Facility for finding etymology of names in this area.—The manner in which place-names are assigned in Sikhim, Eastern Nepal and Western Bhutan, and also in Southern Tibet, can be ascertained with unusual facility and certainty by a local review of place-names in the Darjiling district, Native Sikhim and British Bhutan, owing to the great majority of the villages therein, having been founded within the present generation by migrant Sikhimites and Bhotiyas and immigrant Nepalis and Tibetans, under the Government policy of quickly peopling these hitherto sparsely populated tracts; so that the reasons for the special nomenclature of such new sites and villages are still currently known by the villagers. And, the etymology of many of the river-names and older place-names can be more or less readily traced owing to the still existing presence of the race of Lepchas—believed to be the autochthones of the area. The relative simplicity of the subsequent ethnic elements, all of which are still represented, also tends to simplify the problem.

Desirability of fixing the Lepcha etymology as the language is becoming extinct.—The present time, too, seems specially indicated for investigating this subject, from the fact that the Lepcha, though still a living language, is fast becoming extinct; and no vocabulary of the language having been published*, the names which the Lepcha race has given to the rivers and the mountains and other sites in Sikhim, although remaining as ethnological landmarks, might, through much longer delay, prove wholly unintelligible, through their meaning becoming lost.

* Mr. Hodgeon published (Essays, London reprint, 1874) a short list of Lepcha words, and several words are to be found scattered through Colonel Mainwaring’s Grammar of the Bong (Lepcha) Language; but these are quite insufficient for the present enquiry.

In my attempt to fix the etymology of some of these Lepcha names, I have to confess to the difficulty of the task in the absence of any vocabulary; but I have spared no pains in the endeavour to trace the exact meaning of the various roots by the help of the few more-intelligent Lepchas available (of literate Lepchas there are now none), and by local enquiry at most of the several spots during the past two or three years.

Ethnic history of Sikhim.—A reference to the ethnic history of Sikhim itself is necessary in essaying the discovery of the system adopted by its inhabitants in naming places within its area. And first of all as to the limits and position of Sikhim.

Sikhim defined.—Sikhim forms a narrow oblong tract in the south-eastern Himalayas and sub-Himalayas, wedged in between Nepal on the west and Bhutan on the east, and bounded on the north by Tibet and on the south by the plains of Bengal. Its position is peculiarly isolated, it being separated from Nepal and Bhutan by high wall-like ridges, from Tibet by the snows, and from Bengal by the dreaded Tarai jungle.

Darjiling district defined.—The Darjiling District consists mainly of 'British Sikhim,' i.e., the southern third of Sikhim, including the Sikhim Tarai (or Morang), the plains skirting the foot of the hills. To this tract was added, as a result of the Bhutan war of 1862, a slice of the hilly portion of western Bhutan from the Tista eastwards: the remainder of 'British Bhutan' is the tarai-tract known as the 'Dwara' and a strip of hill territory in the neighbourhood of the British frontier-posts of Buxa and Dewangiri, which for administrative purposes are included in the Jalpaiguri District and Assam.

The Lepchas.—As above stated, the Lepchas are believed to be the aborigines of Sikhim. Their own tradition, which, is very vague, credits them with having entered Sikhim about 500 years ago. As, however, they preserve the tradition of a great local deluge, it is probable that their entry was much earlier than this. The peculiarly isolated position of Sikhim and its inhospitable nature can account for its comparatively late occupation. The term 'Lepcha' is, like the current name for their country (viz. Sikhim), of Nepali origin and uncertain meaning.* The Lepchas call themselves Rong which in their vernacular means a 'squatter' or 'care-taker,'† and the country they call 'Ne lung' or 'the country of caves,' i.e., for shelter. By the Bhotiyas (Tibetans) they are called Môm-bô (Mon-pô) and Mô-rl (Mon-rike), i.e., 'Inhabitants of the Mon Valleys' and 'Mon tribe.' The Lepchas seem to have preceded the Bhotan Bhotiyas in the trans-Tista (British Bhotan) portion of the Darjiling District, as most of the mountain and river-names there are of Lepcha origin.

† This tradition is a somewhat circumstantial account of the flooding of the country by the Great Rangit river, quarrelling with its spouse the Tista and refusing to go with her to the plains. The waters rose as high as 'Bangli Ranglot' (q. v.), i.e., over 4000 feet above the present level of the river, and even Mt. Mainom the sister of Tendong was submerged, Tendong saving the inhabitants only by raising himself above the waters. The quarrel was ultimately mended and the pent-up waters fell. There are so many side-stories bearing on this great deluge, that it is almost certain that a great local flood actually happened here, by a vast landslip (volcanic or otherwise) damming up the waters for a time.

The 'Sikhim-Bhotiyas' or 'Sikhim-Tibetans.'—The next ethnic element was an influx of Tibetans from the Tsang province of Tibet immediately to the north of Sikhim. The date of this immigration is fairly well known—it occurred about 400 years ago.‡ These Tibetans promptly usurped the sovereignty and became the dominant race, and the present 'räjá' of Sikhim is about the 10th or 11th of this series of Tibetan chiefs. The routes by which they entered are still called 'the great pass' (La-chhen), and 'the short pass (La-chhung). Although they intermarried freely with the Lepchas and still do so to a considerable extent, they awarded them a very low social position; and so unfashionable and effete has the Lepcha race now become that the Lepchas seek self-effacement by intermarriage with Bhotiyas and Limbus, and so are fast contributing to the speedy extinction of their own race. These Tibetans of Sikhim are by the Nepalis called Sikhim Bhotiyas. It is desirable here to define the terms 'Bhotiya' and Bhotan as they are frequently confused and misunderstood. The native name of Tibet is written Bod and pronounced Pô. The Sanskrit form of this word was Bhot,§ and its inhabitants by all the Sanskrit-speaking races of India are called Bhotiya (also written Bhutiya) which is synonymous with Tibetan—'Tibet,' the current European form, being believed to be merely the Persian or Tartar

* The Nepalis pronounced the word 'Lapche' which is the true pronunciation. It is said to be a contemptuous term, and is possibly derived from the Parbatiyā lab + chē = 'the vile speakers.' The Lepchas, unlike the Limbus and other neighbouring tribes of apparently cognate origin did not adopt the Parbatiyā language.
† And their explanation is, that they were originally given this country by God to take care of. It is unlikely that this name is derived from the Tibetan rong, 'a valley,' as the word does not seem exotic. It is probably related to their legend of Mount Ten-jong, q.v.
‡ Mainwaring, loc. cit., p. x.
§ Hodgson believes that the Tibetans derived the name of their country from the Sanskrit appellation through the early Indian Buddhist missionaries.—The Language &c. of Nepal and Tibet, p. 22. This, however, is doubtful.
The country generally known in India as Bhotan† was so called by the Bengalis in the belief that it was 'the end of Bhot,' which is the literal meaning of the full Sanskrit form of the word, viz., 'Bhotánta.' The natives of Bhotan as well as of Tibet proper are also by Hindus called Bhotiyas as being inhabitants of Bhot. It is therefore to be remembered that the terms Bhotiya and Tibetan are synonymous, the various divisions being designated by prefixing the name of the country in which the Bhotiyas are now settled, e. g., Sikhim-Bhotiya, Nepáli-Bhotiya, Bhotan or Dharma-Bhotiya, Tibetan and Chinese Bhotiyas.

The Limbus.—More peaceful intruders were the Limbus‡ a Mongoloid race from the adjoining hills on the west. These like the Sikhim Bhotiyas intermarried, and still do so, to a considerable extent with the Lepchas. They, however, had a superior civilization and formed settled abodes. Latterly, they have generally given up Buddhism in favour of a rough form of Hinduism, and have adopted the dress and to a large extent the dialect (Parbatiyá) of the Nepáli highlanders.

The Nepális or 'Paháriyás.'§—These three tribes, viz., the Lepchas,

* E. Coleborne in J. R. G. S., Vol. I, Supp., I, p. 98, says "A Tibetan arriving in Ta-chien-lu from Lhasa on being asked from what country he has come will often reply 'from Ten Peu', meaning from High or Upper Tibet. Perhaps Ten Peu is the source of our Tibet." The word should properly be spelt Tö-pöt, which fairly approximates to our 'Tibet.' L. A. W.

† The natives and all Tibetans call this country 'Duk-pa' (hbrug-pa) which literally means 'the thunderer,' evidently, it seems to me, on account of the unusual amount of thunder experienced here; as the mountains of the greater part of the tract receive the full force of the monsoon from the top of the Bay of Bengal. The Lamas on the other hand assert that the name is derived from the Duk-pa sect of Lama and implies the worship of the thunderbolt which is so peculiar to Bhotan Lamaism; the name of thunderbolt, however, is 'dorje' not 'duk,' and the name may more probably be merely a result of the worship of the (for Tibetans) striking and somewhat mystic natural phenomenon (thunder characteristic of this area. And this view is supported by the vernacular history of Bhotan—the 'Namtharkyi Nag-wang-ten-dsin Nam-gyal'—which translates the title 'hbrag-pa' (i. e. Dukpa) into Sanskrit as megha-mvara or 'cloud-voice.'

‡ So called by the Nepális; they call themselves Yāk-thumba (or Yāk-herds), and the Lepchas and Bhotiyas call them Tešong (which in the vernacular means 'a' merchant'); and the Limbus were and still are the chief cattle-merchants and butchers in Sikhim, and cattle was the chief form of exotic merchandise until the British occupation.)

§ It is to be noted that the term 'Parbatiyá', a Sanskritic word having an identical meaning, viz., 'of or belonging to the hills,' is in practice restricted to the language, a Hindi dialect spoken by the Paháriyás. And the title of paháriyá is confined to those hillmen only who profess Hinduism, and this usually of a most lax type.
Bhotiyas and Limbus, formed the population of Sikkim; and this simplicity of ethnic constitution remained undisturbed (except for a brief incursion of Ghorkhas about the beginning of the present century, the intruders, however, being soon expelled by the British) until the British occupation of Darjiling as a Sanatorium. This latter event, which took place in 1837 was speedily followed by a large addition to the population, consisting mainly of Nepali or 'Pahariya' (Hindi for 'hill-men') settlers from Eastern Nepal.† This great influx of Nepalis during the past few decades, although comprising very numerous and distinct tribes, (viz., Newars, Kiranti, Murung, Magar or Magar Khás &c., all more or less Mongoldid in type and until recently each speaking widely different dialects) is from a linguistic point of view practically homogeneous, from the great majority of these tribes having adopted the Sanskritic 'Parbatiya' dialect along with the Hindu ceremonial of their Gorkhali rulers.

The Bhotan Bhotiyas or Duk-pa.—The portion of Bhotan annexed to the Darjiling district in 1862 had previously contained only a very few settlements of Bhotan Bhotiyas (or 'Duk-pa') and Lepchas. This tract being also thrown open to emigrants, a large portion was soon occupied by Nepalis, and a not inconsiderable number of refugees from independent Bhotan, and a few Tibetan Bhotiyas or Pö-pa.

* SImplicity of the linguistic elements.—Linguistically then, there may be considered to be, and to have been, only three generally distinct languages prevalent among the settled inhabitants of Sikkim and the Darjiling district, viz., the (1) Lepcha (or Rong-ring) with † The Gorkhas, now the ruling race of Nepal, derive their name immediately from the town of Gorkha which is about 60 miles W. N. W. from Katmandu (Ogilby's 'Nepal,' Vol. I), and which formed the first location of their Rājput ancestors in the Himalayas; but this place-name is in its turn derived from the eponymous deity of the now royal family, viz., Gorakhanáth, who seems to be a form of Śiva (Cunningham's Anc. Geog., p. 165). Only a small proportion of the members of our so-called 'Gorkha' regiments are really Gorkhas, the majority are Magar, Gurung, Kirati, &c.

H
which may be included the Limbu dialect which seems structurally allied to it, (2) the Tibetan or Bhotiya, including its Sikhimite and Bhotan dialects, and (3) the Sanskrit dialect (Parbatiyā) of the Nepāli Pahāriyas. All these linguistic elements are represented in the local names of the area here discussed; and in addition, in the Tarai is a slight Bengali (Sanskritic) element of recent introduction; and in the hill-tract are several English names designating settlements con-ected with colonization and British enterprise in the tea-industry, e. g., Hope-town, Bloom-field, Bannock-burn, Birch-hill, &c., but too few to merit special notice.

Plurality of Place-names.—The oldest names are found to be of Lepcha origin. The Lepchas from their wild forest life are ‘born’ naturalists, possessing a name for nearly every natural product, animal or vegetable, whether of economic value or not. Hence they readily gave discriminating names to the chief mountains, rivers and sites in their neighbourhood. A few of these old names still survive in places where the Lepchas no longer are present. The Bhotiyas, on settling in Sikhim, bestowed their own names on many of the already named sites, partly perhaps from the fact that the meaning of the Lepcha name was not evident, and partly to express their contempt for the Lepchas. Thus, many of the hills and rivers possess two names, vis., a Lepcha name and a Bhotiya (Tibetan) name, e. g., the Riot Ung and Rang-nyu Ung of the Lepchas are the Dik-chhū and Tsang-chhū of the Bhotiyas; and the Konglū-chu and Na-tam chu of the Lepchas are called Kang-chhen-dsö-nga and Kabur by the Bhotiyas. And since the influx of Nepālis a third synonym in the Parbatiyā dialect of Hindī has been added in several instances for rivers, mountains and already named sites, e. g., Tīsta and Jalapāhār are the current Pahāriya names for the Lepcha Rang-nyu Ung and Kang-golg hlo; but such Nepāli synonyms usually are merely corruptions of the Lepcha or Bhotiya names, e. g., the Rād-dā of the Lepchas, Chumi-chhen of the Tibetans and Am-bi-ok of the Bhotan Bhotiyas are corrupted by the Nepālis into Ladhoma, Simik chi and Ambek respectively.

Orthography employed.—A few words here are necessary regarding the orthography employed. The current English forms (in maps &c.)
of spelling geographical names in this area, as elsewhere, are usually most incorrect and unsystematic: the spelling and pronunciation disagree at every turn, and are out of keeping with the native form, which is the only true one. The system adopted in this paper is the precise method of Sir W. Jones as recognized by the Society, and now generally followed for philological purposes. To adapt it to the complicated vowel-sounds and semi-silent final consonants of the Tibetan, and the peculiarity that such words are not pronounced directly as they are spelt, the following modifications generally following De Körös' system have been introduced:—In transliteration all the words are fully spelt (and not as in Jäschke's method which seems to me too contracted and symbolic), and the silent letters are put in italics. Diacritical marks are only used in the alternative spelling which gives the pronunciation: the letter \( \delta \) has an aw sound like the aw in law and awful, it literally represents the spelling in the written form; the vowel sound \( e \) is as in French, and \( õ \) and \( á \) are as in German; a subscribed dot to a final consonant indicates that it is almost silent. The following Tibetan letters are transliterated thus:—

\begin{align*}
\text{ʒ} &= \text{ch.} & \text{ʒ́} &= \text{ph.} & \text{ŋ́} &= \text{ng.} \\
\text{ɕ́} &= \text{chh.} & \text{ʃ́} &= \text{th.} & \text{ŋ̖} &= \text{ny.} \\
\end{align*}

and the nasal \( n \) is represented as \( ň \). The Lepcha words are spelt phonetically—their vowel sounds are so very complex and the language so decidedly tonic in character, that it is frequently almost impossible to express the exact sound in writing even by compound diphthongs.

Division of the names.—In detailing the etymologies of the local names it is convenient to arrange these in groups according to their Lepcha, Tibetan and Paháriya origin; and also to divide the place-names into names of mountains, passes, gompas (monasteries) and village or ordinary place-names.

THE RIVER-NAMES.

Of Lepcha origin, the majority.—In so mountainous countries as Sikhim and British Bhotan the rivers are very numerous. Most of the river-names in Sikhim proper are known only by their Lepcha names to both Bhotiyas, Paháriyas and the English. The Lepchas have no special word for 'river,' but employ instead the word for water, viz., ung in a variety of combinations. The Bhotiyas in adopting the Lepcha river-names substitute for the Lepcha suffix ung, the suffix chhu which has an identical meaning. While the Paháriyas substitute khola (which in Parbatiyá literally signifies 'a valley') or nadi the ordinary Hindí name for rivers. Thus the Rang-nyet ung of the Lepchas is the Rang-nyit chhu of the Bhotiyas, the Rang-git nadi of the Paháriyas and the Bunget river of the English.

Lepcha River-names.

The majority of the Lepcha names for rivers contain the prefix Rang which conveys the sense of extension or length and is to be met with in other words, e.g., Rang-gan = a steep ascent, &c. The following are instances of river-names with this prefix.

Rang-nyet ung = Rang, extended, + nyet, two + ung, water = 'the two extended waters.' There are two rivers of this name, viz., the Rang-nyet ung mo, 'the mother, or greater Rangit' and the Rang-nyet ung kop or 'the young, or lesser Rangit,' and they form 'the two' principal rivers of Sikhim proper. (The Tista, which is of course larger, arises beyond Sikhim).

Rang-po ung = Rang + po, muddied brown + ung = 'the muddied brown extended water.' A rivulet arising in the reddish lateritic soil of the low outer hills, and tributary to the Tista near Sivok.

Rang-zo ung = Rang + zo, precipitous or semi-vertical + ung = 'the precipitous river.' A torrent tributary of the Tista.

Rang-bong ung = Rang + bong, splashing. A tributary of the Tista in Sikhim descending throughout greater part of its length over boulders and precipices.

Rang-po ung = Rang + po, to shift or wander.

Rang-glo ung = Rang + glo, to fall.

Rang-guk ung = Rang + guk, narrow and constricted.

Rang-kon-ung = Rang + kon, to go straight.

Rang-fok ung = Rang + fok, to be incised deeply.

Rang-nyu ung = Rang + nyu = queen, 'the queen river' as it—the Tista—is the Spouse of the great Rangit. Nyu is also said to be a contraction for nang-yü, i.e., 'straight-going.' Where the Tista receives the Great Rangit, the chief river of Sikhim, which joins it at a right angle, the Tista continues in its straight unaltered course, its direction being unaffected by this great accession of waters, hence is attributed its Lepcha name. It is more likely, however, that it is so-called on account of its straight arrow-like course after leaving the hills, in contradistinction to the other great effluent river of Sikhim (the Mahaldi) which means 'the bent moving water.' Another possible derivation is from a-nyung = deep; the Tista being the deepest river in Sikhim and always unfordable.

Other river names containing this prefix are Rang-bi (= bik, to tear asunder), Rang-mo, Rang-li and Rang-fap, &c.

A few of the rivers share the prefix ra in common:—

- Another possible, though not very probable, derivation is from Dang = to run, i.e., + ung = running waters; d is frequently converted into r by the Lepchas—but this particular word in the colloquial is not subject to such change.
Ra-thong ung = Ra, surging and tumultuous advance, + thong, to swallow or drink up. The main source of the Rangit, and a glacier-fed rapid torrent subject to sudden and destructive flood.

Ra-dô ung = Ra, (as above) + dô, a lake. The river arises from a small lake called 'Kala pokh'ri', or the black lake' by the Nepalis and Ung-Dô by the Lepchas.

Ra-mith ung = Ra + mith, dust or grit. Arises in the lower slopes below Biroh Hill and is turbid.

Ra-mom ung (Pahariya 'Ra-mám') = Ra + (?) Mong, a demon, the name of the lake—Mong-dô—whence this river rises, beyond Phallut. (As an alternative derivation mom = incomplete, somewhat, in the sense of the Latin sub).

Other rivers are named:—

Bo-lo ung = Bol, tortuous.

Ri-li-ung = Bil, to revolve or turn round.

Ri-ri ung = Bi-ri, swift or rapid.

Ri-tot ung = Bi, rapid + yot, let loose, or unlimited. An extremely rapid river called by the Bhotiyas the Dik-chhu (q. v.).

Ri-shi ung = Bi, + ? shiap, whirling. A rapid mountain torrent.

Re-ing ung ('Raing' of map) = Re-ing, to spread out, or be shallow. A shallow and broadish rivulet in the outer hills near Sivok.

Ma-hal-di ung (corrupted by Bengalis and Pahariyas into 'Mahanadi' or 'Mahananda') = Má-hal, bent or curved + di to move. This river, as seen from the hills, takes a very sudden bent to the right on reaching the plains; and seems so-called in contrast to the Rang-nya Ung, i. e., 'the straight river,' the Lepcha name for the other great affluent river of Sikkim, viz., 'the Tista'.

Bhotiya River-names.

The Sikkim-Bhotiyas exhibit much poverty of invention in naming their rivers. When not directly borrowing the Lepcha name, which is the rule, they usually name the stream after the mountain whence it arises, or after the chief village or pass near which it flows. For example:—

La-chhen chhu = Qi la, a pass + ñ' chhen, great + ñ' chhu, water: 'the water of the great pass.'

La-chhun chhu = la + ñ' chhung, small + chhu: 'the water of the small pass.'

Ri-tes chhu = Ri-tee, the name of the hill + chhu.

Rong-li chhu = Rong-li, a Lepcha's house + chhu. At the ford or bridge over this river was encountered the first Lepcha's house on the way from Tibet.
As a result of this loose style of nomenclature, the same river possesses different names at different parts of its course, e.g., the Lachhung is called the 'Yum-thang chhu' and 'Mome chhu' opposite these two villages.

Exceptions to this practice are had in the following amongst others:—

Dik-chhu = 伟大复兴 (pr. tik or dik), staggering or reeling + chhu. A snow-fed stream which in a rocky bed descends about 10,000 feet in a course of about twelve miles.

Ri-ze chhu (Ang. Rishi) 伟大复兴 ri a mountain + 伟大复兴 gzar (pr. zé) a torrent. A mountain torrent crossed on the way from Tibet.

Tsang-chhu = 伟大复兴 gtsang, pure + chhu: 'the pure water'—the Bhotiya name of the Tista, deriving the name from its property possessed in common with all large rivers of tending to become quickly purified from defilement.

Le-ri chhu = 伟大复兴 de, to twist or plait + 伟大复兴 hkrib (pr. tí), to twist or coil.

Ro-ro chhu = 伟大复兴 rok-rok, black or gloomy.

Lakes are neither large nor numerous in this area, but such as do exist have usually mythological names and are believed to be the spouses of the hills in the neighbourhood. A small lake on Lebong Spur which was filled up last year in preparing the Station polo-ground was called Me-long tsho or 'the mirror-lake'. Another lake valley is called Chhu loṣk-yo, said to mean ' a spoon of water'.

Nepali (Parbatiyā) River-names.

The Pahariyas have accepted the Lepcha and Bhotiya names for the rivers within the hills, but have usually contorted these names by mispronunciation to an almost unrecognizable extent: e.g., the 'Ra-dō' and the 'Kale' of the Lepchas have become the Ladhoma and Kulhait of the Pahariyas.

The small hill streamlets are called by them jhora from the Skt. ज्होरा, jhara, a cascade or water-fall, from the root jha, to waste. These jhoras are individualized by being named after the adjoining village, or the special use they are put to, e.g., Dhobi-jhora (H. ज्होरा dhobi, a washerman) = 'the washerman's stream'; Kāk jhora (H. काक kāk a crow) 'the crow's brook', near the municipality rubbish-heap at Darjiling, where crows and kites congregate. When a hill-stream is subject to very sudden and violent outbursts, it is called Paglā jhora (H. पाग्ला, paglā insane or mad) 'the mad stream,' on account of its furious and erratic behaviour.
As regards the effluent rivers which debouch on the plains, the Pahariyas have accepted the current Bengali names for these, viz.:—

Tista. The Sanskrit form of the name is Tri-srota (Skt. त्रि + स्रोत) = 'the three currents.' The Tista, until the year 1787 A. D., when it suddenly forsook its old bed and opened for itself a new channel, on emerging from the hills divided into three portions named the Atrai, the Purnabhadra and the Karotoya rivers, which each followed independent courses to the Ganges and the Brahmaputra respectively. The name is of very old application, being mentioned as the Tri-srota in the Purânas; and as this name well described its leading physical feature in the plains, and under the Prâkrit rules the r of compound consonants is dropped in ordinary speech, thus forming 'Tisota' or 'Tista'—this seems to be its true etymology. An alternative etymology might be suggested, viz., Skt. तिष्ठ, trishta = 'harshly sounding'; but in the deltaic portion of its course this is not a character of its slow-flowing waters, and the literate Bengalis had no access to its course within the hills.

Mahamanda. This is the Bengali corruption of the Lepcha name Mahal-di, which name, as already shown, describes the most obvious feature of this river suddenly bending away to the right. The letters l and n are always interchangeable in speech, but after having made this interchange, as no plausible interpretation could be put on such a word, the Bengalis, and following them the Pahariyas, usually pronounce it 'Mahánadi,' i.e., 'the great river,' although its size does not warrant such a title.

Bálasan or Bálason is the Bengali name for the plains-portion of the Rishi Ohun of the Sikhimites. It is believed to be derived from the Bengali बालिक, báli (H. bálu) sand, + गोल, gona, gold, with reference to its extensive bed of yellowish sand.

Mech or Minch, the remaining morang (tarai) river (excepting the Chenga) is said to be so named from being the western boundary of the tribe, called by Bengalis Mech and by themselves Bodo—the semi-aborigines of the morang.

THE MOUNTAIN-NAMES.

The mountain names are mainly of Lepcha and Bhotiya origin. The names of the snow-clad peaks are almost wholly Bhotiya (Tibetan); as the Lepchas affect the lower levels and the valleys; while the Bhotiyas usually keep to the cooler heights, and were brought into constant relation with the higher peaks and passes in their commercial and religious intercourse with transnivean Tibet. The Paháriyas have no name for the individual snow-peaks, but call them collectively 'Himá' from Skt. निम्न hima snow, + घाटा dlya, house = 'abode of snow;' or 'Dhama giri, Skt. पद्म, + निर 'white mountain' (= 'Mont Blanc.')

Lepcha names of Mountains.

SHIN-SHEL HLO (Ang. Senchul) = Shin, cloud and mist-enveloped + shel, to be wet or dank + hlo, a mountain = 'the damp misty hill.' This mountain overlooking the plains receives the full force of the monsoon and is cloud-capped for the greater part of the year, so as to have been abandoned as a military site for the very qualities designated by its Lepcha name.

MA-HAL-DI KAM = Mahaldi, name of river above described, + ram, the source or fountain-head = 'the head of the Mahaldi' river.

SA-THONG HLO (Ang. Sitong) = Sa-thong, a tiger + hlo, a hill = 'tiger-hill.' A hill near Kurising overlooking the tarai and still frequented by tigers.

KUNG-GOL HLO, the Lepcha name for Jalapahar = Kung, a tree + gol, fallen or upset. The appearance from above is that of a prostrate tree: Birch Hill and Lebong Spurs being the main branches, and the smaller spurs the branchlets.

FOK-LUT (Ang. Phallut) = Fok to be excoriated or denuded + lut, an elevation or peak. This peak is so called on account of its top being bare of forest (being above the limit of trees), giving the appearance of being stripped or peeled of forest.

SIN-LE HLO (Ang. Singlelah) = Sing-le, a kind of alpine Alder (Alnus vel Betula, sp.). A steep mountain on the Nepal frontier beyond Phallut crowned by Alder trees.

TUN-PONG or TUN-KONG (Ang. Tendong) = Tün, to heap or raise up + rong, a horn; also Tung rong, = a ladder. A sub-conical mountain, which tradition asserts arose like a horn from amid a local deluge, and so enabled the Lepchas to escape being drowned. Their tribal name of Rong may perhaps be associated with this legend.

MA-NOM (Ang. MAinom) = Ma, mother + nom. sister. 'The elder sister' of Tendong.

SA-BAR KAM (Ang. Subarkum) = Sa-bar, the musk-deer, + kam, an overhanging rock. Formerly a favourite haunt of musk-deer, between Sandukfu and Phallut.
Kong-lo chu = Kong, highest or pre-eminent + lo, a screen or curtain + chu, snow and rocky mountain: 'the highest curtain of the snows.' The Lepcha name for Kangchhen-dso-nga (Ang. Kanchinjunga) which is worshipped as a god.

Nan-tam chu = Nan, level + tam cut away, truncated (also tam a plain) + chu. The Lepcha name for Kabru or Kabar: describing the peculiar truncated appearance of that mountain as seen from the greater part of Sikhim proper.

Pan-dim chu = Pan-dim, a king's minister (derived from pa-no a king). A high sub-conical peak, which is considered to be an attendant on the god 'Kanchinjunga.'

Ta-sing blu = Tasing, a ridge.

Bhotiya Mountain-names.

Kang-chhen dso-nga (Ang. Kanchinjunga) = ཡོང་སྐྱེན་དྲོ་ཉ གནམ་, snow + ནོང་ཆེན་, great + སྐྱེན་, repository or ledge + སྨོད་, five = 'the five repositories of the great snows,' referring to the 5 peaks of this, the second highest mountain in the world, which is an object of worship to both Bhotiyas and Lepchas.

Fyum-gang = Fyum a kind of bambu (Thamnocalamus, sp.) + གོང་, a ridge. Hooker noted* the appropriateness of this name.

Chumo-hla-ri = གོ་མོ་, a lady + རླ་, god + འིེ་, a mountain = 'the goddess mountain.'

San-duk-phu. This is interpreted by Lama Ugyen Gyatsho, whom I consulted regarding several of the Tibetan names, as རྒྱ་ རྒྱ་, meditation + རྒྱ་, group, to obtain + ཁུ་, phu, a height = 'the height or cave on which wishes by meditation will be obtained.' This mountain, however, is not called 'Sam-dup-phu,' nor has it reputed sanctity or any sacred spot. I believe that the name is derived from ལྟླ་, a plant + དུ་, dug, poison + phu = 'the height of the poison plant.' Here aconite and poisonous rhododendron are so abundant that all the sheep and cattle are muzzled while crossing this mountain; and it is a peculiarity of the Sikhim and Tsang dialect of Tibetan that a final ཉ is frequently introduced as an affix to the first syllable.

where absent in the written Tibetan; thus tsa-duk becomes tsan-duk.

Nar-seng = नार सेंग, a nose + नेंग seng, uplifted. The uplifted nose, descriptive of the appearance of the mountain as seen from lower Sikhim.

Fa-li-lung = फा लिंग pha-li, a large shield + लिंग lung, wind = the shield of the winds. This high ridge tends to shield lower Sikhim from the S. W. monsoon.

Ri-nak (Ang. Rhenock) = रिना, a hill + अग्र nag, black. The soil of this hill is a very black humus.

Ri-tse (Ang. Rishi) = रित्से, the hill top; the path leads over the top of the hill.

Chhorten-gang = चौर्तेन गंग mchhod rten, a chaitya + गंग gang = the chaitya ridge.

Pö-ga gang = पोगा, the sal tree + गंग gang = the ridge of sal trees.

Ri-sum = रिसुम, three = the three hills; at this site three ridges unite.

Ri-zha (Ang. Rishap) = रिजाघ a foot + दिवंग shape, a foot = a site at foot of the Himalayas.

Lung-thu (Ang. Lingthu) = लिंग्थु lung, a mountainous valley + थु thur, a steep descent. This mountain presents an unusually steep descent to the valleys. Many of the Bhotiyas call this hill Lung-tong लिंग्थों, i.e., the deserted mountain valley.

Dáling = डालिंग mdah, an arrow + गङ्ग gling. A subconical (arrow-head like) hill. Formerly a strong frontier fort of the Bhotanesi.

Bar-nya (Ang. Barmi) = बांग्ना hbar, burned + ग्यान gnyah, a neck: the burned saddle or spur.

Paháriyá Mountain-Names.

The Paháriyás generally accept the Lepcha and Bhotiya mountain-names. Amongst the exceptions are the following:—

- Examples of this in Sikhimite are:—min-de, a gun, for the Tibetan mo-dah.

  min-tok, a flower " " me-tok.

  mingo, not wanted " " mi-go.

  gydm, fat " " gyak.

And in Tsang-pa dialect of Tibetan an n is frequently inserted where the following syllable has, as in this case, an initial d; e. g.:

gan-de (= good) spelt dga-bde.

tshan-de (= hot) " teha-hde.
JALA PAHAR = H. Jala, burned + pahar, a hill. 'The burned hill.'
This accounts in part for the presently bare condition of this hill.

GIDH PAHAR = H. Gidh, a vulture + pahar. 'The vulture's hill.'
Here great numbers of vultures infest the rocky cliffs overlooking the plains.

THE PASS NAMES.

The names of the mountain passes are all of Tibetan origin. The term ला, or pass, is often loosely applied to the mountain itself. The following list comprises most of the passes:

DONG-KHYA LA (Ang. Donkia) = घम्म छर्ग (pr. dong), the wild yak + घोन्ग ख्याग, frozen + द्वार 'la = 'the frozen yak pass.'
A herd of wild yaks, in attempting to spend the night in this pass (18,100 feet high), were frozen to death.

SI-BU LA = बु तिल, cold. 'The cold pass'—the greater part of the way is under snow.

THANG-KAR LA (Ang. Tanka) = ठाङ्ग कर, a field + द्वार 'dkar, white. This pass presents a field-like expanse of snow, all the year round.

JO-LA (Ang. Chola) = जो, lord. 'The lordly pass,' said to be so called on account of its height and difficult approach. An alternative etymology is आं म्त्सो, a lake. Numerous lakes are in this pass.

YAK LA = ग्याङ, the yak (Bos grunniens). The pass for herds of yaks into eastern Sikkim.

YUM-TSHO LA = युंम, yum respectful title for 'mother' + mtsho.
'The lake of our (holy) mother,—a nymph who is worshipped here.

BI-SHIK LA (Ang. Rishi) = ब्रि, mountain + शिक, slipping or falling.
The pass has appearance of a landslip.

YAK CHHO LA = yak + च्छो gchhor, tired. A steep pass—a stage for 'tired' laden yaks proceeding above Lachhung.

DSE-LEP (Ang. Jelep) = द्षें, lovely + द्वार, level. 'The lovely level pass,' with reference to its ease and patency.

NAK-PO or NA-KO LA = नग्प, black. An unsnowed pass.

KU-PHU (Ang. Kupnp) = खु' skun, the body especially of a saint + phu, a summit. Tradition relates that the saint Guru Rimbochhe (Padma Sambhava) rested here, in passing to Tibet.
L. A. Waddell—Place and River-Names in Sikkim, 30. [No. 2, TUK-LA (Ang. Tukola) = ལྷ་གྲུང་, to tear or pluck off. Tradition states that the Pass was created by Guru Rimbochhe tearing off a portion of the rock to hurl at a demon who infested a lake in the vicinity to the annoyance of passengers.

DÜ-LA = ལྷ་མདུ་ (pr. dü) a demon. 'The devil's pass'.

KU-CHAK LA (Ang. Quiche) is said to be derived from ku a lock, or kug crooked = 'the locked pass.' It is a difficult snow-locked pass.

RÔ-BANG LA (Ang. Rabong) = རོ་, a carcase + བང་ bang, a grave. In the pass is an old mendong grave-cairn.

LA-CHHEN = la + chhen, 'the great pass.' The longest pass into Sikhim from the Tsang province of Tibet.

LA-CHHUNG = la + ལྷ་ chhung, small. 'The short pass' from Tsang into Sikhim.

NAMES OF GÖMPAS OR MONASTERIES.

Sikhim having derived its Buddhism and civilization from Tibet, its monasteries mostly bear Tibetan names and these usually of an ideal or mystic nature. The word མདོ་པ་ dgon-pa, pronounced gompa literally means 'a hermitage,' and the oldest monasteries were, and many of them (e.g., Dub-de, Sang-nga-chhög-ling, Pema-yang-tse, &c.,) still are situated in solitary places; but around some of the others, villages have gradually sprung up, and those of the most recent ones have been founded within villages from which they take their name, which in such cases is usually of Lepcha origin, e.g., Ram-tek, Ling-tâm.

DUB-DE = ཞྲེས་ sgrub (pr. 'dub,') a hermit's cell + ལྷ་ sde, a place. 'The place of the hermit's cell'—the oldest monastery in Sikhim founded by the pioneer missionary Hla-tsün Chhen-bo.

SANG-NGA-CHHÖ-LING (Ang. Sangachiling) སྲིང་ gsang, secret or occult, + ཨ་ sngags, spell or magic + སྲིང་ chhos religion + ལྷ་ gling, a place. 'The place of the occult mystic religion.' A catholic Buddhist monastery open to all classes, including deformed persons, nuns, Lepchas and Limbus.

PEMA-YANG-TSE (Ang. Pemiongchi) = སྲིང་ padma (pr. 'péma') a lotus + བང་ yang, perfect or pure + སྲིང་ rtse, the highest 'the monastery of the sublime perfect lotus (-born one, i.e., Padma Sambhava).' A monastery open only to pure, celibate,*

* This condition is now satisfied by disallowing the residence of priests' wives within the precincts of the monastic establishment.
and undeformed monks (= Tasang) and especially associated with Guru Rimbochhe who is worshipped here.

TA-KA TASHI-DING (Ang. Tashiding) = རྣ་ brag (= tag,) a rock + ཞས་ dkar, white + བཀྲ་སི་ bkra-shis (pr. tá-shi) glory + ཀྲུང lding, a soaring up or elevation. ‘The gömpa of the elevated glorious white rock.’ The site, a bold high promontory at the junction of and between the Great Rangit and Ratong rivers, is believed to have been miraculously raised up by Guru Rimbochhe, and amongst other traces a broad longitudinal white streak in the rock is pointed out as being the shadow of that saint.

PHO-DANG (Ang. Padung) = རྣ་ pho-lang, a sloping ridge; such is the site of this gömpa and the usual spelling of the name. As, however, this is the ‘chapel-royal’ of the rājā, it seems possible that the name may be རྣ་ pho-dang = palace, ‘the gömpa of the palace.’

LA-BRANG (La-brang) = ར་ bla, a contraction of lama or high-priest + རྣ brang, a dwelling. Here is the chief monk’s dwelling.

N. B.—This is one of the very few words in which br is literally pronounced as spelt.

DORJE-LING (Ang. Darjeeling) = རྣ་ dō-rje ‘the precious stone’ or ecclesiastical sceptre, emblematic of the thunder-bolt of Sekra (Indra or Jupiter) + ཀྲུང gling, a place. The monastery from which Darjiling takes its name, and the ruins of which are still visible on Observatory hill, was a branch of the Dorjeling, usually curtained into Dō-ling (Ang. Dalling) monastery in native Sikhim; and to distinguish it from its parent monastery, it was termed Wang-dui Dorje-ling (ཉེ་ dwang, power + ཀྲུང bdus, accumulated or concentrated) on account of its excellent situation, and powerful possibilities.

DE-TANG = De, a kind of tree (Daphne papyraceae, Wal.) from the bark of which ropes and paper are made + རྣ thang, a meadow = ‘the gömpa of the De meadow.’ Here these trees are abundant.

RI-GON (Ang. Rigim) = ri + རྣ dgon, a hermitage = ‘the hermitage hill.’ It is situated near the top of the hill.

TÖ-LUNG = རོ་ rdo, a stone + རྣ lung, a valley. This valley is remarkably rocky, and avalanches of stones are constantly falling in showers.

EN-CHE = རྣ dwen, (pr. en), a solitary place + ར ལེ་ lohe, a tongue.
A monastery on a tongue-shaped spur.
The monastery of ‘excellent bliss.’

Kha-chö-pal-ri (Ang. Ketsuperi) = འཇམ་ཐོ་ mkhay, heaven + རྒྱ་ spyod (pr. chö) to accomplish or reach + ཤབ་ dpal, noble + ri = the monastery of ‘the noble mountain of the Garuda (a messenger of the gods)’ or ‘of reaching heaven.’

Má-ni = སྐོར་ má-ñi, a tablet inscribed with ‘Om máni dèc.,’ a mendong. ‘The gompa of the mendong’: here the gompa was erected near an old mendong.

Se-kön = Se, a sloping ridge + རྒྱ་ non, depressed. Situation on a depressed sloping ridge. It is also spelt gaigs (pr. sít) see or beholder, + ཤབ་ mnön, to suppress; and in this regard it is alleged that here Padma Sambhava beheld the local demons underneath and kept them under.

Yang-gang = ཤམ་ yang, perfect, also lucky + མྱི་ sgang, a ridge. ‘The monastery of the lucky ridge.’

Lhün-tre = རྣམ་ lhun, lofty + རྒྱ་ rtse, summit. ‘The monastery of the lofty summit.’

Nam-tse = རྣམ་ rnam, a division or district + rtse. ‘Lofty division’ one of the subdivisions of Native Sikhim, on the flank of Tendong. It is probable that this is a Lepcha name from tset = ‘Seat of Government,’ as the site is a very old Lepcha one.

Tsün-thang (Ang. Cheungtham) = འཇམ་ bsun, a queen; also ‘respected one,’ i.e., a lama or monk; also marriage + མྲིན་ thang, a meadow. This gompa is situated overlooking a meadow at the junction of the Lachhen and Lachhung rivers. It may mean ‘the meadow of marriage (of the two rivers),’ or ‘the meadow of the lamas,’ or ‘the meadow of the lady’—its full name as found in manuscript being འཇམ་བསུན་.mo rin-chen thang, ‘bsun-mo rin-chhen thang,’ implies that the lamas would have the monastery derive its name from ‘the precious Lady-(pig)’ whose image is prominently displayed within the gompa.

Rab-ling (Ang. Rawling) = རིྨ་ rab, excellent or high + gling, a place. This monastery is situated on a high cliffy ridge.

Nub-lung (Ang. Nobling) = ཉུབ་ nub, the west + gling = ‘The gompa of the western place or country.’ It lies on the western border of Sikhim.

De-kyi-lung (Ang. Dikiling) ཉུབ་ རྒྱི་ bde-skyid, happiness + gling = ‘The place of happiness.’ It is a rich arable site with extensive marwa cultivation.

Rin-Chhen-Pung (Ang. Ringkingpung) = rin-chhen, precious + pung, a heap or knoll, ‘The precious knoll.’ The soil is rich and fertile.

For names of other monasteries see under the heading of Village-names.

VILLAGE AND OTHER PLACE-NAMES.

Lepcha Place-names.

When the place-name indicates the site of a village the suffix kyung or kyong = ‘village,’ is added; and for a site without any existing village lay-ang = ‘a place or tract’ is added.

Pa-Dam-Tam (Ang. Badamtam) = Pa-dam, a large species of bambu (Dendrocalamus Hamiltonii, N. et A.) from which water-vessels (‘chongas’) and marwa jugs ‘pa-hip’ are made: it grows only below 4,000 feet + tám, a contraction for par-tám, a level spot. ‘The padam-bambu bank:’ here formerly was a forest, the nearest to Darjiling, of this kind of bambu which is in much demand.

Yokri-Bong = Yokri, India-rubber tree (Ficus elastica) here abundant + bong, (= Tibetan རིག་ ) a stump or foundation, hence also a residential site. A village founded among (the stumps of felled or simply among) ‘rubber’ trees.

THE GENERAL IMPORT OR MEANING OF THE NAMES.

The above lists of names with their etymological definitions, although not exhaustive, suffice to show the manner in which place and river-names are assigned in this area. The great majority of the names are given by illiterate persons, so that grammatical accuracy is not always to be expected. The names, as to their meaning, may be generally classed as descriptive; a few are mythological and religious, but these are chiefly confined to monastery names; and the personal designations perpetuating the names of the founders of villages are found almost exclusively amongst the Paháriyá settlements.

Names mostly descriptive.—The descriptive names predominate, and these usually well express some very obvious physical feature of the site or river, e.g., of rivers, an especial tortuosity, steepness, impetuosity, shallowness or otherwise of a course or channel; of mountains, their shape, appearance &c.; of village sites, the stony, precipitous, meadow-like character, quality of soil, jungle-product, conspicuous tree &c.

Names of the country.—In naming the country, both the Lepchas and Bhotiyas characterized the most striking feature of the country, each from their own respective point of view. The Lepchas, a roving forest-people, even still living largely on jungle-products and sleeping under rocks for shelter, called this country Ne-layang or 'the country of caves,' while the Bhotiyas, a much more pastoral and agricultural race, who came from across the Himálayas, where rice is highly prized as food, but not there growable, called the country ख्र्याम्ब्रोज्जंगो ख्र्याम्ब्रोज्जंगो abra-jongs, pronounced Dé-jong* or 'the rice-country,' as rice is abundantly cultivated in Sikhim. These Sikhim Bhotiyas in the course of the three or four centuries which have elapsed since migrating from Tibet, have acquired a dialect which differs in many ways, but chiefly in pronunciation, from the polite speech now prevalent at Lhasa. One feature of this difference is the tendency, shared in common with the Tsang-pa Bhotiyas of Nepal, and already noticed, to insert a final n where such does not appear in Tibetan. The country has thus come vulgarly to be called Dén-jong, instead of Dé-jong, and the people generally call themselves Dén-jong-pa, i.e., 'the people of Den-jong.' And the Lepchas in accepting the name imposed by their conquerors usually pronounce it Ben-jong—v being with them frequently interchangeable with the letter d.

The etymology of the modern name of 'Sikhim' is not at all so clear. It is generally alleged by the Lepchas and Bhotiyas to be a Parbatiya name, applied to the country by the conquering Gorkhas. As the great majority of the Parbatiya words are derived almost directly from the Sanskrit, I venture to suggest that the most probable derivation is from the Sanskrit शिखिन = crested: this would characterize the leading feature of the approach from the Nepal side—a long high ridge, with Kanchinjunga 28,000 feet and Kabur 22,000 feet in its middle, separates this country from the Gorkha territory; and being shut off from Bhotan by another high ridge, the intervening narrow tract which constitutes Sikhim presents within itself an unusual number of ridges (crests) running more or less in N. to S. direction, transverse to the vista from Nepal.†

Many of the place-names merely denote halting places or stages presenting a rock-shelter or a clearing in the jungle with water-supply near, and occasionally pasture. These sites, being on lines of communication and always near a water-supply, occasionally develop into villages. These names were probably given by Tibetan merchants or other travellers such as priests or monks. The process of such name-giving might arise through a pioneer merchant or other traveller, narrating the stages of his journey into 'the rice country' (Dejong) and his successors adopting his stages and nomenclature. Such a traveller might be supposed as saying that, on crossing 'the level track pass' in some instances the difference appears due to preservation of ancient forms of speech rather than a new development, or corrupt dialect.

† This name is not at all likely to be related to Skt. शिख, sek, to wet or moisten, for the climate of Sikhim does not appear to be more moist than that of the adjoining portion of Eastern Nepal. Nor does the conjecture seem tenable that it is a Parbatiya translation of one of the vulgar forms of the Bhotiya name for the country, viz., 'Demo-jong' or 'the happy country' from सुखी sukhi, happy; as the name is never spelt or pronounced with u, and the country was, and still is, a most inhospitable one.
(Je-lep-la), he passed the 'Sainta's mount' (Kuphu) and 'the Guru's tâile' and reached 'the black meadow' (Na-thang) where he halted. Next day he proceeded down 'the steep descent' (Lung-thu), past 'the big clearing' (Phadom chhen), to the large Sedong tree (Sedong chhen). Next day, continuing the descent, he crossed 'the water' (chhu) at 'the Lepcha's house' (Rong-li) and ascended to 'the big flat stone' (Dö-lep chhen) where he halted. The following day he crossed 'the black hill' (Ri-nak) and 'the mountain torrent' (Ri-ze chhu), and ascended to 'the Pö-tree halting place' (Pö-dang). Next day continuing his march, he lunched at 'the big spring' (Chhu-mik chhen), and crossing the ridge at the junction of 'the three hills' (Ri sum), reached 'the Kalôn's stockade or 'pong' as the Lepchas call it (Kalôn-pong), &c., &c.

The Paháriyás and Bengalis are addicted to giving a personal name to their villages; this is perhaps inevitable where the area, as is usual in such cases, is thickly populated, and presents no striking natural features. The Paháriyás share with Europeans the tendency to transplant to their adopted home, names taken from their old country, although these possess no local appropriateness in their new application.

On the date of the Bower Manuscript.—By A. F. RUDOLF HOERNLE.

The Bower manuscript was exhibited to the Society at the two meetings in November, 1890 and April, 1891. I call it the "Bower MS.," in order that Lieutenant Bower, to whose enterprise the learned world owes the preservation of the manuscript, may receive the honour due to him. Some account of the locality and circumstances of its finding will be found in the Society's Proceedings for November, 1890; and a preliminary account of the manuscript and its contents was published by me in the Proceedings for April, 1891. Since then I have spent a long summer vacation in carefully examining the whole manuscript, and, with the exception of a few leaves, I have read and transcribed the whole. I have every reason to hope that the Bengal Government, with its usual liberality in such matters, will enable me to publish a complete edition of the manuscript which I am now preparing.

This paper had been written (in Darjiling, in May), when I received (in July), through the kindness of Professor Bühler in Vienna, an advance copy of his notice† of the specimen pages of the Bower MS.,
