947 to form into one Department of External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations (designated as Ministry of External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations on 29 August 1947). The work relating to partition was assigned to the Evacuation Section\(^2\) of the C.R. Wing. But these papers bear file references as File Nos.1-1/1947-Partition, 1-2/1947-Partition and so on, and are not indexed. The General Section (C.R. Wing) also includes the records on partition, which are, however, indexed.

The following main subjects\(^3\) were allotted to the 'Partition' Unit:

\(^3\) Ibid.
Communications for changes of options to Pakistan Government and Partition Secretariat. Completion of the files relating to personnel, records, furniture, etc. and their transmission to the Ministry of Home Affairs. Completion of files relating to assets and liabilities and their transmission to the Ministry of Finance. Collection of all reports, documents etc. relating to foreign relations. Printing and duplication of files required by the Government of Pakistan. Attending to references other than those mentioned above, received from time to time from the Partition Secretariat, Government of Pakistan etc.

The Indian Sub-Continent was partitioned into Dominions of India and Pakistan in August 1947, and the Pakistan Section was created in the C.R. Wing of the Ministry of External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations to deal with the subject relating to Pakistan. The Pakistan Section was bifurcated into two Sections as Pakistan I and Pakistan II on 7 June 1948 to cope with the increased volume of work. The following items of work were allotted to these two Sections:

Pakistan I Section:

- Appointments and periodical reports of the High Commissioner and Deputy High Commissioners for India in Pakistan.
- Appointments of High Commissioner and Deputy High Commissioners for Pakistan in India, and facilities for their tour etc.
- Issue of general and special orders regarding the correct procedure for conducting correspondence between various Provincial Governments, Ministries of the Government of India on the one hand, and Government of Pakistan on the other hand.

As the volume of work further increased, Pakistan I and II Sections were again split up, and two new sections, viz., Pakistan (Agreements), and Pakistan III were created in 1949. These Sections dealt with the following main items of work:

Pakistan-A Section:

- Inter-Dominion Conferences (taken over from Pakistan I Section), and implementation of agreements.

Pakistan III Section:

- Problems arising out of migration of people from India to Pakistan, and vice versa, as well as other allied subjects.

A separate Baluchistan Section was created in the Ministry of External Affairs with effect from 1 December 1954. The following records of Pakistan, Pakistan I, Pakistan-II, Pakistan (A), and Pakistan III Sections (Post-Independence Period) are available:

(E) POLITICAL DEPARTMENT/MINISTRY OF STATES

(E) POLITICAL DEPARTMENT/MINISTRY OF STATES
(1937-1954)

1. ORGANISATIONAL CHANGES

Foreign and Political Department -
Creation of a post of Political Secretary

The formation of a separate Political Department on 1 April 1937 was 1 two decades ahead, when a new post of Political Secretary was created in the Foreign Department, and the latter was renamed as Foreign and Political Department on 1 January 1914 (see Appendix-VIII). The Foreign and Political Department was then reorganised into Foreign and Political Divisions.\(^2\) The Political Secretary took over the charge of the Political Division, and henceforth he devoted his attention to the matters connected with the relations between the Government of India and the Princely Indian States, leaving the external and frontier affairs to the Foreign Secretary in the Foreign Division.

For internal administrative purposes two parts of India were usually called (i) British India, governed by the Governor General and Viceroy with the full machinery of Central, Provincial, and District Administrations, and (ii) Princely Indian States, each responsible for its own internal administration, and had treaty obligations with the British Crown. The British Crown possessed the rights of "Paramountcy" over the States. The Indian States were not only numerous, but also differed widely in territory, population and resources. The administrative control over the Indian States by the British Crown was exercised by the Governor General through the Political Secretary. In each of the larger States, or group of States, an Agent to the Governor General/Resident was posted for supervision and advice in every day business of the State. The smaller States were grouped into Agencies, and in each Agency a Political Officer had similar responsibilities to those of the Agents/Residents. The Agents/Residents and Political Officers maintained regular contacts with the Ruling Princes for information of the Governor General. The records created in the offices of Residents and Political Officers are known as the Residency/Political Agency Records. In the beginning, however, a few States were under the direct supervision of Governors of the neighbouring Provinces. In 1918 the Montagu-Chelmsford Report recommended that as a general principle all

3. According to the Report of the "Indian States Committee" (1929), presided over by Sir Harcourt Butler, the number of Princely Indian States was 562.

4. See Appendix-XXV (List of Residency/Political Agency Records in the National Archives of India). The Residency/Political Agency Records, which are still being arranged in the National Archives of India will be covered in a separate Part of the "Guide".
the important States should be placed in direct political relations with the Government of India. These recommendations were carried into effect to the following extent till 1931:

(1) All States in the Punjab, except the Simla Hill States and three minor States in the plains were combined in a "Punjab States Agency" under an Agent to the Governor General.

(2) The Kathiawar Agency and the Cutch and the Palanpur Agencies, which were formerly dealt with by Agents of the Governor of Bombay were combined into a "Western India Agency" under an Agent to the Governor General. Incidentally this process involved the absorption of the old Bombay Political Department into the Political Department of the Government of India.

(3) All States in the Madras Presidency were grouped into "Madras States Agency" under an Agent to the Governor General.

(4) The Resident in Gwalior was released from subordination of the Agent to the Governor General in Central India, and was in direct touch with the Government of India.

(5) Some States in Rajputana (Bikaner, Sirohi and Alwar) were placed in direct relations with the Agent to the Governor General, the former intermediary Political Officers being eliminated.

Another incident which merits notice was that by a Royal Proclamation, the Chamber of Princes was formed on 8 February 1921 as a consultative body of the Princely Rulers, with the Governor General as its President.

POLITICAL DEPARTMENT

The Government of India Act, 1935 (which became a law on 2 August 1935) provided an important landmark in the constitutional development of India. The most important change in the organisational structure of the Central Secretariat was the splitting up of the Foreign and Political Department into two distinct departments with effect from 1 April 1937, viz., (i) External Affairs Department, and (ii) Political Department (see Appendix-X). The External Affairs Department took up all matters previously handled by the Foreign Secretary. The Political Department took over the work connected with the exercise of functions of the Crown in its relations with the Princely Indian States, and B.J. Glancy, became the Political Secretary. The following sections came under the purview of the Political Department:

The Agents to the Governor General posted in the following States were designated as "Residents" with effect from 1 April 1937:

7. Political Department, File Nos. (i) 19-Fédération/1936; and (ii) 141-CO/1937, p.1-corres.
Under the provisions of the Government of India Act, 1935, the designation of the Governor General was changed to "Governor General and Crown Representative." As Governor General, he was to administer the British Indian Provinces, and as Crown Representative, he was to control the affairs of the Indian States. The Paramountcy functions over the Indian States were taken away from the Government of India as such, and conferred on the Crown Representative. The offices of the Crown Representative and the Governor General, however, were combined in one individual, i.e., the Viceroy.

The Provincial Part of the Government of India Act, 1935 was introduced in the Provinces with effect from 1 April 1937. The Central Part of the Act contemplated a federation of India, which could have come into existence by joining together of the Provinces, and a certain number of States. The Central, or Federal Part of the Act, however, was not introduced as it was found unacceptable to the national opinion of India, and the scheme was dropped in 1940.

The Interim Government of India was sworn in on 2 September 1946. With decision of the British Government to withdraw from the country and its announcement of the lapse of Paramountcy over the Indian States, the Political Department rapidly recalled their agents who were accredited to various States. It was evident that there would be a serious administrative vacuum both in regard to political relationship between the Central Government and the States, as well as the co-ordination of all India policies in the economic and other fields. The Government of India, therefore, decided to set up a separate Department of States to conduct its relations with the Indian States in matters of common concern.

Selected Records sent to London

Early in 1947 in preparation for Indian Independence, the records of the (a) Foreign Department (1880-1913)/Foreign and Political Department (1914-1936)/Political Department (1937-1947), and (b) Residencies and Political Agencies (1757-1947) were examined by the British administrators in India, in order that the records relevant to the relations between the Crown and the Ruling Indian Princes could be extracted and sent to London. For this purpose the records of (a) were selected and classified into following four categories:

(1) Paramountcy (subjects concerned with the principles of the Crown's relations with Ruling Indian Princes, and correspondence on such matters between Crown Representative, Political Department, Secretary of State for India, and India Office),

(2) Private affairs of the Rulers and the internal affairs of the States,

(3) Matters of common concern between Indian States and British India (e.g. communications, postal services, irrigation, defence, boundary disputes etc.), and

(4) Pre-1880 records.

The records in categories (1) and (2) above were sent to the Commonwealth Relations Office, London, through the British High Commission, New Delhi in 1947-48. The records are now housed in the India Office Library and Records, London, under the nomenclature "R/1: Crown Representative's Records (1880-1947)". They were renumbered in the R/1 series of India Office Records (Nos. R/1/1 to R/1/36), and a list is available there for use. The files in categories (3) and (4) above were left in situ in India, which were finally transferred to the National Archives of India.

Likewise, the records of (b), i.e., the Residency and Political Agency Records (1757-1947) were sorted out and transferred to the Commonwealth Relations Office, London, through the British High Commission, New Delhi in 1947-48. In the process of sorting out the records, many papers were destroyed in Residency and Agency Offices. The criteria for selecting these records for use in London appear to have been broadly similar to those of (a) mentioned above, although pre-1880 records of some Residencies and Political Agencies were also despatched to London. The records are now in the custody of the India Office Library and Records, London under the nomenclature "R/2: India: Residency Records (1757-1947)", and they are still being surveyed and listed. Some records were sent to the Indian State Governments concerned, and the remaining records were transferred to the National Archives of India (see Appendix-XXV).

DEPARTMENT/MINISTRY OF STATES

The States Department came into existence on 5 July 1947. Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel, a Member of the Governor General's Executive Council in the Interim Government (who became the first Deputy Prime Minister in the Central Cabinet in free India), took charge of the Department, and V.P. Menon, and M.K. Vellodi became its Adviser and Secretary respectively. (Sardar Patel also held the charge of the Home Department, as well as the Information and Broadcasting Department). It devolved upon the States Department to re-establish relationship with the numerous States, and to knit them together into a harmonious whole with the rest of the country. From 5 July to 15 August 1947 the States Department worked side by side with the Political Department. On the face of impending partition of the country, the Princely States of the sub-continent were given option to join either Dominion of India or Pakistan, according to their geographical position.

With the attainment of Indian Independence on 15 August 1947, the British Paramountcy over the Princely States lapsed, and the sub-continent was divided into two Dominions. The Indian Independence Act released the States from all their obligations to the Crown. The States Department was designated as the Ministry of States on 29 August, 1947.

Accession of States:

The first phase that concerned the States Department was the accession of the Indian States to the Indian Dominion, the process of fitting them into the constitutional structure of India. Negotiations were embarked on with the Indian States, and their Rulers, with a few exceptions, decided on 25 July 1947 to accede to India.

12. The Ministry of States issued a "White Paper on Indian States" on 5 July 1948 giving an account of the events leading up to the accession of the Indian States. in accordance with an Instrument of Accession on the three subjects of Defence, External Affairs, and Communications, and other ancilliary subjects of common concern, pending the promulgation of a Constitution by the Constituent Assembly of India, in which the States were also represented.

Integration of States

The second phase that concerned the Ministry of States was the integration of the States. This was a two-fold process:

(i) External Integration, i.e., consolidation of small States into sizeable units, and

(ii) Internal Integration, i.e., growth of democratic institutions and responsible Governments in the States.

In the matter of integration again, the Ministry of States promoted three different processes, which varied according to size, geography and other factors relating to each State, or group of States.

The first process was the merger of States with their neighbouring Provinces. This process had affected not only the smaller States, but some of the larger States as well. The process first started in Orissa, where the States formed scattered bits of territories not linked with each other. The States which were firmly composed in the Eastern States Agency and territorially in Orissa, merged with that Province, and those in the Central Provinces merged with the C.P.
The second process was the integration of the territories of States to create new viable Union of States. The following States Unions executed the new "Instruments of Accession":

1. Saurashtra Union, Rajkot (on 22 May 1948),
2. Rajasthan Union, Abu/Jaipur (on 31 May 1948),
3. Madhya Bharat Union, Indore (19 July 1948),
4. Vindhya Pradesh Union, Nowgong (20 July 1948),
5. Patiala and East Punjab States Union (PEPSU), Patiala (on 7 August 1948),
6. Matsya Union, Alwar (on 7 October 1948), and
7. Travancore-Cochin Union, Travancore (on 1 July 1949).

In each State Union its Government was formed with (i) a Rajpramukh as the executive head, (ii) Up-Rajpramukh(s), and (iii) Council of Ministers to aid and advise the Rajpramukh in the exercise of his functions.

The third process involved the areas, which for administrative, strategic or other specified reasons were taken over by the Ministry of States as Chief Commissioners' Provinces, viz.,

13. The Governor General accepted the execution of "Instruments" of these States Unions Nos. 1-5 on 13 September 1948, and that of No. 6 on 20 October 1948 (Ministry of States File No. 360-P/1948, Group I). The Greater Rajasthan Union which was inaugurated on 20 March 1949 consisted of the former Rajasthan Union (No. 2) comprising 10 States, Matsya Union (No. 6) comprising 4 States, and the States of Jaipur, Jodhpur, Bikaner and Jaisalmer. On 26 January 1950 a major part of Sirohi was also integrated. The States of Travancore and Cochin were united to form into one United State of Travancore-Cochin (No. 7). (Ministry of States File Nos. (i) 17-P/1949, (ii) 17(6)-P/1949, (iii) 17(8)-P/1949, (iv) 17(14)-P/1949 and (v) 17(22)-P/1949.)
Himāhal Pradesh, Simla (comprising Indian States of Mandi, Chamba, Sirmur, Suket and other Simla Hill States, except Bilaspur) (on 15 April 1948), Kutch State, Bhuj (on 1 June 1948), and Bilaspur State, Bilaspur (on 12 October 1948), Manipur State, Imphal (on 14 October 1949), and Tripura State, Agartala (in October 1949).

The object of integration of States was again three-fold in character. The first was the unification of judicial, legislative, administrative, fiscal and other systems of merged and integrated States, as well as the building up of democratic institutions in the States. The second was the approximation of the administrative and political set-up of the States to that of the Provinces. The third was readjustment of constitutional and fiscal relationship of the States with the Centre, so as to bring the States, as might be practicable, to the "Provincial" level. 14

14. As a result of the application of various merger and integration schemes, (i) 216 States covering an area of 108,739 square miles and a population of 19,158 thousands were merged in "Provinces", (ii) 275 States covering an area of 215,450 square miles and a population of 34,699 thousands were integrated into Unions of States; and (iii) 61 States covering an area of 63,704 square miles with a population of 6,925 thousands were taken over as Centrally Administered Areas. This brought the total number of States affected to 552 covering an area of 387,893 square miles and a population of 60,782 thousands. (Descriptive Memoir of the Ministry of States, June 1953, published by the Ministry of Home Affairs) (in Ministry of States File No.40(28)-Adm/1954).
During the phases of accession, and integration of the States, the position of Hyderabad and Jammu and Kashmir were complicated by certain special factors.

As regards Hyderabad it became necessary for the Government of India to resort to "Police Action" and the Indian Armed Forces under the command of Major General J.N. Chaudhuri, entered Hyderabad territory on 13 September 1948. The "Police Action" was terminated with the cease-fire order issued to his troops by the Nizam on 17 September 1948. Immediately after, the administration of the State was taken over by the Commander of the Indian forces, who was then appointed as the Military Governor.

As regards Jammu and Kashmir, soon after its accession an Emergency Administration was set up in the State. The Emergency Administration was replaced by an Interim Government on 5 March 1948, with Sheikh Muhammad Abdullah as the Prime Minister. A temporary post of Secretary for Jammu and Kashmir Affairs (Vishnu Sahay) was created in the Ministry of States to deal with the problems connected with the State.

15. The circumstances in which the "Police Action" was resorted to in Hyderabad State, and the events leading to the accession of Jammu and Kashmir State to the Dominion of India are detailed in the White Papers issued by the Government of India on Hyderabad, and Jammu and Kashmir in August 1948.
Federal Financial Integration:

In the beginning the financial matter and taxation in Indian States were excluded from the purview of the Dominion Legislature. This exclusion could not, however, be a permanent feature of the constitutional relationship between the Government of India and the States. Accordingly, the Government of India appointed the "Indian States Finances Enquiry Committee" on 22 October 1948 under the Chairmanship of V.T. Krishnamachari to examine and report on the desirability and feasibility of integrating the fiscal system of the States with that of the Government of India, so that a uniform system of federal finance might be established throughout India. The Committee's recommendations were examined by the Government of India, and the schemes came into force in the States (which were declared as Part B States in the Constitution of India) from April 1950.

Organisational set-up in the Ministry of States:

The following Attached and Subordinate Offices functioned under the Ministry of States:

Attached Office:

(1) Office of the Major General, Military Adviser-in-Chief, Indian States Forces, New Delhi.

This office was formed as far back in 1887-89 as "Imperial Service Troops", under the control of the Foreign Department. It was renamed as the "Indian States Forces" in 1920. After Independence it came under the control of the (i) Ministry of Defence (15 August 1947-20 February 1948), (ii) Ministry of States (21 February 1948-31 March 1950), and (iii) Ministry of Defence (from 1 April 1950, and finally merged with the armed forces on 1 April 1951).

Subordinate Offices:

(2) Office of the Commandant, Central Reserve Police, Neemuch (Gwalior State).

(3) Office of the Superintendent, Rajputana Railways and Railway Protection Office, Ajmer.

This office was later designated as Ajmer Railway Police and Railway Protection Police, Ajmer, and exercised jurisdiction over the railway lands in Rajasthan, Madhya Bharat, etc. The control of the Railway Police was passed on to the respective Part B States with effect from 1 June 1954. The Inspector General of Police, Delhi, was also the head of the Central Reserve Police and Ajmer Railway Police.
On the lapse of Paramountcy, when the Residents and Political Agents were withdrawn from various States, the Ministry of States appointed Officers on Special Duty in the following Residencies and Agencies for residuary work, and winding up the offices:

1. Mysore Residency, Bangalore,
2. Madras States Agency, Trivandrum,
3. Travancore and Cochin Residency, Trivandrum,
4. Hyderabad Residency, Hyderabad,
5. Eastern States Agency, Calcutta (including Chattisgarh and Orissa States, Sambalpur),
6. Kashmir Residency, Srinagar,
7. Rajputana Residency, Abu,
8. Central India Residency, Indore,
9. Gwalior Residency, Gwalior,
10. Bundelkhand Agency, Nowgong,
11. Kolhapur Residency and Deccan States Agency, Kolhapur, and
12. Western India and Gujarat States Agency, Rajkot.

The Treasury Officers/Manager and Treasury Officers, Central Government Treasury, were also functioning in most of these offices.

An Adviser to the Governor of Assam for Excluded Areas and States, Shillong, and a Dominion Agent in Manipur State, also functioned since Independence.

An Agent to the Government of India in Jammu and Kashmir State²³ (Sir Dalip Singh) was also posted from 2 to 27 November 1947.

An Agent General of the Nizam's Government was also posted at New Delhi in 1948 (Ministry of States File No.57-H/1948).

22. Ministry of State File No.152-H/1948, p.7-corres. On the eve of "Police Action" in Hyderabad, a few other Officers on Special Duty were also posted there (Ministry of States File No.20-H/1948). The Offices of (i) States Counsellor, and (ii) Financial Counsellor at Hyderabad were formed on 7 March 1952 and 6 May 1952, and were abolished with effect from 1 April 1953 and 1 June 1953 respectively.

Constitutional Relationship:

It was originally the intention that apart from those States which were merged into "Provinces", and those which were constituted into Centrally Administered Areas, the other States should have Constitutions framed by Constituent Assemblies set up by themselves. However, as events progressed it was found that the more practical method would be for the Constituent Assembly of India itself to frame the Constitution of these States on the same lines as it framed the Constitution of what used to be the "Provinces" of the Dominion. It was also considered expedient that the Constitutional relationship between all States should be assimilated and they, so far as circumstances permitted, should be in the same position in relation to the Centre.

Accordingly, with the enactment of the Constitution of India,24 the Indian Provinces, States, and Chief Commissioners' Provinces were formed into the following Part A, B, C, and D States specified in its First Schedule:

Part A States:

24. The "Constitution of India", which was adopted and enacted on 26 November 1949 by the Constituent Assembly of India, came into force when the Indian Union became a Republic on 26 January 1950.
The Part A States consisted of formerly Indian Provinces, including the formerly Indian States merged with the Provinces. Matters relating to the Part A States were the concern of their respective State Governments. Andhra Pradesh, another Part A State, came into being on 14 September 1953, and Jawaharlal Nehru, the Prime Minister of India, inaugurated its capital at Hyderabad on 1 October 1953.

Part B States:

The Part B States consisted of formerly Indian States or Union of States, and matters relating to these States were the concern of the Ministry of States, under Article 371 of the Constitution. Vindhya Pradesh, which consisted of 35 Bundelkhand and Baghelkhand Princely States, however, for certain administrative and other reasons, was taken over as a Centrally Administered Area from 1 January 1950, thus forming a Part C State.

Part C States:

25. The circumstances which led to the assumption by the Centre of the direct administration of these areas are stated in the White Paper on the Indian States (March 1950, pp.46-49) issued by the Ministry of States.
The Part C States consisted of the areas under the Chief Commissioners' administration. Except, Ajmer, Coorg, and Delhi, which were under the administrative control of the Ministry of Home Affairs, matters arising out of the administration of the rest of the Part C States were the concern of the Ministry of States under Article 239 of the Constitution. Cooch-Behar State was included in the Eastern States Agency, Calcutta. With the abolition of the post of Regional Commissioner, Eastern States Agency, the Governor of Assam (through his Adviser for Excluded Areas and States) was appointed for conduct of relations with that State. However, the subjects noted below in these States, became the responsibility of other Ministries of the Government of India:

(i) Education (Ministry of Education),
(ii) Health (Ministry of Health)
(iii) Roads, bridge works and ferries (Ministry of Transport),
(iv) Minor Ports in Kutch (Ministry of Transport),
(v) Intensive cultivation and integrated plan of production of food crops, cotton, jute, and other related matters of an urgent character (Ministry of Food and Agriculture),
(vi) Famine and scarcity (Ministry of Food and Agriculture),
(vii) Labour matters (Ministry of Labour), and (viii) Rehabilitation (Ministry of Relief and Rehabilitation).

All other administrative problems arising in Part C States were handled primarily by the Ministry of States in consultation with other Ministries.

26. (i) "Subjects for which various Ministries and Departments of the Government are responsible (as corrected upto 31 July 1951)", Parliament Secretariat, New Delhi, July 1951, p.37; and

Part D States:

(1) Andaman and Nicobar Islands:

The Part D State, which was under the administrative control of the Ministry of Home Affairs, consisted of the formerly Chief Commissioner's Province of Andaman and Nicobar Islands.

The Government of Part C States Act, 1951, which was passed by the Parliament in September 1951, provided for the establishment of Legislative Assemblies elected on adult franchise and for Ministries responsible to the Legislature in Bhopal, Himachal Pradesh, and Vindhya Pradesh. So far as the border States of Kutch, Manipur and Tripura were concerned, the Act provided for the appointment of Councils of Advisers to advise the Chief Commissioners in the discharge of their functions. Lieutenant Governors were appointed in Himachal Pradesh and Vindhya Pradesh with effect from 1 March 1952. The Council of Ministers were constituted in Himachal Pradesh (on 8 March 1952), Vindhya Pradesh (13 March 1952) and Bhopal (on 28 March 1952). The Council of Advisers were also constituted in the States of Kutch, Manipur and Tripura.
In 1954 the following sections were in existence in the Ministry of States Secretariat:

1. Administration, 2. Defence and Security, 3. Economic,
10. Political Pensions and Rehabilitation (merged with Judicial and General in 1954),
15. Works and Budget.

After the integration of the Indian States with the Union of India, the Ministry of States merged with the Ministry of Home Affairs on 10 January 1955, and the latter was entrusted to deal with the following additional subjects:

1. Administrative, financial, and economic problems of Part B States.

2. Matters relating to Part C States of Bhopal, Himachal Pradesh, Vindhy Pradesh, Kutch, Manipur, and Tripura, and

In between 1949 and 1953 the following sections were

(i) created, and (ii) renamed:

(i) Created:

Indian States Finances Enquiry Committee (1948),
Communications (1949), Labour and Agriculture
(1949), Federal Financial Integration (FFI)(1949), Services (1949), Works and Budget (1949), Financial Adviser's (1951), Rajasthan (Camp) (1952), and Special Assistance Enquiry Committee (1953).

(ii) Renamed:

General as 'Judicial and General' (1949), General (Refugee) as 'Rehabilitation' (1949), Rehabilitation as 'Political Pensions and Rehabilitation' (1951), and Labour and Agriculture as 'Agriculture and Education' (1951).
(3) Matters arising out of the Instruments of merger and covenants entered between the Government of India and the Rulers of the former Princely States, which included privy purses, and the settlement of private properties of the Rulers, and the allowances payable to their relatives.

With the coming into force of the "States Reorganisation (Act 37) of 1956, from 1 November 1956, the institution of the Rajpramukhs was abolished, and no distinction, whatsoever, was made thereafter in the administration of the former Provinces and the former Indian States. The Part A, B, C, and D States were reorganised into (i) States, and (ii) Centrally Administered Union Territories, and the integration and democratisation of the former Princely Ruling Territories was thus completed.

The process of consolidation of a colossal number of Indian States into convenient viable administrative units, which was mainly the work of the Ministry of States, will for ever be a great landmark in the history of India. For the first time, after hundreds of years, India became welded into a constitutional unity.

The record-holdings of the Political Department/Ministry of States in the National Archives of India are arranged into two sections: (i) Main Series of Records (1937-1954), which were created in the Political Department/Ministry of States Secretariat proper, and (ii) Other Series of Records (1947-1954), which were created outside the Secretariat. The records of the Residencies and Agencies (1759-1947), which functioned under the administrative control of the Political Department and its predecessor bodies, will be covered in a separate Part of the "Guide", as mentioned earlier in Foot Note No.4.

The Federation Branch, which was created in the Foreign and Political Department on 1 March 1935 was placed under the Political Department with effect from 1 April 1937. The branch was soon split up into two sections, viz., Federation I and Federation II to deal with the implementations of the provisions of the Government of India Act, 1935, involving a federation between the British Indian Provinces and the Princely Indian States. The subjects connected with federation, constitutional reforms and federal finances were particularly the concern of these sections. In 1939 the two sections were combined and renamed as Federation Section.

It may be noted that the Reforms Office of the Government of India, which was functioning independently on the implementation of the constitutional reforms introduced by the Government of India Act, 1935, had also created in that office a Federation Section in 1937, and maintained closest possible relations with the Federation Sections in the Political Department.

15. INDIAN STATES FINANCES ENQUIRY COMMITTEE (ISFEC) (1948-1949)

In the beginning the financial matter and the matter relating to taxation in Indian States were excluded from the purview of the Dominion Legislature. This exclusion could not, however, be a permanent feature of the constitutional relationship between the Government of India and the States. Accordingly, the Government of India appointed a Committee of experts on 22 October 1948 to enquire into the finances of Indian States and Union of States under the Chairmanship of V.T. Krishnamachari (Diwan, Jaipur State) to examine and report on the desirability and feasibility of integrating the fiscal system of the former Indian States with that of the Government of India, so that a uniform system of federal finance might be established throughout India. The Committee commenced its work in November 1948, and submitted the (i) first Interim Report concerning Baroda on 1 June 1949, (ii) second Interim Report concerning Travancore and Cochin States on 10 June 1949 (these States were subsequently united on 1 July 1949), (iii) Part I of the Final Report setting out the main principles of the Federal Financial Integration on 9 July 1949, (iv) Part II of the Report setting out the detailed application of the main principles, and containing the Financial Integration

The Committee's recommendations were examined by the Government of India after discussions and negotiations with the representatives of the States. The agreed results of these negotiations were recorded in each case in the form of a short "Memorandum of Agreement". These agreements were eventually finalised and executed between the Central Government and each State Government, and received statutory sanction in the Constitution of India. The schemes came into force from 1 April 1950 in all Part B States, except PEPSU, where it took effect from 13 April 1950. The Federal Financial Integration Section was created in the Ministry of States to deal with the recommendations of the Committee and for their implementations.

After an examination of the Budget (1951-1952) of Rajasthan, a Part 'B' State, in consultation with the Ministry of States, the financial condition of that State was found to be serious. The Ministry of States as well as the Government of Rajasthan felt that it was immediately necessary to have an expert investigation into the finances of Rajasthan. In connection with the Financial Integration Agreement also, an assurance was given to Part 'B' States that the Government of India would give them the maximum possible assistance in connection with their internal integration (Clause I of the Financial Integration Agreement with the Government of Rajasthan). (The classification of (I) Records and (II) Indexes in the Foreign Department, including its predecessor and successor bodies)

I. RECORDS

(A) Till 1859

Original Consultations

The records ante-dating 1859 consisted of two broad classes: (i) Papers created by or disposed of by the Supreme Council of the East India Company at Fort William, Calcutta, and (ii) Correspondence between the Court of Directors, London, and Fort William, Calcutta (Letters from and to Court of Directors). The former constituted the "Proceedings," which were named "Original Consultations" of the Council. The "Original Consultations" consisted of documents, which were placed before the Council for discussion, as also the drafts, or copies of those which were issued at the instance of the Council. The Consultations of each meeting of the Council were grouped together, arranged, and were given serial numbers, according to the order in which these were discussed or disposed of. For the sake of facility in disposing of business, the work relating to a department was allotted to a particular day of the week. The business thus disposed of was recorded in weekly proceedings.

In addition to the recorded Consultations, their copies were also preserved in bound volumes, popularly known as "Proceedings Volumes". The "Letters from and to Court of Directors" were maintained as a separate series.

The "Consultations" were termed as:
1. Secret Consultations
2. Political Consultations, and
3. Foreign Consultations.

The "Secret" and "Political" Consultations were discontinued after 1859 (revived from 1868 and 1861 respectively as "Proceedings").

(B) January–March 1860
1. Foreign Consultations.

(C) April 1860–September 1861
Proceedings
1. Foreign, Part A, Proceedings

The system of recording of "Consultations" underwent certain changes after 1859 owing to the adoption of the portfolio system under Lord Canning. The weekly recording of "Consultations" was abolished, and henceforth every proceeding was to close by the end of the month in which it had been started. The "Consultation" ceased to be the records of the Council's meetings, and the papers were disposed of by the Member-in-Charge. The name "Consultation" continued to be in use till 31 May 1860 (in the Foreign Department till 31 March 1860), after which it was replaced by the word "Proceedings". Canning administration also saw the introduction of the system of grouping several documents on the same subject together, and using the group as unit for the purposes of numbering.

From 1858 "Letters from and to Court of Directors", were renamed as "Letters from and to Secretary of State for India," which were also maintained as a separate series.

(D) October 1861 - August 1862

1. Judicial ('A' and 'B' Proceedings)
2. Revenue ('A' and 'B' Proceedings)
3. Revenue-Irrigation (From January 1870) ('A' and 'B' Proceedings)
4. Finance ('A' and 'B' Proceedings)
5. Military ('A' and 'B' Proceedings)
6. Political ('A' and 'B' Proceedings)
7. General ('A' and 'B' Proceedings)

2. The Revenue Proceedings on Revenue-Irrigation from September 1868 onwards were recorded as "Revenue-Irrigation". But the Revenue-Irrigation Branch itself came into existence in January 1870.
3. The recording of separate "Secret" series, which was discontinued after 1859 was revived in 1868, and continued up to August 1882. The "Secret Records" were introduced in Internal and External Branches from September 1882, and General Branch from May 1905. The General Branch "Secret" papers were recorded with those of the Internal Branch till April 1905. The Frontier Branch recorded its "Secret" and "Non-Secret" papers with those of the External Branch till August 1884. In reality the Frontier Branch came into existence in September 1884, rather than in September 1882. Subsequently the "Secret Records" were introduced in other branches, when they were created. Later, some "Secret Records" from 1922-23 onwards were amalgamated with their "Non-Secret" series wherever possible.

(E) September 1882-August 1884

In September 1882 the Foreign Department was divided into Internal, External, Frontier, and General Branches, and the papers of each branch began to be recorded separately, with the internal letter of the name of the branch added to the record headings. Thus, A-Judicial-I Proceedings, B-Judicial-I Proceedings, Secret-I Proceedings, and so on.

(F) September 1884-1922

In September 1884 the seven subject headings—Judicial, Revenue, Revenue-Irrigation, Finance, Military, Political, and General were abolished, and the following classification was adopted:

1. Internal ('A' and 'B' Proceedings)
2. External ('A' and 'B' Proceedings)
3. Frontier ('A' and 'B' Proceedings)
4. General ('A' and 'B' Proceedings)
5. Secret ('I', i.e., Internal, 'E', i.e., External, and 'F', i.e., Frontier Proceedings).

Subsequently when more new branches were created, their records were classified similarly, e.g., the Establishment Branch was created in September 1908, and its records were classified as Establishment ('A' and 'B' Proceedings) and so on.

(G) From 1923 onwards

"File System" was adopted in the Foreign and Political Department from 1922-23 onwards.

4. Foreign and Political File No. 54-F.O./1926, pp. 11-12. In 1920 the Government of India appointed a "Secretariat Procedure Committee" under the Chairmanship of Sir Hubert Llewellyn Smith, to enquire into the organisation and procedure of the Civil Secretariats and Attached Offices of the Central Government. As an experimental measure the "File System" was introduced first in Commerce Department. The system was introduced in the Home Department in June 1921, and in 1922-23 in the Foreign and Political Department.

APPENDIX-XXIV
(List of Factory Records)

When the East India Company started trade and commerce in the East, its places of business were known as 'Factories.' The seventeenth century was the time of largest establishment of factories in the East. The series of factories established in various parts of India testified to the Company's commercial progress made in this country.

The business transaction (i.e., proceedings/diaries, and correspondence) of the factories are known as Factory Records, but incidentally they also refer to the political events in the country. The Factory Records are not available in the National Archives of India (except at Serial No. 20 below). But these are preserved in the India Office Library and Records, London, as well as in the Tamil Nadu and the Maharashtra State Archives. Those preserved in the West Bengal State Archives, are, however, non-Factor Records.

The Factory Records in the India Office Library and Records ('C' Series) comprise Factory and non-Factor, regular and imperfect series. For examples, Burdwan (G/6), some portion of Dacca (G/15), Dinajpur (G/16), Murshidabad (G/27), and

1. The microfilms of some of the series of Factory Records are being acquired from the India Office Library and Records, London, in the National Archives of India.
Patna (G/28) series, which are also available in the West Bengal State Archives are non-Factory Records. Besides, some portions of Anjengo (G/1), Fort St. David (G/18), Fort St. George (G/19), and Tellicherry (G/37) series, which are also preserved in the Tamil Nadu State Archives are published in extenso in India.

The list of Factory Records preserved in the India Office Library and Records, London, and their corresponding series available in India, are listed below in Cols. (I) and (II) respectively.

32. St. Helena ... 1676-1836
(G/32:163 volumes)

33. Siam ... 1679-1683
(G/33:1 volume)

34. Straits ... 1769-1830
Settlements (G/34:200 volumes)

The records relating to Penang (Prince of Wales Island), Singapore, and Malacca are grouped in this series. The island of Penang was acquired by the British on 12 August 1786, which happened to be the birthday of Prince of Wales (later, King George IV, who was born on 12 August 1762, and ascended the English throne in 1820; he was the eldest son of King George III). The newly acquired island was named after the Prince of Wales. Malacca was taken from the Dutch in 1795, restored in 1818, and finally ceded by Holland to Great Britain in 1824. A settlement was established at Singapore in 1819. It was for sometime subordinate to Bencoolen (Fort Marlborough) in Sumatra, but in 1823 it was placed under the Government of Bengal.
In 1805 Penang was constituted a separate Presidency with a Governor and Council. Singapore and Malacca were added to it in 1826 to form one Government. The seat of Government remained at Penang until ten years later, when it was transferred to Singapore. On 1 April 1867 the Straits Settlements were transferred from the control of the Government of India to the Secretary of State for the Colonies (Colonial Office).

35. Sumatra ... 1615-1828
(3/35:163 volumes)

Achin, Tiku, Jambi, and other parts were visited from time to time by the Company's vessels, and the factories were maintained for varying periods at several of these points. The English settlement at Bencoolen was established in 1684, under the name of York Fort. This was removed in 1714 to a more healthy site in the same neighbourhood, the name of Fort Marlborough being given to the new building. The agency there, which had previously been subordinate to Madras, was in February 1703 raised to the rank of a Presidency under a Governor and Council. This arrangement lasted until 1785, when the settlement was reduced to a Residency, and placed under the Government of Bengal. In 1825 all the British possessions in Sumatra were made over to the Dutch in exchange for Malacca and the Dutch settlements in India.
36. Surat ... 1619-1809
   (G/36:127 volumes)

   (The volume No. G/36/35, however, is not available).

   During 17th and 18th centuries Surat ranked as the chief export and import centre of India. It soon became the principal place of the Company's trade in India, and remained the seat of the Western Presidency until that seat was transferred to Bombay in 1687.

   An Outward Letter Book of 1630 of the Surat Factory is perhaps the oldest British document now extant in India. A gap of 15 years then occurs, after which the Surat Inward and Outward Letters are now extant in India from 1646 onwards. The gaps in these books in the Maharashtra State Archives are many and long. The volumes there contain only a few letters compared with the number of years they cover. The Surat Diaries in the Maharashtra State Archives extend from 1659 to 1809. The rest of the old Surat Records, as also the records of the factories at Karwar, Raajapur, and Hubli appear to have been lost or destroyed.

   The "Commercial Residency Northward (1774-1835)" series also includes the records of Surat, Broach, Bombay, and Kathiawar.

37. Tellicherry... 1716-1793
   (G/37:12 volumes)

   The Presidency at Surat established a factory at Tellicherry in 1683.

   Letters from Tellicherry (1729-51) (Volumes 1-8), and Letters to Tellicherry (1726-50) (Volumes 1-12), in small volumes, are published in extenso by the Madras Record Office in Records of the Fort St. George, series.

38. Thana ... 1775-1799
   (G/38:10 volumes)

   Maharashtra ... 1630
   (Bombay) ... 1809
   (with many gaps)

   Maharashtra ... 1776-
   (Bombay) ... 1817
Abut the middle of the 17th century the Company established a factory here, which in 1609 was seized by the Mughals. In the following year, it was, however, restored.

Volume no. G/40/9 (1624-81) consists of a collection relating to:

(i) the establishment of factories in Tanjore (1624), Armagem (1626), Petapoli (1625-31), Mausalipatam (1628-30) on account of Triplicane (1681).

(ii) Origin of the settlement of Fort St. George (1658), and

(iii) Revenues at Calcutta (1704-52).

The unclassified records await sorting and listing. These include various series of Factory Records, especially Bombay (G/3), Cape of Good Hope (G/9), China and Japan (G/12), Fort St. George (G/19), St. Helena (G/32), Sumatra (G/35), and Surat (G/36).
In addition to the above Factory Records preserved in the State Archives in India, the following series of Factory/Residency Records* are also available in the Maharashtra State Archives:

Factories:
- Balapur (1780-1781)
- Bankot (1756-1814)
- Sind (1762-1764)

Foreign and Political Department of the Government of India. The Baroda and Gujarat States Agency (Baroda) was formed in 1933, made a Residency on 1 April 1937 and merged with the former in 1944. The combined Agency/Residency was then named as Western India and Gujarat States Agency (Rajkot). This combined Agency includes the records of the following Agencies (Nos. 34-41).

After the lapse of Paramountcy, the Kashmir Residency Records (1891-1947) and the records of the O.S.D. The Residency and Political Agency Records in the India Office Library and Records, London (1757-1947)

On the eve of Indian Independence the records of the Residencies and Political Agencies in various Indian States were examined by the British Administrators in order that records relevant to the relations between the Crown and the Ruling Princes could be extracted and sent to London, where they would continue to be needed. In the process of examination, many files were destroyed. The records which broadly relate to the principles of the Crown's relations with the Indian Ruling Princes, private affairs of the Rulers, and the internal affairs of the States were despatched to the Commonwealth Relations Office, London, through the British High Commissioner at New Delhi in 1947-48. Some records were sent to the Indian State Government concerned. The remaining records were transferred to the National Archives of India.
