PREFACE

It is now more than forty-five years since the monumental work entitled ANTIQUIFIES OF CHAMBA STATE, Part I (Inscriptions of the Pre-Muhanmudan Period), appeared as Vol. XXXVI of the Archaeological Survey of India, New Imperial Series. Its veteran author, Dr. J. Ph. Vogel, the then Superintendent, Archaeological Survey, Northern Circle, had intended to publish the whole material in two parts, the first, as has been indicated above, dealing with the Pre-Muhammadan period, and the second covering the rest, namely, the Muhammadan and Post-Muhammadan After having completed the first part, he had already started on the second, but had to leave it unaccomplished owing to his departure from India to Holland. Then set in the Great War which made any further progress with the work impossi-However, Dr. Vogel has 'all along been anxious to see that the work commenced by him is somehow or other finished, and to that end he had been negotiating with the Director General of Archaeology in India. And it was as a result thereof that I was entrusted with the task of writing the second part of the ANTIQUITIES OF CHAMBA STATE dealing with the inscriptions of the mediæval and later periods. It has been a matter of great pride to me that I have been personally associated with the learned Professor, Dr. J. Ph. Vogel, having worked under him for some years in the rooms of the Kern Institute at Leyden, Holland.

Dr. Vogel, as stated above, had commenced working on the present volume. When in the summer of 1938 Rao Bahadur K. N. Dikshit, the then Director General of Archaeology in India, and myself visited Chambā in order to take stock of the material to be worked, we found inter alia Dr. Vogel's own manuscripts, comprising well nigh three hundred pages, preserved in the Bhuri Singh Museum there. These were later on sent to the office of the Director General of Archaeology in India. New Delhi, and were subsequently placed at my disposal.

These manuscripts concern only the copper-plate charters which form the bulk of this volume. They contain transcripts, in some cases complete and in the other partial, explanatory notes here and there, translations of parts of a few inscriptions, identification of some of the places mentioned in the grants, and notes touching the plan of the work as envisaged by Dr. Vogel. All this material, it gives me pleasure to record, stood me in good stead; it afforded me both guidance and assistance in carrying out the allotted task more or less according to the plan visualised by Dr. Vogel himself.

The Bhuri Singh Museum at Chambā had in its possession also impressions of the great many of the copper-plate inscriptions dealt with here, which were likewise sent to the office of the Director General of Archaeology in India, New Delhi. A similar

It may be pointed out that the term Muhammadan has been employed here more for convenience's sake. It reters to the Muslim rule in the Panjäb in a general way and does not necessarily denote the cultural influence of Islam whereby the Chambia State was evidently least affected owing to its secluded and sheltered position.

collection of impressions existed in the office of the Superintendent, Archaeological Survey, Frontier (then Northern) Circle, Lahore (now in Pakistan) which in like manner was made available. The two collections supplemented each other, though some few gaps still remained to be filled.

When the whole of the existing material was thus assembled in the office of the Director General of Archaeology in India, New Delhi, two post-graduates, namely Mr. S. K. Dikshit, M. A.,¹ and Mr. Krishna Deva, M.A.,² availed themselves of the opportunity of studying it. Besides checking it, they added some useful notes of their own.

It was early in the year 1939 that I was formally called upon to undertake the task and to visit Chamba in that connection. Mr. Krishna Deva was then deputed to accompany me for rendering assistance in the work.

A personal visit to Chamba was essential for various reasons. The eighty odd ccopper-plate charters treated of here are substantially couched in the Bhāshā or the local dialect called Chambyālī in a form which, in consonance with the nature of the subject-matter, necessarily differs from the common parlance and abounds in obscure expressions and abstruse terms, and, on top of that, is more or less obsolete at present. Such hard nuts could be cracked only with the help locally available. Secondly, it was possible readily to identify different places, rivers, mountains and so forth, that are mentioned in the records, likewise by personal enquiries. Thirdly, if any of the original documents were required either for examination or for comparison, they were easy of access only within the State. Besides, there was a possibility of discovering additional epigraphs.

Speaking of additional discoveries, it may be pointed out that three of the copperplate inscriptions dealt with here, namely Nos. 33, 81 and 82, have not been noticed by Dr. Vogel. Nor do the two collections of impressions referred to above include any impressions of them. They thus appear to be subsequent acquisitions. The first of them, that is No. 33, pertains to Balabhadra, while the remaining two, Nos. 81 and 82, belong to Śrisimha. It is of course, quite likely that Dr. Vogel was aware of the existence of these last two, but that he considered them to be of too late a date to be included in his collection. There is, however, one consideration that militates against The last copper-plate charter noticed by him is said to be such a supposition: dated V.S. 1941, which is not included here. The two records in question (Nos. 81 and 82) are earlier than that by one quarter of a century. On the other hand, it can be said, at least of the last record (No. 82), that, built as it is in the right wall of the main entrance leading to the temples of Lakshmi-Nārāyana and other divinities, it is so prominently situated that it can hardly escape notice. even of a casual visitor there.

¹ Son of Rao Bahadur K. N. Dikshit, Director-General of Archaeology in India. He had then recently finished his University course.

² Then scholar unuer training in the Archaeological Survey of India, and new a Superintendent in the Department,

As indicated above, estampages of some of the copper-plate charters were still wanting. Since necessary facilities were not to be had in Chamba for taking the required inked impressions of such records, we had to be content only with their photographs which were prepared by Mr. Mangat Rai Mehta, then attached to the office of the Superintendent, Archaeological Survey, Frontier Circle, Lahore.

During my s.ay in Chamba, which lasted for two months, much spadework was done: fresh transcripts prepared, elucidative notes taken and rough translation drawn up, all this with the help so generously lent by the Rājaguru, Pandit Thākur Das, who had formerly assisted Dr. Vogel in like manner, and to whose ability and worthiness Dr. Vogel has paid a well-deserved tribute of praise while acknowledging his assistance. In fact, he is admittedly the only person alive in the Chamba State who can understand and interpret the language of the old documents edited here; and it is a matter of deep gratification that his services have still been available.

Before closing this note, I wish to record my grateful acknowledgments for the help received from different quarters in the production of this work. First of all, my sincere thanks are due to Professor Dr. J. Ph. Vogel and the late Rao Bahadur K. N. Dikshit, both of whom from time to time favoured me with various useful suggestions and encouraging remarks while the work was under preparation. Next, I wish to express my gratitude to the then Council of Administration, Chamba State, consisting of Col. H. S. Strong, C. I. E., the President, Dewan Bahadur Madho Ram, the Minister, and Rai Sahib Har Govind, the Judicial Member, who readily and willingly provided me with all facilities in connection with my study of the inscriptions during my stay in Chamba and also evinced keen interest therein.

To the Rājaguru, Pandit Thākur Dās, I am greatly indebted for his ungrudging help which has proved most valuable and indispensable for a proper treatment of the records concerned. Further, I am thankful to Mr. Jaiwant Ram, B.A., B.T., the then Head Master, State High School, Chamba, and Curator, Bhuri Singh Museum, Chamba, who likewise lent me a helping hand in solving some of the knotty textual problems.

Last but not least, I have to acknowledge equally thankfully the assistance received from Mr. Krishna Deva, M.A., now a Superintendent in the Department. His collaboration at that stage has helped in expediting the work.

Completion of the task fills me with joy, amply compensating for the pains it has cost me: kleśah phalena hi punarnavatām vidhatte!

POSTSCRIPT

The publication of this Memoir at long last, it may gratefully be recorded, is mainly due to the active interest taken by Professor Dr. J. Ph. Vogel. I have constantly been in touch with him and have all along been receiving advice and encouragement from him. Luckily for us, he continues to be hale and hearty, and, in spite of his advanced age, he keeps himself busy with his scholarly pursuits. He celebrated his 86th birthday on the 9th January, 1957, and is thus now running his 87th year. "Let me conclude by saying", writes he in his letter to me, written just a day earlier, i.e. on the 8th January, 1957, "that I am in excellent health and still working on my book on the hamsa. I hope to complete it in 1957, if my āyuhśeshatvam allows it."

It is nearly 17 years since the foregoing preface was written and the work was made press-ready. During this period many changes have taken place. A stage came when the idea of publishing the work was almost given up. Professor Vogel then came forward, urging upon the Government of India the necessity of expediting the publication of Part II of the Antiquities of Chamba State. He even suggested that the work might be entrusted to the Royal Asiatic Society of London or to some other learned society abroad if it were not possible to have it published in India. After some correspondence, it was decided that the work should be split into two sections—epigraphy and general archaeology. It may be recalled that originally Part II of the Antiquities of Chamba State was designed to contain both these sections in one volume, written jointly by Dr. H. Goetz and The former was to write on the temple architecture, paintings, etc., of Chamba, and myself on the inscriptions. The section of Dr. Goetz has since been published as Memoirs of the Kern Institute No. 1 under the title The Early Wooden Temples of Chamba. With the publication of the present work the rest of the material has now been published.

It may be observed that during the long interval some more inscriptions have been discovered in Chamba. I hope to edit these subsequently and also to prepare an index to both Part I and Part II of the Antiquities of Chamba State.

Owing to certain unavoidable circumstances, the printing of this Memoir had to be delayed for several years during which period I received further welcome help from Dr. G. S. Gai as well as from Messrs. M. Venkataramayya and Satya Shrava, all of the Department of Archaeology, especially in checking and reading the proofs.

Finally, I take the opportunity also to express my gratitude to Messrs. M. K. Majumdar (General Manager), G. Mathen (Assit. Manager) T., A. K. Das (Foreman Class I) D.M.E. and others of the Government of India Press, New Delhi, for the personal interest and trouble taken by them in pushing the matter through the press.

Makabasankrānti,

B. CH. CHHABR A.

INTRODUCTION

COPPER-PLATE INSCRIPTIONS

The total number of copper-plate inscriptions that are included in this work is eighty-two. The first of them is dated V. S. 1387, and the last V. S. 1915. They pertain to twelve successive rulers, from Vairisimhavarman to Śrisimha, as detailed below:—

Serial numbers			Ruler's	namo)				Number of plates
1	Vairisimhavarman		•			•		•	1
2—5	Bhotavarman		•	•			•	•	4
68	Samgrāmavarman	•	•	• ,	•	•	•	•	3
9-10	Ānandavarman		•	• .	•	•	•	•	2
1119	Gaņeśavarman		•				٠		9
20—26	Pratāpasimha		•		•	٠	•	•	7
2769	Balabhadra	•	•	•				•	43
70—76	Prithvisimha	•	•	•	•	•		•	7
77	Śatrusimha		•		•			•	1
7 8	Umedasimha		•			•			1
79—80	Rājasimha .		•	•	•	•		•	2
81—82	Śrīsimha .		•	•		•	•	•	2

It will be seen that literally more than half of the total number of these charters belong to Balabhadra alone. This striking disproportion testifies to the excessively generous disposition of this prince, of which we shall by and by have more evidence.

COMMON FEATURES OF ALL PLATES

Some characteristics are common to all the copper-plate charters discovered in the Chamba State and are peculiar to them inasmuch as they are not commonly met with in similar contemporary documents found elsewhere in India. They may be summed up as follows: (1) Every charter consists of a single sheet of copper, though the size varies greatly. (2) Each plate is provided with a handle to its proper right. The plate thus puts on the appearance of a takhti or a wooden board

In [This is no doubt true to a certain degree, but on the other hand we have to take into consideration the exceptionally long reign of Balabhadra. I have calculated the number of grants per regnal year, and found that his grants work out less in number than those of Pratapasimha, and even than those of Ganesavarman which he issued subsequent to the arrival of Surananda. I regard the great number of copper-plate grants chiefly as the result of cultural conditions, i.e., a conscious renaissance of Mediaeval civilization. The time before was too barbarian, the later times adopted paper administration on the Mughal model.—H. Goet.]

used by school children. In some cases this handle has broken away, partly or altogether. Again, some of the handles have a hole pierced in the centre through which may be passed a cord by means of which the plate could be hung on to a peg in a safe corner—that is what the owners of the plates probably used to do (3) Every one of the plates is invariably engraved only on one side. The predilection for such an arrangement is very much in evidence on certain plates, where the text runs on into all the margins, not excepting the handle, while the size of letters in its concluding portion is gradually diminished into the bargain. A typical example of this kind is supplied by the inscription No. 32, though No. 23 beats it in respect of congestion. (4) Almost every plate has a seal engraved usually in the top left corner in the shape of a rosette or some other ornamental design. The space in its centre is occupied by a legend invariably in Nāgarī characters, containing the name of the king to whom the deed concerned pertains. In a few instances the seal is replaced by the word sahī likewise in Nāgarī characters. The significance of this has been discussed below.

LITHIC RECORDS

The stone inscriptions dealt with in this volume do not compare favourably—neither in quantity nor in quality—with the copper-plate records. Their number amounts to twenty-one. The most outstanding of the lithic records is the Chabūtrā stone inscription of V. S. 1717. It is the precise dating in it that vests it with importance, which has been duly considered elsewhere ²

The nineteen short epigraphs of the Vajreśvarī temple are mere labels giving names of the artisans, except one which is dated and informs us that the (reparation) work was started on the given date.

MISCELLANEOUS INSCRIPTIONS

The short inscription appearing on the massive bell suspended from the ceiling of the mandapa of the Chāmuṇḍā temple stands out by itself, as it cannot be included in either of the preceding two classes. It is dated, gives the names of the dedicator and the manufacturer of the bell, and mentions its weight and cost.

PALAEOGRAPHY

Our inscriptions represent two distinct characters: Devanāgarī and Devāsesha. The use of the former is restricted mostly to the legends appearing on the seals of the copper-plate charters. Later on, however, Devanāgarī alone is employed in such records. The earliest of this kind in Chamba is Umedasimha's grant of V.S. 1805 (No. 78).3

Dr. Vogel's statement to the effect that Rājasimha's grant of V.S. 1833 ranks as such may be modified. ACS. Pt. I, p. 45.

Deväsesha refers to a later development of the Śāradā alphabet. Dr. Vogel has made an exhaustive study of the subject and has arrived at definite conclusions which may, with advantage, be recapitulated here. The evolution of the scripts in question is, in brief, like this: Brāhmi—Western Gupta—Kuṭila—Śāradā. Devāśesha—Tākarī. Kuṭila, of which Śāradā is shown to be the immediate descendant, continued up to the end of the 8th or the beginning of the 9th century A. D., which thus becomes the epoch of Ṣāradā. The script continues undergoing slow but sure changes until, by the beginning of the 13th century A. D., its appearance is sufficiently altered to justify a separate designation. That is then Devāśesha. Dr. Vogel has pointed out that scholars like Bühler applied the term Śāradā even to this later phase of the character, though distinguishing it as 'later Śāradā, but that a special name was desirable.¹ Although the term Devāśesha is but little known outside Chamba, yet it has been adopted for the sake of convenience.²

Dr. Vogel was concerned mainly with the Śāradā characters. He has fully described the formation of each individual letter. In doing so, he has drawn attention to the peculiarities of Devāsesha as well, illustrating the points by referring to the two inscriptions written in that alphabet, facsimiles of which had by then been published, namely the spurious Sai copper-plate inscription of Vidagdhavarman³ and a copper-plate grant of Bahādur Śingh of Kulļū.⁴ These records belong to the 16th century A. D.

The inscriptions edited here are fairly numerous and range in date from the early part of the 14th century to the middle of the 19th century. As such, they afford us ample scope for studying the peculiarities of the character and its gradual development in the course of over five hundred years with greater precision.

Before proceeding with a detailed examination of this nature, I may point out that the original nailheads or wedges of Kutila, which turned into small horizontal strokes in Śāradā, in turn, developed into top strokes in Devāsesha and lend it a distinctive appearance. Devanāgarī, as we know, represents the climax of this process. In Devāsesha some letters, like gh, th, n, p, m, sh, and s, still appear with an open top, while in Devanāgarī they are provided with a top stroke.

Initial Vowels

"In Deväsesha initial a and \bar{a} preserve essentially the same shape as in Śāradā, but the top is closed by means of a top stroke as in Devanāgarī, and the wedge at the foot of the vertical sometimes becomes a triangular loop." To be exact, the

It may be observed that Dr. Vogel has himself used the term Tākarī where he means Devāsesha. (ACS Pt. I, p.170). However, while editing "A copper-plate grant of Bahādur Singh of Kullū", he had drawn attention to the term Devāsesha. (ARASI, 1903-04, p. 267). It is to be noted that Tākarī is a later stage in the transition. A cursive variety of it is represented in one of our inscriptions, namely in the treaty between Rājasimha and Samsarachanda (No. 80), which presumably provides us with a specimen of Rājasimha's own handwriting.

foregoing remark applies to a only (1). The length is denoted by a hook instead of a triangular loop at the foot (2). Examples of the latter are comparatively rare. The triangular loop of a may be taken as a regular feature of the sign. The instances, as in No. 72, line 12, are only ephemeral. Examples of a may be seen in almost every inscription, while those of \bar{a} are met with in No. 14, line 3; No. 22, line 8; No. 37, line 14, etc. The form of a in No. 1, line 5, is rather unusual.

Initial i has retained its original shape, which consists of two dots and a curve below (3). For examples, see No. 12, lines 7 and 10; and No. 37, line 10 where it occurs thrice. In certain cases, the two dots are replaced by two small circles (4), instances of which may be seen in No. 5, lines 15 and 16; No. 8, line 15. The sign of i in No. 1, line 16, appears irregular inasmuch as it is inclined towards the right. The signs in No. 76, lines 8 and 10, exhibit the mark of medial o instead of two dots or circles, though the same inscription in lines 7 and 8 shows the first sign as well. The sign with the superscribed medial stroke instead of two dots or circles appears also in No. 67, lines 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, etc. Thus, this constitutes a regular variety of the initial i.

The sign of initial \bar{i} is of rare occurrence, but it presents a very interesting phase in its development. Discussing its form in Sarada. Dr. Vogel observes that "the upper and lower dots of ancient sign, which consisted of four dots,2 have been converted into a vertical stroke with a wedge on each end."3 This is exemplified by the Sarāhan praśasti, where it occurs only once (5). In Devāsesha its development is remarkable and quite consistent with the peculiarities already noticed. In the case of initial a, we have observed how the wedge at the foot of the vertical becomes a triangular loop. We have also observed that a wedge at the top of letters in general becomes a horizontal topstroke. This dual process has taken place in the case of initial i, with the result that the vertical stroke with a wedge on each end has assumed the form of the letter ra (6). In the disposal of the two dots also, the writers of Deväsesha have introduced a modification: they have removed Thus the form of the them from the flanking position and placed them on the top. letter appears as (7). Instances of this may be seen in No. 38, lines 8 and 10; No. 39, line 11.

The sign of initial u has not differed much in shape from its original (8). The observations made by Dr. Vogel concerning this hold good: "The upward stroke differentiates the u from t. In the later inscriptions the two aksharas are often hard to distinguish." The upward tendency of the stroke (9) is, in some instances, carried to the extreme, so that it curls over the body of the latter. See, for instance, in No. 1, lines 11, 13, (10) and 17. Instances of the normal sign are abundant.

GOURI SHAMRER

12 D of A

No instance of initial \hat{u} is afforded by our inscriptions. However, it presumably retained its original shape which is that of \hat{u} with a mark of length consisting of a downward curve attached to the middle of the letter on the right(11).

The form of initial ri is met with in some inscriptions, e.g., in the word $r\bar{a}jarikhi$ in No. 28, line 3; and No. 37, line 3. It resembles that of the letter i, which is generally retained in its medial position as well.

Like initial i, initial e and ai also show several forms slightly varying from one another. Its essential feature is an equicrural triangle, which alone represented the ancient form, its base forming the top stroke. The wedge, which came to be attached to the left end of the top-stroke in Śāradā, becomes a downward vertical stroke in Devāsesha (12), e.g., see No. 37, line 15. In some instances; the triangle assumes the appearance of a circle, while the vertical stroke is lengthened and slightly curved to the right, which tendency leads to the formation of the Devanāgarī e (13), see, for instance, No. 12, lines 9 and 10. A superscribed e stroke added to this sign usually makes it initial ai (14), but all the instances in our nscriptions show that this, too, stands for initial e. Its value as such is determined by the words such as taye used side by side with tae, compare No. 2, lines 5 and 8; No. 1, line 8. A parallel instance is afforded by Gurumukhī wherein initial e is composed of the sign for initial i provided with a superscribed e stroke (15). Moreover, in this variety, in certain cases, the vertical stroke appears on the right instead of on the left (16), as may be seen in No. 1, lines 8, 13, and 16.

As regards the form of initial o, our records furnish any number of instances. It resembles the sign for initial u with an additional small vertical stroke hanging down from the top end of the letter (17). A typical example of it may be seen in No. 37, lines 11, 12. The one occurring in line 13 of the same record appears in its modified form; the bottom curve is shortened and the small vertical stroke is correspondingly lengthened (18). The same inscription, in its line 1, also exemplifies how the sacred syllable om is usually formed in these inscriptions: the sign of o has not only an anusvāra over it, but also a semi-circle; in other words, it has an inversed anunāsika over it(19). In a few inscriptions, this is expressed by a special symbol as was the practice in earlier inscriptions, e.g., No. 8, line 1. A more rational instance is supplied by No. 5, line 1, where this sacred syllable consists of the sign for o with a regular mark of anunāsika over it. The vertical stroke in this case is repleased by a slanting one.

Only a doubtful instance of initial au occurs in No. 1, line 8, but here, too, as in the case of ai, the sign in question is more likely that of o only. It consists of the sign of initial u with a superscribed o stroke (20).

Anusvāra and Anunāsika

A simple dot over a letter represents anusvāra. In a few inscriptions a small circle is used instead of a dot, for instance in Nos. 5 and 60. Anunāsika is seldom used in these documents, except perhaps, as noticed above, in the sacred syllable om. Of that, too, only one instance gives its correct shape (21), in No. 5, line 1.

Visarga, Jihvāmūlīya and Upadhmānīya

Visarga is represented by its usual sign, two dots one above the other after a letter. Here, too, dots are occasionally replaced by small circles as in No. 5.

Jihvāmūlīya and Upadhmānīya are not met with in our inscriptions. The sh before ka in such expressions as -krit-āmtashkaraṇa occurring in several inscriptions, seems to be a mistaken copy of jihvāmūlīya formerly correctly used in such cases.

Consonants

The original Brāhmī sign for k, which consisted of a vertical stroke and a crossbar (22), undergoing the usual changes (23), assumed a totally different shape in Śāradā, having developed an angular loop to the left (24). In Devāsesha this form continued in earlier inscriptions, e.g., No., but later on the curve to the right also developed into a loop (25), so that it approached the sign for chh in shape. In combination with certain vowels and consonants such as u, ri, r, sh, both the loops so disappear that its original shape cannot be recognised. See, for instance, kuhla, Krishna, Vikrama, and pakshe in No. 37, lines13, 2, 1 and 2 respectively.

The letter kh is expressed by two different signs, one of which has the same appearance as in Śāradā (26) and the other resembles the sign for sh (27). The former is, in fact, the proper sign. The latter has resulted from the variant pronunciation of sh as kh in the north. This latter, it may be observed, has become established as the regular form of kh in Gurumukhī (28). Examples of the first may be seen in No. 37, lines 2, 6; and of the second in No. 1, lines 8, 9; No. 70, line 2.

The form of the letter g has proved more conservative than those of many others. It is the same in Śāradā, Devāśesha, Gurumukhī and Devanāgarī (29).

Nor has gh changed its form much (30). Examples of it may be compared in No. 33, line 12; No. 44, line 16.

The letter n appears single in the word manani (for mangani) in a few inscriptions where its form can be determined as somewhat resembling the figure 8 in Devanāgari (31), see No. 34, line 14. It also occurs in the names Pānī² (for Pāngi) in No. 70, line 6, and Dalanāne in No. 37, line 13. As the first member of a conjunct it may be seen in the name Gāmnguyā in No. 18, line 3, where the same form is recognisable.

The form of ch has been described as quadrangular in Sāradā, which has developed a cursive loop at the lower left end in Devāsesha (32). In some instances its right limb has become a vertical stroke, in which case it is confused with the sign for s, compare, for example, chanpaka and prakāsita in No. 5, lines 1 and line 2 respectively. Its normal form may be seen in No. 33, lines 1, 2.

¹A similar instance in the case of upadhmānīya has been noticed by Dr. Vogel, ACS, Pt. I, p.170 ²This instance has been pointed out by Dr. Vogal in ACS, Pt. I, p. 52, n. 1. ²Ibid p. 52.

The form of chh, as has been indicated above, is sometimes confused with that of k (33). On the whole, however, it is fairly distinct. In some cases it also resembles the usual sign for the cerebral l (34). Examples may be compared in No. 1, line 14; No. 12, line 9: No. 67, lines 13, 14.

The sign for the letter j has been singled out as the most conservative of all. The only modification that it has undergone in Deväsesha is, according to Dr. Vogel, the disappearance of the wedge which was attached to the right end of the top stroke (35). See, for instance, in No. 1, line5; No. 67, line 5. It may, however, be observed that in many instances the wedge has turned into a small upward stroke which is apt to be confused as the sign for medial \bar{a} . For example, see No. 5, lines 6, 7 and 8. The medial \bar{a} in connection with j is indicated mostly in the ancient fashion namely it is attached to the central prong, see $mah\bar{a}r\bar{a}j\bar{a}dhir\bar{a}ja$ in No. 33, line 8. In the conjuncts jj and $j\bar{n}$ the original form of j is clearly recognisable. See No. 33 line 7 and No. 33, line 6.

The instances of jh are not rare in our inscriptions. They may be compared in No. 6, line 7; No. 7, line 7; No. 37, lines 13, 14. The form consists of the sign for r or Sarada k with a curve attached by means of a small horizontal stroke to the middle of it on the right (36).

The letter \tilde{n} appears only as the second member of the conjunct letter $j\tilde{n}$ where it has the appearance of l without the top stroke. See, for examples, No. 5, line 7; No. 33, line 7.

The sign for the letter t, on the whole, has retained its old form in Deväsesha which has the same appearance as initial ri, but provided with a top stroke (37). See for instance, No. 9, line 10; No. 25, line 7. Sometimes, a hook, pointing downwards is attached to the right end of its top stroke, as twice in No. 37, line 11. This usually denotes medial \bar{a} , as may be compared in the same inscription, No. 37, lines 11, 16. The form of the subscript t in $tt\bar{a}$ is remarkable in No. 18, lines 2, 4 and No. 33, line 4, as compared with the same in No. 37, line 7. Perhaps the former stands really for $tth\bar{a}$. In some cases the Deväsesha t appears exactly like the Devanāgarī t, as is evident in No. 12, line 14.

The letter th is represented by a very simple sign, consisting only of a circle (38), as may be seen in No. 5, line 16. In its subscript form, however, it looks exactly like a subscript r. See, for example, No. 33, line 18. This inscription also illustrates the fact that subscript t and th are often interchanged see pratisht for pratisht in line 2, shasht in line 17, and t in line 4. The form of the final t with the v irt and t stroke, crossing the top right end of the letter, is also remarkable, in No. 33, line 10.

The sign of the letter d in Deväsesha is peculiar, having developed two loops one above the other, the upper one being circular, and the lower triangular (39) See, for example, No. 37, line 13 where it occurs thrice. The forms with medial u and \bar{u} are noteworthy, see in No. 7, lines 4, 12; No. 33, lines 9, 11. So also is the form of the conjunct nda, as in No. 5, line 9; No. 39, line 8.

^{1 [}bid.

The form of the letter dh has also acquired two loops but both in one line (40). If the loop in the right be drawn nearer to the vertical line in the centre, the sign will resemble that for chh. Its examples may be seen in No. 1, lines 7, 8; No. 37, lines 10, 12.

The sign of n may best be described as the Deväsesha numeral 3 with left side down (41). When the medial a is attached to it, it assumes a peculiar shape (42). Both na and $n\bar{a}$ may be seen in No. 37, line 5. When forming the first member of a conjunct, it does not lose its serif on the right; but when subscript, it appears without that with the result that it looks similar to subscript l and \bar{n} . See mandala in No. 5, line 9; Krishna in No. 37, lines 2, 8; Kehlana in No. 37, line 8; and pratijna in No. 33, line 7.

The letter t, as has been indicated above, is very similar to initial u in form. For example, t in pandite and u in $uk\bar{v}itam$, both in No. 5, line 16, may be compared. With a subscript r, it looks like the numeral 3 (44), as may be seen in No. 20, line 6; No. 33, line 13. When the top stroke is a little longer, it cannot be mistaken for the numeral a, as in No. 5, line 2. The formation of the conjunct a is noteworthy, see, for example, in No. 33, line 5; No. 37, lines 4, 11. Other ligatures with a will be instanced below.

The form of th is similar to that of sh, with the only difference that sh has an open top while th has its top closed by means of a top stroke (45). See, for example No. 33, line 11; No. 37, line 15, where it appears twice. In the ligature rtha, it is entirely different—the ligature has the appearance of Bengali ja (46), as may be noticed in No. 33, line 10.

The letter d is represented by a sign which differs from that for ch only slightly—ch is closed on the top right, while d is open (47). Moreover, the angular portion at the bottom right is more pronounced in the case of d. Both the letters may be compared in No. 33, line 1. The form of the ligature dra and dda may be observed in No. 33, line 15, and No. 37, line 5 respectively.

No change seems to have taken place in the form of dh, which appears in Deväsesha the same as it is in Śāradā and even in early scripts, which resembles the Roman letter U with the top closed (48). See, for example, No. 20, lines 5, 8;
No. 37, lines 5, 6. In a few instances, the right vertical line projects a little downwards, giving the letter the appearance of Devanāgarī p (49), as may be seen in No. 5, lines 1, 6. In the same inscription a peculiar form of the ligature ndha may be observed in line 2.

The letter n appears mostly in its uplooped form (50), as may be seen in No. 33, line 14. In some later inscriptions, its looped form (51) also occurs. See, for instance, No. 77, lines 4, 5, though the same inscription gives also the unlooped variety in line 1.

The sign for p remains without a top stroke throughout, even in Tākarī and Gurumukhī (52). It does not present much variation of form even in ligatures.

The instances of ph are few and far between, but enough to show its form clearly. It resembles that of dh or h (53). If the curve is made into a loop, it will correspond to the form dh, and if the loop on the right is reduced to a mere curve, it will answer to the sign of h. Instances of ph may be seen in No. 25, lines 6, 10, 13; No. 37, line 9.

As remarked by Dr. Vogel, no separate sign for b has been used in Deväsesha. It has throughout been expressed by the sign for v. In giving the texts, therefore, the same sign has been rendered by b or v as required by the case.

The sign for bh shows a further development from its original shape: the triangle has become a triangular loop and later on a circular loop (54). The latter form can be easily confused with the looped t. For instance, see t and bh in $p\bar{u}jita-p\bar{u}da-p\bar{v}tha-nija-bhuja-bala$ in No. 77, lines 6, 7. The examples of the other form are found in No. 20, line 5; No. 37, lines 7, 8, 10, etc. In line 18 of No. 37 we have the instance of a subscript bh, which is quite recognisable.

The letter m is expressed by a sign which has an open top and a loop below on the left (55). It differs from the sign for s only by the absence of a small horizontal stroke attached to the top left (56). This distinction is, however, not always observed, with the result that both the letters appear alike. The examples of the distinct m and s may be compared in $lasam\bar{a}na-m\bar{a}nasa$ in No. 33, line 7. Instances of the confused forms may be seen in $m\bar{a}se$ in No. 37, line 2; No. 52, line 2, etc.

The form of y in Deväsesha is the same as in Devanāgarī (57). The top stroke in Devāsesha is usually a short one, while in Devanāgarī it extends a little on either side (\mathfrak{A}). The subscript y appears like subscript ri in shape. See No. -20, lines 1, 2, 4, 8, 10. In the ligature rya, however, it shows a downward stroke added to its lower end, and the ligature looks like Devanāgarī da (58), as may be seen in paryamta in No. 20, line 9; No. 52, line 9; in surya in No. 9, line 4, and in sūrya in No. 33, line 8.

The sign of r is similar in shape to that of v. In well executed forms the loop of r is more angular and that of v more circular (59). As the first member of a conjunct it usually retains its own form, and is not superscript, as may be seen in dharma-setur-narānām in No. 33, line 14. The best example of it is perhaps to be found in the ligature rtyu in chakravarty-uttama in No. 33, line 5, where r is seen very prominently as the chief member, while the other letters are subscribed to it. In some cases, however, its position is reduced to a mere superscribed stroke as in rcha of archa-niya in No. 33, line 2. In combination with v, this stroke is not superscribed, but added on to the loop of the letter so that it assumes the appearance of Devanāgarī ch. This may be seen in sarvadā and sarvān in No. 33, lines 4 and 14 respectively. As subscript letter, r shows two forms, one just like in Devanāgarī when written cursively, a small stroke pointing to the left at the foot of the letter, and the other more like the cursive Devanāgarī medial \bar{u} , a looped stroke pointing to the right. The first may be seen in chakra in No. 33, line 5, and the other in \hat{sri} -Pratāpa in No. 33, line 12. In No. 28, lines 4, 5, however, the word chakra has a different form. Here, the subscript r resembles the looped form of the Deväsesha medial \bar{u} .

The form of l has no peculiarities to exhibit. It is the same as in Devanāgarī (60), and occurs in every inscription.

Our inscriptions also show the use of cerebral l in abundance, which is represented by the usual l form with a dot below, as is seen in No. 1, line 7.

The form of v we have already discussed in connection with that of r with which it often gets confused, as is exemplified by deva in No. 20, line 6.

The form of δ is similar to that of δ with the only difference that the former has a closed top and the latter an open one (61).

The same difference, as has already been noticed, occurs between the forms of th and sh, that are otherwise alike (62). It has also been shown that the sign of sh stands sometimes for kh.

The form of h has been explained while discussing the sign for ph. The example of h may be seen in No. 37, lines 7, 11, 12, 14, 15, etc., where it appears in its well-developed form. Sometimes it is confused with t, see, for example, in No. 20, lines 5, 10.

$Vir\bar{a}ma$

In connection with the form of t we have shown above how a final consonant is so denoted by a slanting stroke running across the right end of the letter. More examples of this are provided by t in No. 20, line 10; n in No. 33, line 14; and m in No. 33, line 10.

Medial vowels

In Deväsesha medial a is expressed still in the old fashion, by a little stroke attached to the right end of the letter on the top, and not by a prishtha mātrā as in Devanāgarī. That little stroke, however, takes various forms. In its simplest, it merely stands vertical or slightly slanting, as may be observed in No. 37. In others it forms a v-shaped bend (63), the position of which again varies, and in still others it takes a cursive loop (64). All these fanciful varieties are illustrated in No. 20.

Medial i and \bar{i} are expressed in Deväsesha in the same manner as in Devanāgari (65).

Two different signs are employed to denote a medial u, one consists of a curve, as in Devanāgarī, and the other of a triangle, attached at the foot of the letter. The triangle is very often confused with the subscript v. For example, there is no difference in shape between su of suta in No. 33, line 4, and sva of svayam in the same record, line 16. The medial u with r is expressed in the same way as in Devanāgarī, as may be seen in Rupunu in No. 5, line 16. The Devāsesha ru thus looks liek bha and the Śāradā ka.

Medial \bar{u} is also expressed in two different ways. In one, the curve representing a medial u, is reduplicated, while in the other the cursive Devanāgarī medial \bar{u} appears reversed or, in other words, the looped form of the Devāsesha subscript r or of th is reversed (66). This last may be compared in sreshtha-sūrya-vamśa in No. 33, line 8. The other form is seen in bhūyo bhūyo in No. 33, line 15.

As already indicated, the sign of medial ri is similar to that of subscript y. The point will be clear by comparing gya in No. 33, line 4, and $ky\bar{a}$ in No. 37, line 17—where, in the foregoing word smriti, the medial ri opens upwards instead of to the right and is thereby quite distinct from the subscript y. It is this type of medial ri that occurs in pri of pritaye of No. 1, line 5, which has such an unfamiliar look.

A superscribed horizontal stroke represents a medial e, and two such strokes, placed one above the other, denote a medial ai. In later inscriptions they become slanting and appear quite like Devanāgarī signs for medial e and ai, as may be seen in No. 77.

A superscribed wavy line consisting of two downward curves (67), as appear in one of the varieties of initial i, expresses a medial o. This combined with the sign of medial \bar{a} makes it into a medial au. Examples of both of them may be seen in No. 37, line 2. Later inscriptions show the continuation of the same practice as may be verified in No. 72, No. 77, etc.

Ligatures

In the foregoing discussion forms of a number of ligatures have already been demonstrated. Below are cited some more that present noteworthy features: sti, No. 1, line 1; No. 5, line 1; No. 20, line 1. In the last quoted instance the subscript t has a loop.—stra, No. 1, line 1; No. 20, line 1; No. 33, line 1 nha, No. 1, line 1.—hma No. 1, line 6: No. 33, line 10.—hya, No 1, line 12.—ddhi and kti, No. 5, line 5.—ndra, No. 5, line 6.—rka, No. 5, line 14.—rju, No. 8, line 5.1—ścha, No. 8, line 5.—khyā, No. 8, line 8.—mgrā, No. 8, line 9.—mbha and stha, No. 14, line 7.—dra, No. 14, line 8.—smai, No. 14, line 11.

Numerals

The Chamba inscriptions employ the system of decimal numeration wherever there is occasion for using numbers. The signs of the figures are fairly uniform throughout on the whole, though variations in certain cases are distinctly observable. Below is given a brief description of each individual figure.

The figure 1 is represented by two different signs, one a circle (0) and the other an incomplete circle resembling a horse-shoe with its ends facing downwards or resembling the Roman letter U placed upside down (68). In some inscriptions both the signs are used side by side, e.g., 1651 in No. 35, line 1. It may be noted that the circle always denotes 1 and never the zero which in the Chamba inscriptions is expressed by a mere dot. For instance, see 70 in the same inscription and the same line as cited above.

In this instance the triangle representing the medial u intrudes into the line below.

The sign for the figure 2 resembles that which ordinarily stands for the figure 3 in Nāgarī (3). Sometimes its bottom stroke is drawn further with an upward tendency, while the upper curve appears closed forming almost a circle. For examples, see No. 20, line 13; No. 21, line 11; No. 33, line 16

The next figure, 3, is represented by the same sign with an addition of a tail hanging down from the bottom stroke where in some cases it forms a loop (69). The same sign is used in Nāgarī also, having the same value. The occasional features noticed in the case of the figure 2 are seen here also. See, for instance, No. 1, line; 1; No. 14, line 1; No. 25, line 1; No. 28, line 10.

The sign for the figure 4 is essentially similar to that in Nagari for the same figure (\times). In execution, however, it assumes various forms (70) of which the one with a downward stroke, attached to its right end is noteworthy. Examples may be seen in No. 9, line 1; No. 28, line 1; No. 14, line 1; No. 25, line 7; No. 37, line 1. The sign taken as standing for the figure 4 in No. 5, line 15, is entirely different. The sign read as 6 in 62 in No. 26, line 1, is more likely to be read as 4.

The symbol for the figure 5 resembles the Devāsesha letter pa (71) and does not show much variation in shape. Compare, for example, No 9, line 1; No. 21, line 1; No. 25, line 1; No. 37, line 2.

The figure 6 is denoted by a symbol which would be the same as that for 4 if placed upside down (72). In its more elaborate form it has a serif attached to its left end and a downward stroke to its right (73). There are some intermediate modifications as well. The instances are supplied by No. 1, line 1; No. 20, line 2; No. 28, line 1; No. 33, line 1; No. 37, line 2; No. 50, line 1; No. 52, line 1.

The symbol for the figure 7 more or less resembles that for the figure 1 in Nāgarī (74). See, for example, No. 1, line 1; No. 9, line 1; No. 12, line 5; No. 20, line 12; No. 28, line 1; No. 35, line 1; No. 37, lines 1, 2. It may be remembered that the sign for the figure 7 in Nāgarī represents 9 in Dəvāsəsha, as will presently be shown. This is best illustrated in 97 in No. 12, line 5.

The forms of the symbol for the figure 8 vary greatly, but the one resembling the letter ha may be taken as a standard one (75), which appears, for example, in No. 25, line 7. It may be observed that if the curved line, instead of turning to the left ran straight towards the right, it would correspond to the figure 8 in Nāgarī (76). A tendency towards that is noticeable in the symbol for 8 appearing in No. 33, line 1. Some other variations may be seen in No. 1, line 1; No. 25, line 1; No. 44, line 1; No. 52, line 1. This last instance is a very remarkable one. The one in No. 53, line 1, lacks the top stroke and looks like the letter ta (77).

The sign representing the figure 9, as has been indicated and instanced above, resembles that for 7 in Nāgarī. More examples, with slight modifications in its formation, may be seen in No. 33, line 1; No. 44, line 1; No. 50, line 1.

A small dot stands for the zero, as has already been shown.1

LANGUAGE

The bulk of the inscriptions edited below are bilingual, the two languages represented being Sanskrit and Chambyālī. The latter is, properly speaking, only a dialect spoken in the Chamba hills. In the inscriptions it is referred to merely as Bhāshā. It is akin to the Panjābī dialect current in the eastern parts of the Panjāb.

These bilingual records generally begin and end with Sanskrit, while their middle portion is composed in Chambyālī. The initial part usually contains the date, the conventional preamble and a brief statement of the object. The concluding portion as a rule, comprises some customary verses and a mention of the writer of the record. The most important part, however, comes in the middle. In fact, that constitutes the deed proper. Since it is meant to be understood by the common people, petty state officials and peasants, who are, generally speaking, ignorant of Sanskrit, it is composed in their tongue and gives out the fullest details possible after their fashion. This accounts for the clumsiness, incoherence and obscurity to be noticed in such portions of the records.

The specimens of Sanskrit composition afforded by our inscriptions betray the fact that Sanskrit scholarship in Chamba was then, on the whole very poor. Mostly they are mere repetitions of certain set phrases, bristling with grammatical errors. Some pseudo-Sanskrit forms are persistently met with, such as upabhumjanīya for upabhojanīya, dhavalākrita for dhavalīkrita, satyapratijnātva for satyapratijnā, etc.

Terms like lābhālikā or lābhārikā for lāhaḍī 'a land measure', and ghāri 'a land-slide' are, however, ingenious adaptations in Sanskrit. The records composed by Surānanda and Ramāpati contain comparatively few mistakes.

As regards the Bhāshā compositions, we have no criterion by which to judge their merits and demerits. They, however, exhibit the freshness of a spoken language as opposed to a literary vehicle of expression, with all the defects that go with it, such as unnecessary repetitions, clumsy constructions, disregard of grammar, and the like.

Like other dialects in the Panjāb, Chambyālī also is a derivative of Sanskrit. The original forms of a great many of Chambyālī terms are easily traceable. In some cases two forms are current for one and the same word, one nearer the original than the other, e.g., अस and अह for अहित; भोन and होन for भवन, ' अगर and अग for अग, etc.

ORTHOGRAPHY

In respect of orthography, our inscriptions present very little of real interest; they exhibit more mistakes than peculiarities, as may be typified by शुक्ले पछे पूर्णम्ययं तियउ श्रीचपकपुरिवस्तन्यश्रीपमंदेवताअरचनीयः पर्मगृह पर्ममृष्ठ श्रीश्यंवशप्रदिपक (No. 2, lines 2-4) for शुक्ले पक्षे पूर्णमायां तिथी श्रीचम्पकपुरिवास्तन्यश्रीपरमदेवताचंनीयपरमगृहारमश्रेष्ठश्री सूर्यवशप्रदीपक! This passage is cited from a Sanskrit preamble, though it is one of the worst examples, and it needs hardly to be pointed out how much Prakritic influence is in evidence here.

The original must be Vedic, conditional mood, Hindi ;

Where such is the way of writing Sanskrit, how the Bhāshā would be treated can well be imagined, especially when there is no standard spelling in existence. Each writer employed his own arbitrary method in reducing the dialect to writing. A single instance of how one and the same word is variantly spelt will illustrate the point: उरी, और, औरो, औरो, औरो, खर, खरे, खरो, खारे, ख

PUNCTUATION

The use of punctuation marks in the present inscriptions is very promiscuous. In most cases it is better to ignore them altogether. They mislead rather than guide. It would have been extremely tedious to point out each and every stroke as being an unnecessary mark of punctuation or to supply one where necessary. The texts have, therefore, been reproduced here as they appear in the original charters, with or without the signs of punctuation.

HISTORICAL GLEANINGS

The historical data afforded by the records edited here have, for the most part, already been discussed by Dr. Vogel and others in various publications.¹ Again they have been summed up by Dr. Goetz in the historical sketch which he has drawn in the foregoing section of the present work.² Moreover, the most salient points of historical and topographical import occurring in every individual inscription have been noticed in the introductory remarks that precede the text and translation in each case. Still there remain certain questions of a general character, which may be considered here.

Vairisimhavarman—The Vamśāvalī³ gives the name of this ruler as Vairivarman whereas his inscription—the only one (No. 1) pertaining to him—presents him as Vairasivarman or Vairāsīvarman⁴ which indicates that the full and correct form of his name must be Vairisimhavarman. The inscription, however, does not give the name of his father. It is no doubt given in the Vamśāvalī, but the text of the verse concerned is so obscure that it could not be made out with certainty, though it has been supposed to be Jīmūta.⁵ The charter under discussion is issued from the city of Champaka which is likewise the place of issue of nearly all the subsequent charters. It plainly stands for the town of Chamba, the capital of the State. It is interesting to note that the form Chambā, for the Sanskrit Champā as given in the Rājataranginī,⁶ or Champaka as met with in the inscriptions, occurs in the Bhāshā portion of the very charter of Vairisimhavarman.¹ This shows that the modified form, Chambā, which is current to this day was in common use already in the time of that ruler. Its origin has been discussed by Dr. Vogel.⁵

The charter of Vairisimhavarman is dated V.S. 1387 (=A.D. 1330), which is presumed to be the first year of his reign. There is one significant reference in the $Bh\bar{a}sh\bar{a}$ portion of the record. It is to the effect that the king conferred the grant on the donee because he was pleased (with him). This indicates that the recipient of the gift must have performed some heroic or otherwise remarkable deed which won him the royal favour.

Mānikyavarman—From the Vamsāvalī² we learn that Vairivarman or Vairisimhavarman had a son called Mānikya. He is believed to have succeeded his father to the throne, but no copper-plate charter or any other inscription pertaining to him has yet been found. His name is, however, mentioned in one (No. 5) of his son's grants, which also discloses that of his wife, being Jugyaradevi.

Bhotavarman—We have got four (Nos. 2—5) copper-plate charters of this king, one (No. 3) of which is decidedly a forgery. In one (No. 5) of his genuine records he is described as 'meditating on the feet of the illustrious Māṇikyavarman', who, as is known from the Vamśāvalī, was his father. Besides, the same record mentions the name of Bhotavarman's mother as Jugyaradevī which is as peculiar as his own. Rao Bahadur K. N. Dikshit believes that the name Bhotavarman has something to do with Bhota, the name by which Tibet is known allover the Indian hills. It may also be pointed out that names of royal personages similarly ending in ta are by no means rare in Chamba inscriptions. Analogous instances may be found in such names as Asata, Jāsata, Somata and Bhogata. Of these the first two are borne by two Chamba kings* and the other two by two barons or rānās* of that state, all of whom preceded Bhotavarman by a couple of centuries. The name Jugyaradevī may have been after the name of the village Jumgurāra* whence she might have hailed.

The name of Bhotavarman's wife was Jijilidevī, as is known from one (No. 8) of his son's charters.

One (No. 4) of Bhotavarman's four charters is peculiar inasmuch as its grantee is not a Brāhman, but a Kshatriya who received the gift of land and an annuity cash as a reward for what appears to be an extremely daring act on his part, involving much risk.

Samgrāmavarman—Three (Nos. 6—8) of the copper-plate grants belong to this chief. In the Vamśāvalī he is stated to be son of Bhoṭavarman, which information is confirmed and supplemented by one (No. 8) of his own inscriptions, adding the name of his mother as Jijilidevī. Another of his records refers to the śrāddha ceremony of his father and thereby affords us a clue for arriving at an approximate date of the latter's demise.

In This is the village granted by the charter wherein she is mentioned. The village is now called Jungrar. [The connection of Jugyaradevi with Jungrar in Jasor seems to me very important. Jasor is later on one of the few Churah districts where the rajas of Chamba granted lands. Thus Jugyaradevi might have been the heir of a local rand family whose state came into the direct possession of the Crown.—H. Goetz.]

[•] See below p. 35, where this and the allied questions have been discussed in some detail.

His wife's name was Sampūrņadevi, as is revealed likewise by one (No. 10) of his son's charters.

Anandavarman—We know more of this ruler from other sources' than from his inscriptions, which are represented by only two (Nos. 9—10) copper-plate charters. It is only from one (No. 10) of his inscriptions that we learn his mother's name. He is reputed to have been deeply religious and endowed with magic powers. The aforesaid inscription of his (No. 10) mentions a Siva-pratishthā, which possibly alludes to his reconstruction of a Siva temple.

From the Vamsāvalī we learn that Anandavarman married a daughter of the lord of Trigarta (Kangra), but her name is not mentioned there. Her name occurs as Prayāgadevī in some of the grants of Anandavarman's son.³

Ganeśavarman—Of the nine (Nos. 11—19) copper-plate inscriptions pertaining to this ruler, two (Nos. 14—15) register grants made by his son and co-regent Pratāpasimha who is styled therein Mahārājaputra.⁴ One (No. 12) of his records refers to his coronation, though it does not give the actual date of this ceremony. The same document adverts to the immersion in the Ganges of the bone-remains of Anandavarman, father of Ganeśavarman, as well as to the latter's mother, Prayāgadevī having performed a charity at a place called Simgarapura. In an undated record (No. 17) of his, a queen Apūrvadevī is also stated to have made a land-grant with the king's approval. Presumably she was Ganeśavarman's wife. He had another wife, called Sāhibadevī, from whom was born his son and successor Pratāpasimha, as is revealed by one (No. 23) of the latter's grants.

Considering the dates of his records, Ganesavarman had a long reign of wellnigh half a century (A.D. 1513—1558).

Pratāpasimhavarman—As has just been stated, Pratāpasimha was the eldest son of Gaņeśavarman from the queen Sāhibadevī and succeeded his father to the throne. We have got seven (Nos. 20—26) copper-plate charters belonging to him. One (No. 22) of these, however, is apparently a discarded copy of another (No. 21) record, as evidenced by the contents.

The expression Bhati di gu(ru)-dakshina in one (No. 20) of his inscriptions is not clear, but viewed in the light of another which occurs in a subsequent record (No. 23) and is more or less explicit, it alludes to Pratapasimha's occupation of the Bhatti

That is Sampurnadevi, as has been indicated above.

⁴ Ganesavarman is known to have had six sons, the eldest of whom was Pratapasimha. No mention is, however, made of any of his other sons in the known inscriptions. The names of the other five are: Jit Singh, Bir Bahadur, Hari Singh, Satargun Singh and Rupanand Singh. See HPHS, Vol. I, p. 297.

territory. The other passage referred to reads: Bhati laī tā dīti guru-dakshinā diti.1 This last mentioned record is unusually long and contains a good deal of other valuable information.³ The grant registered by it is stated to have been made by Pratāpasimha's grandson Balabhadra who is styled Mahāyuvarāja. The title Mahāuuvarāia is rather uncommon, but perhaps not without a special significance here. The term yuvarāja ordinarily denotes 'prince', 'heir', 'heir-apparent' or, more precisely, 'that son of the ruling king who is to succeed his father as king,' We know that Balabhadra was not a son but a grandson of Pratapasimha. Thus the word mahat (mahā) prefixed to the usual term uuvarāja in its application to Balabhadra presumably carried the sense that he was to succeed his grand-father Pratapasimha. superseding his father Vīrabhāna. This presumption receives support from various other considerations. The same inscription (No. 23) mentions Virabhana. but without any title or honorific. Dr. Vogel, referring to this, remarks. "Balabhadra-Deva, his grandson, is called Yuvaraja and Tikkā: though Vir-Vahnu, his son, was alive, and succeeded to the gaddi. The title was probably accorded to both father and son."4 It is not known on what Dr. Vogel bases his statement that Vir Vahnu (Vīrabhāna) succeeded to the gaddi. A perusal of the text of the inscription in question will show that Balabhadra is styled Mahāvuvarāja, and not Yuvarāja and Tikkā as stated by Dr. Vogel. In line 38 of that inscription an expression reads tikka karī bhumi sāthā lāga, of which the first word seems to have been taken by Dr. Vogel for the title Tikkā, but the context will show that it cannot be taken as such. The word tikka-karī here means 'having fixed or demarcated.' The same usage is found in some other inscriptions as well.⁵ There is thus little ground to hold that 'the title was probably accorded to both father and son.' On the contrary, from the way in which Balabhadra is repeatedly mentioned in that inscription, it follows that he was not only the heir to the throne but was also a co-regent then, whereas Virabhana finds mention there only once and that, too, in a way that presents him as a nonessential so far as the administration of the state was concerned. Moreover, we have not found any inscription pertaining to him, which fact again tends to show that he never came to the throne. Dr. Vogel assigns him a brief reign of 'only four years at the most," that space of time being an interval between the dates of the latest known record⁸ of Pratapasimha and of the earliest known record of Balabhadra respectively. In this assignment we have obviously to assume that Pratapasimha died in the very year in which his latest known charter is dated and that the earliest known grant of Balabhadra was made in the very first year of his reign. This in itself is by no means impossible, but still it appears to be improbable, especially in view of the above considerations.

This is the Chamba plate of Pratapasinha of Sastra 62 (No. 26). The reading of the Sastra year as 63 has been lisputed. Instead it had been suggested to read it as 42 which would make the record the earliestrather than the latest known one of Pratapasinha. See below, p. 73, n. 3.

Further, Vīrabhāna is mentioned in several inscriptions of Balabhadra as the latter's father, but in no case it can be made out that he was ever in power as a ruler. There are, however, indications to the contrary. To wit, in one (No. 35) of Balabhadra's grants, which refers to Vīrabhāna's śrāddha and where, therefore, it may be expected that he should have been introduced as 'the late king,' as has been done in the case of Bhotavarman¹ and Ānandavarman² in similar circumstances, Vīrabhāna's mention there³ is conspicuous by the absence of any such epithet to his name. This much, at least is clear from this inscription, which is dated V.S. 1651=A.D. 1594, that Vīrabhāna was alive at the time of Balabhadra's heir-apparency and co-regency under Pratāpasimha.

Vīrabhāna—Besides the fact that he was son of Pratāpasimha and father of Balabhadra, nothing of importance is known about Vīrabhāna. Although the Vamśāvalītatyles him mahīpati 'king', yet the foregoing discussion leads us to the conclusion that he never assumed the regal powers, but was superseded by his son Balabhadra. And this was to all appearance in accordance with Pratāpasimha's own choosing—the might have nominated his grandson Balabhadra to be his (Pratāpasimha's) successor in supersession of his (Pratāpasimha's) son Vīrabhāna—though the reason for such a choice on his part is not known.

In the opinion of Dr. Hermann Goetz, Vîrabhāna did reign but not rule. He has favoured me with an interesting note on the question, which I give below in its entirety:

"This is a very difficult problem. I accept the arguments adduced above but the conclusions arrived at do not convince me. So much is certain that Vīrabhānu did never rule, but another question is whether he did reign. That Balabhadravarman was appointed regent and heir apparent in 1579 is also certain, but another question is whether after his grandfather's death he did regard it advisable to accept the crown. Can we disregard the statement of the Vamsāvalī? According to my observations this chronicle has proved completely reliable for the period since A.D. 1330; besides, it must have been composed under Balabhadravarman and supplemented under Prithvi Singh. Under these circumstances it is impossible to push aside the statement that Virabhanu had been king. May we then try the explanation that he did reign, but not rule. I think so, for Balabhadravarman himself is the best other instance during the regency of Janardana, 1613-1623. Then Janardana had all the prerogatives, epithets and power of kingship except the title of king which was left to powerless Balabhadravarman. I think we are entitled to assume a similar state of affairs during the last year of Pratāpasimhavarman and those of Vīrabhānu. Balabhadravarman must have been the actual ruler since 1579, but did not assume the royal title before 1589. The key to this abnormal situation must be found in the grant No. 23. From this latter it is evident that the party of Pandit Ramapati had been overthrown in 1575 and reinstated by Balabhadravarman in 1579. Now the party of Surananda and Ramapati must have been the instigators of the war against Kangra and must be responsible also for the renewed extension of the royal influence over the outlying provinces (the forward foreign policy begins immediately after the coming of the two pandits). The opposition against Ramapati must have come from (1) the old aristocracy pushed aside by the foreign Brahmins, (2) the rānās who had lost their virtual independence. Their success had been possible because of the loss of prestige of the Ramapati party in consequence of (a) the annexation of the Kangra conquests by the Mughals in 1573. (b) the death of Surananda in 1575. After the flight of Ramapati Pratāpasimhavarman must, thus, have lost most of his control over the old and new landed aristocracy. When in 1579, Balabhadravarman brought back Ramāpati, it was his own success, and he would probably have been able to depose his grandfather if he had liked to do so. Now the party of Ramapati which Balabhadravarman had restored, stood obviously for an increased royal power supported by the priests. as is evident from all the events of this period. But for this reason it was necessary to strengthen the prestige of the king in every possible way. It would, however, have been detrimental to the royal prestige completely to depose a crowned king, and so Pratapasimhavarman continued to reign. It would also have been detrimental to push aside the next person entitled by his birth to the throne, and this was Vīrabhānu. And, as all the actual power was already in Balabhadravarman's hands, there was no reason why he should dishonour his father after he had already left the appearance of royalty to his grandfather. There is another argument in favour of such an assumption. Why did Vîrabhānu not rule, why is he hardly mentioned? I have always suspected a mental anomaly, and I have discussed all the evidence in detail with a doctor who was before at the Mental Hospital in Poona. In the whole family from Anandavarman to Balabhadravarman a hereditary strong religiosity is evident which in later life seems often to have assumed morbid forms so that we have four regencies within a single century. It seems thus most probable that Vīrabhānu had the same religious obsession, characteristic for Balabhadravarman's last years perhaps in a still more pronounced form. Now it is very improbable that Balabhadravarman, himself very pious, should have removed a saintly father; likewise it would have been in contradiction to the very principles of the Ramapati party to remove a saint from the throne, as religion was one of their main props to strengthen the royal power. Finally, we cannot suppose that after Ramapati's return the opposition was completely crushed. If 1582 was in fact the last year of Pratapasimhavarman's reignand we must suppose this, since the grant of 1586 has shifted on to 1566,—this happened only three years after the end of the rebellion, and Balabhadravarman's position was certainly not yet so strong as that he could have risked any more without the utmost caution. This caution may perhaps also explain the absence of copperplate grants under Vīrabhānu, the latter king being unable to deal with the question and Balabhadravarman not risking to do it on his own account. I am quite aware, that my explanation here is audacious and complicated, but I suppose it takes into account all the available facts and can be further strengthened in practically every point by analogies from the history not only of the Himalayan Rajput states, but also from the history of similar epochs in other countries."

Balabhadravarman and Janārdana.—From Balabhadra onwards the history of the Chamba State has been well chronicled and it seems needless to expatiate on it. It is well known that the state saw many vicissitudes from the time of Balabhadra onwards.

CHRONOLOGY

Since most of the records edited here are dated, there is little difficulty in fixing their chronology. It is, however, only in a few cases that the dates are verifiable. The most conspicuous of such epigraphs is indeed the Chabūtrā stone inscription of V.S. 1717 (No. 84), as has been indicated above. Next come two later inscriptions, and they are from among the copper-plate charters, namely Nos. 79 and 81. The first is dated V.S. 1833 and the second V.S. 1913. In this last instance, even though the week-day is not specified, the clue for checking the date is afforded by the mention of the Ardhodaya yoga which falls on a specific week-day.

In most of the remaining dated documents, the details of the dates are not fully stated, so that they cannot be controlled. In some cases, certain details of such a nature do occur as ordinarily lead to the verification of the date, but there the dates, so far as I could examine, appear to be irregular. For instance, the spurious Sarā plate of Bhotavarman (No. 3) does mention the week-day which, however, does not tally, though the difference appears to be only of a day or of some hours. The spurious nature of the record, however, has marred its interest and importance. No. 6 also mentions the week-day, but the reading of the number of the year is so uncertain that it requires only guess work to make the date appear regular. No. 11 states the occasion being a sūrya-parvan, which generally refers to a solar eclipse. Such a reference is a sufficient clue, which in the present instance proved the mentioned date to be irregular. No. 14 refers to the Kumbha festival, but the date here, too, proves irregular. No. 27 gives the week-day, but the nakshatra stated is irrelevant, rendering the given date uncontrollable. No. 61, again, refers to a solar eclipse, but likewise proving of no help in checking the date.

COPPER-PLATE INSCRIPTIONS

NO. 1. GUROLI PLATE OF VAIRASIVARMAN: V. 8, 1387

(Plate I. A)

The copper plate¹ on which the subjoined inscription is engraved is now preserved in the Bhuri Singh Museum at Chamba, and is No. B, 7 of its catalogue. It was found in the possession of a Brāhman, Lochā or Lochiyā by name, at the village of Guroli in the Gudyāl parganā. It measures 8" high by 10" wide, excluding the handle on the left. It is a fairly well-preserved record. The writing on it covers 21 lines of which lines 17-19 appear in the left and lines 20-21 in the top margin. There is a seal engraved in the upper left corner of the plate, in the form of a rosette with a three-line legend in Nāgarī characters in its centre, containing the king's name.

The language of the record is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyali. The Sanskrit portion is full of errors, while certain terms in the Bhasha portion are obscure.

The object of the inscription is to record the grant of the village Guroli by the king Vairasīvarman to Manikašarman, a Brāhman of the Kāśyapa gotra. The boundaries are specified, though the details thereof are not wholly intelligible.

The charter is issued from the city of Champaka and is dated in the Sastra year 6, Vikrama Samvat 1387, on the 12th day of the bright fortnight in the month of Kārttika. Since the week day is not mentioned, the date is not verifiable, but as it is, it corresponds to Wednesday, 24th October, A. D. 1330. The grant was written by Pandit Ananta.

As regards the geographical names occurring in the inscription, Champakapuri is the same as the town of Chamba, the existing capital of the Chamba State. Almost all the subsequent charters have been issued from this very place. Guroli or Giroli, the gift village, is identical with the present-day Guroli, the provenance of the plate. The boundary village Manoga also exists to this day under the same name and is included in the Gudyāl parganā.

Seal: (This is) the order of the illustrious Vairasivarman.

(L. 1) Om. Hail; In the Śāstra year 6, (corresponding to the year) of the illustrious king Vikramāditya 1387, in the month of Kārttika on the twelfth day of the bright fortnight; during the victorious reign of the illustrious Paramabhaṭṭāraka Mahārājādhirāja Vairasīvarmadeva, in residence at the glorious city of Champaka, who is as adorable as an illustrious supreme deity, highly venerable, pre-eminent among men, a devout worshipper of Vishnu, the most excellent, the light of the Solar race, a paramount ruler; here, for pleasing Lord Krishna, (and) for the sake of annihilation of his own sins, the village named Guroli has been given to the Brāhman Manikaśarman of the Kāśyapa gotra.

¹ The formation of this letter does not answer to pri, though this is undoubtedly the intended reading.

[।] Or perhaps तए as before.

^{*} The syllable 5 appears below the line. It was evidently first omitted and later supplied.

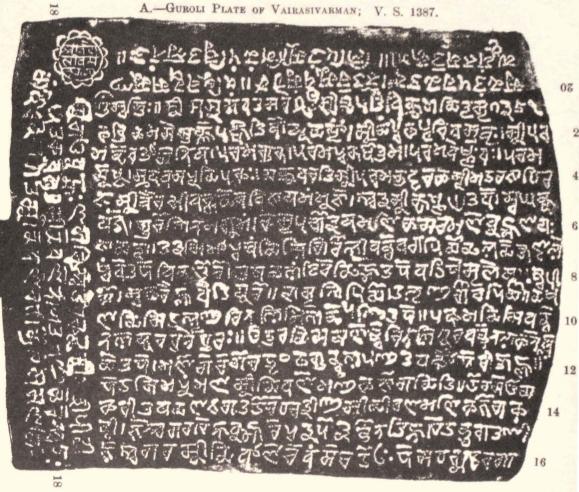

⁴ For the correct reading of this verse see below, p. 178.

The visarga after svasti had better be omitted, because the word is, as a rule, an indeclinable. The form with visarga occurs in a few more inscriptions of Chamba as well as in the Chipurupalle plates of the Eastern Chālukya Vishņuwardhana I. In the case of this latter record, Fleet doubts the appearance of the visarga by remarking that it is 'probably only due to a mark of punctuation, imperfectly cleared out.' (Ind. Ant., Vol. XX, p. 16, n. 3). In fact, the sign of tisarga is plainly visible on the facsimile and cannot be taken for anything else. See A. C. Burnell's Elements of South-Indian Palaeography, London, 1878, 2nd ed., Pl. XXVII. In the Vedas, however, the word is treated as an indeclinable and as a substantive, e.g. evasti pūskā asuro dadhātu nah, (RV, V. 51. 11); svastim nà rāmaruto dadhāta. (RV, II. 29.3).

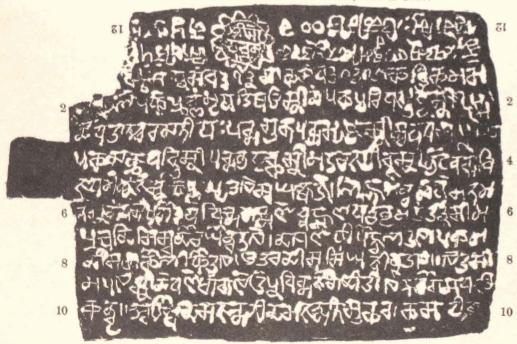

This refers to that ate as well as to the place of issue.

⁷ This alludes to the donor who, in this instance, is the king himself.

NO. 2. MHESA PLATE OF BHOTAVARMAN; SAKA 1318 (Plate I, B.)

This plate² comes from the village Mhesa of the Lilh parganā, where it was found in the possession of Mangā, Ghīnku and other Brāhmans. It is now preserved in the Bhuri Singh Museum at Chamba and is numbered B, 8 in its catalogue. It measures 7½" wide by 6" high, excluding the handle on the left. There is a small rent beneath the handle, while the upper left corner of the plate is broken off and missing, resulting in the loss of some letters. There are twelve lines of writing, of which the last two appear on the top margin. A seal in the shape of a rosette with a two-line legend in Nāgarī characters in its centre is incised at the top of the plate in the middle. The engraving is deep and clear.

The language, as usual, is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī, abounding in mistakes, though the sense is clear.

The charter registers the grant, by the king Bhotavarman, of the village Bhaisa in the Lihla mandala to Birmasarman, a Brāhman of the Vasishtha gotra. It is further stated that the gift was made at the Ganges. From this it is evident that the grantor had at that time gone to Hardwar (Haridvāra) on pilgrimage. This example was followed by some successors of Bhotavarman, in whose charters it will be seen that they likewise performed charities at that distant holy place.

The grant is issued from the city of Champaka and is dated in the Śāstra year 73, the Śaka Śamvat 1318, the full-moon day of the month of Kārttika, which is possibly the date or the donation itself. The corresponding Christian date would be Tuesday, the 17th October, A. D. 1396. The writer of the deed was Pandit Agasti. and the engraver a smith named Rupuņu.

As regards the localities mentioned in the record, Lihla mandala is the same as the present Lilh parganā. The donated village Bhaisa is identical with Mhesa. where the plate was found; but since it is the headquarters of the pargana, it is now called Lilh or Lilh-kothi. It is situated on the left bank of the Guher rivulet, opposite Daberh. The granted land, as appears from the definition of the boundaries, extends over both the banks of the Guher. Sudora, the boundary village on the east, is below Mhesa and is now known as Sundaur. Pohrula is now called Parhaul after Parhaul-Dhar, the hill above Daberh. The waterfall Makoli on the west is known to this day under the same name. It is formed by the Guher nālā above the village Makoli is so called because of its white sand (makol). The Simgha ridge on the north is the one that lies on the left side of the nālā.

NO. 3. SPURIOUS SARA PLATE OF BHOTAVARMAN; V. S. 1461 (Plate II)

The present owner of this plate, as recorded by Prof. Vogel, is one Basheshar, a resident of Sarā in the Sāho parganā. It measures 12" in breadth and 10" in height. It has no seal and no handle. Originally perhaps it had a handle which is now broken off, as there is a small gap about that place, resulting in the partial loss of three aksharas. The proper left side of the plate is also damaged There are altogether 22 lines of writing, of which lines 20-21 appear along the proper right margin, while line 22 runs inversely along the top margin.

The language of the record, as usual, is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyali. The composition of the Sanskrit part is extremely faulty. It purports to register a grant by king Bhotavarman of three villages, called Sara. Charona and Koila, to two Brāhmans, Nīlaka and Bhīya by name, belonging to the Bhāradvāja gotra. The reading of the date is highly uncertain. Still, as far as it can be made out, it is the Vikrama Samvat 1461, corresponding to the Sastra year 80, Thursday, the twelfth day of the bright fortnight of the month of Ashadha. It is slightly irregular inasmuch as the week day on the given tithi was Friday and not Thursday, the corresponding Christian date being 20th June, A. D. 1404.

The gift villages of Sara, Charona and Koila are to be identified with the present Sarā, Charhūn and Kurilā, all in the Sāho parganā. Chamba during the summer of 1939, I had occasion to visit Sarā where I could personally verify the boundaries of the donated area. It was amazing to find how accurately they answered to the description. Most of the boundary-marks can still be recognised in the existing mountain ranges, hill-tops, passes, ridges, streams, footpaths, etc. Thus, in the east we have the Sarā range as well as the hills of Dūgā³ Bhudrāh, Kālāpānī and Bithrūnī, that are identical with the Sare-dī-dhara, Bhadra, Kalapani and Bitharoni of the inscription. In the south-east Beli and Rotha are mentioned which are respectively the names of a mountain range and a The latter is now known as Romtha. It is about three miles south of

No. 16 of the APRAS, NC, 1903-04, p. 6.
The term dagd means 'deep'.</sup>

Sarā and is also included in the Sāho parganā. The inscription speaks of a stream called Gokha in the vicinity of Rotha. That is now called Gukh, One has to cross it, while going from Sarā to Romthā. The Patanali stream, or Patnāli as it is now called, is about three miles south-west of Sara. By pakhamna (Skt. pāshāna) Tamaha is probably meant Tramshe-di-dhag, 'the precipice of Tramsha,' Bhatola is the name of a streamlet near that precipice. Bagodi is three miles north-west of Sarā, and the brook of Chhamdi is there nearby. The rivulet of Sarā is so called after the village of that name. One has to cross it before climbing the hill on which the village of Sarā is situated. Dhakalotha is supposed to be the name of a gotha, like Bade-dā-gotha 'gotha of the pipal tree,' the term gotha signifying a natural shelter among the hills where shepherds stop their flocks of sheep and goats overnight. The Drateda-khada is now called Drātī-dā-nālā. It is about two miles north of Sarā. Nadena is the name of a hilltop above Sarā. The Kiranade-rā-nala is now known as Kailū-rā- nalā. In this way, almost all the boundary marks mentioned in the inscription can be precisely located without much phonetic change in their names. This very preciseness, however, arouses a suspicion as to the genuineness of the document. The suspicion is further heightened when we consider how vast an area the aforementioned boundaries comprise; for, in no other charter of Chamba, the extent of donated land is even half so extensive as the present grant gives out. Moreover, the extremely corrupt and slovenly composition of the present charter ill assorts with such a grand donation as it purports to record. For that, one would expect the language of the document to be chaste and, in a corresponding degree, more stylish. Apart from these considerations, there is an internal evidence which definitely proves the record to be spurious. We shall see that the writer of the record is stated to be the Gauda Brāhman Ramāpati, son of Surottama (who is also called Surananda in some other records). This statement betrays the forgery; for, we know that Ramapati appeared on the stage much later, more than a century and a half later than Bhotavarman's time. We have two of Ganesvarman's charters, wherein Surananda figures as the writer, while it is in some of the grants of Ganeśavarman's son Pratapasimha that Surananda's son Ramāpati is for the first time mentioned as the writer, and that is in A. D. 1575. It is, however, still later, during the reign of Pratapasimha's grandson and successor Balabhadravarman, that Ramapati composed a number of royal grants. preamble of the present record, it will be seen, is but a poor imitation of that mostly found in Balabhadravarman's charters. Viewed in this light, the obscurity about the date given in the beginning of the charter under discussion will also appear to be a deliberate mystification on the part of the fabricator. It is difficult to assign a definite date to the fabrication, but in any case it is much later than A. D. 1575.

No. 4. BHOTAVARMAN'S GRANT OF V. S. 1507(?)

The present owner of this plate is stated to be Daroga Paras Ram of Chamba. It differs from the other plates in several respects: it has no handle; the writing on it runs breadthwise and not lengthwise as on other plates; and the engraving consists of dotted letters. All these features mark it off as a much later work than it purports to be. As we shall see presently, there are some pieces of internal evidence as well, pointing in the same direction. It measures 8$" high by 6$" wide. top left corner it bears an oval seal, drawn likewise in a dotted line. Within the seal is a two-line legend which consists of an invocation to the god Manamaheśa (Mani Mahesa), and does not contain the name of the royal donor as other records usually The same invocation heads the document which consists of 11 lines.

The reading of some of the names is not certain.

This portion probably mentioned the name of the engraver, but its reading is very uncertain.

The script of the inscription is purely Takari, while its language is entirely Bhāshā. The usage of such Persian or Urdu terms as jam (zamīn), baksanā (bakhshnā). chākarī, khijmat (khidmat) and hājar (hāzir) is noteworthy. It testifies to the Muslim influence on the popular language of Chamba. Since such terms are absent from the inscriptions of Bhotavarman's successors, the present record appears to be a later one, and probably a spurious one. The Takri character and the use of Bhasha throughout, combined with its external characteristics, as have already been observed, go to prove further that the present plate is a mere fabrication. Still, there is one thing for which the record may not be regarde! as a forgery: it is not a grant to a Brahman, but an ordinary deed registering the bestowal of a reward on a state servant of Kshatriya extraction for his gallantry displayed on a particular occasion—possibly for rescuing a royal member from a perilous plight. This deviation may justify all that makes the record appear a spurious document.1

The beneficiary in this instance is an individual called Jadhika Atalā— Jadhika being the name of his caste now known as Jadhek. The gift consisted of 151 lāhadīs of land at Sārago and 2 lāhadīs at Guda, besides an annuity of Rs. 123. The villages cannot be identified. The reading of the date is uncertain so far as the number of the year is concerned. It is read as Samvat 1507, the 10th day of Magha. This would correspond to A. D. 1450-51, whereas Bhotavarman is supposed to have died in A. D. 1442.2

In my opinion the fraud must have been committed after 1641 when the Chamba administration had to be reorganized after the occupation by the Nurpur State. The many Muslim words fit well into this time. Also Prithyl Singh's gifts to Dai Botla, who had saved his life, may have been an inspiration for it, perhaps also another grant (No. 56) to non-Brahmins, with Prithvi Singh's collaborat on .-- It

No. 5. JUNGRAR PLATE OF BHOTAVARMAN

(Plate III)

This well preserved plate came from Jungrār, a village in the Churāh wazārat, where it was discovered in the possession of its owner, Chanan by name, a Brāhman resident of the said village. It is now preserved in the Bhuri Singh Museum at Chamba where it is enlisted as B, 9.5 It measures $10\frac{3}{4}$ wide by 8 high. It has no handle and bears no seal. The engraving is beautifully done. The writing covers sixteen lines besides the sign manual of the royal donor, which is incised in the proper right margin.

The script of this plate provides an excellent specimen of the Śāradā or rather Devāsesha characters of the time. The signs of the letters ch and s here may be found hardly distinguishable from each other. The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The Sanskrit portion is pretty corrupt, though the style adopted in the preamble is fairly ornate.

^{1 &#}x27;The Virama sign attached to k looks more like a medial a or i. The same is used in t of Vrajet, line 9, and in m of Vasudharam, line 10.

In his Catalogue of the Bhuri Singh Museum at Chamba, Prof. Vogel gives the name of the village as Jungharār. It may, however, be noted that there is another village of this name in the Gudyāl parganā within the Chambā wazārat, while that in the Churāh wazārat is included in the Jasaur parganā. The difference of spelling between the two names is vary small; ज्या in the case of the former; ज्याराइ in the case of the latter which is the provenance of the present plate.

JUNGRAR PLATE OF BHOTAVARMAN.

The inscription records the gift of land at the village of Jumgurāra in the Koshṭhāgrahāra in the Chaturāha mandala as a perpetual grant by the king Bhoṭavarman to a Brāhman cailed Vadi, son of Sujana, of the Kāśyapa gotra. The boundaries of the donated land are given, but some of the details thereof are not quite intelligible. The village Jumgurāra is obviously the same as Jungrāī, the find-spot of the plate, while Chaturāha mandala refers to the Churāh wazārat. Koshṭhāgrahāra, which seems to be the name of the pargaṇā, cannot be identified. The modern name of the pargaṇā in which the village of Jungrāɪ is included, is Jasaur which does not appear to be a contraction of Koshṭhāgrahāra.

The charter is not dated, but is issued, as usual, from the city of Champaka, i.e., Chamba. It mentions the names of Bhotavarman's parents: his father was Māṇikyavarman and mother Jugyaradevī.

The record was composed by one Pandi! Agasti, and was engraved by a copper-smith named Rupunu.

No. 6. BAKAN PLATE OF SAMGRAMAVARMAN

(Plate IV, A)

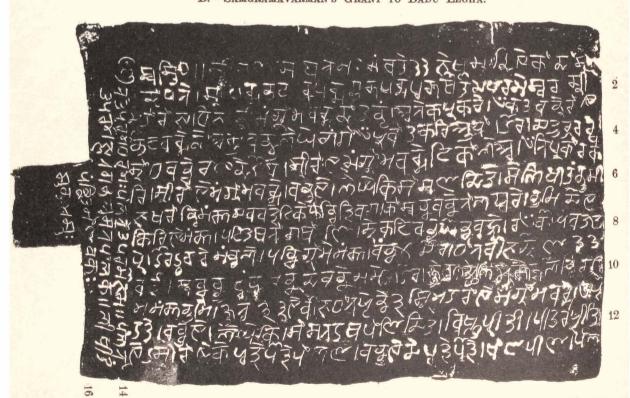

This plate is now kept in the Bhuri Singh Museum at Chamba, where it bears the number B, 10. It was discovered in the possession of its owner, a Brāhman named Gokal, in the Bakān or Bakānī parganā within the Chamba wazārat. It measures 11° wide by 5½° high, and has no handle and no seal. It was broken into two pieces which have now been railed together so as to form one whole. In its left corner as well as in its middle, it is slightly chipped off, resulting in the complete loss of a few syllables. The plate has evidently suffered from fire, as it looks very much singed. Consequently the writing on it has for a considerable part been blurred, and cannot be made out entirely. The engraving has been rather clumsily executed, and this adds to the obscurity.

The language, as usual, is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyali, abounding in mistakes. The record is dated but the reading of the date is not absolutely certain. As it is, it reads Saka 1316, the Sastra year 70. Monday, the new-moon the month ofMāgha. This is irregular. The Sastra year corresponding to Saka 1316 should be 62 and not 70. The reading of the Śaka year in the inscription may perhaps be 1314, in which case the figure of 4 appears inverted. But the corresponding Sastra year would again be 60 and not 70. If we accept the reading 1314 and regard 70 as a mistake for 60, the date would regularly correspond to Monday, 13th January A. D. 1:93, taking the month as pūrnimānta. As, however, the year A. D. 1393 falls in the reign of Bhotavarman's father, Manikyavarman, we have to presume that either the record is spurious or the date given is wrong.

As regards the object of the inscription, though much of the part containing important details has been lost, the preserved portion gives out that the inscription recorded the gift of a village called Bhitera, by the King Samgrāmavarman, to a Brāhman, named Kahnaśarman. The donated village is possibly identical with the modern Bhaterā in the Bakānī parganā. The record further refers to one village in the Maihla parganā, but it is not clear in what connection that has been referred to. Possibly some additional land was granted to the same donee, as is also indicated by a further mention of 6 kunus in line 11. The Maihla parganā, now known as Mehlā, is adjacent to the Bakānī parganā.

The writer of the grant was one Pandit Rama.

No. 7. SAMGRAMAVARMAN'S GRANT TO BADU LEGHA

(Plate IV. B)

The present owner of this plate1 is reported to be one Badu2 Gumal alias Chhaiju of Chamba. It is a well preserved plate, only a very small bit has been chipped off from its upper right corner. It measures 74" high by 11" wide excluding the handle to its left. It contains, all told, 17 lines of writing, of which lines 14-17 appear in the left margin, the last two being short lines.

The language is Bhasha except in the first three lines where it is intended to be Sanskrit, but it is awfully corrupt.

The inscription records five gifts of land, to one and the same individual, made on different occasions, but apparently confirmed and registered on the last occasion when the charter was issued. This last occasion was an udyāpana on the 11th day of the bright fortnight of the month of Jyeshtha in the year 22. year in all probability is referable to the Sastra reckoning and hence may be equated with A. D. 1446. Since, however, the week-day is not specified, the given date cannot be verified. As it is, it corresponds to Sunday, 5th June, A.D. 1446. The aforementioned tithi in the month of Jyeshtha is known in the Punjab as Nirjalā Ekādasī and on that date every pious Hindu is supposed to keep fast and perform charities. The term udyāpana denotes 'successful termination of a fast.' It follows, therefore, that the royal donor, Samgramavarman, must have observed fast on that Nirjalā Ekādasi day and made gifts at the time of breaking his fast. The grantee is the priest called Badu Legha.

Three of the other occasions of the donations are definitely stated in the record. They are: first, when Badu Legha had carried the bone-remains of Samgramavarman's father Bhotavarman to Hardwar (Haridvara) for immersing them there in the Ganges; second, when Samgramavarman had performed the fourth annual srāddha of his father; and third, when Samgramavarman was anointed king.

Benskrit baju.

Pardit Thakur Das informed me that this is what among his people is called buddha brāddha, a term which is actually met with in a later record (No. 35). Any brāddha performed before the fourth year after the demise of the person concerned is regarded abuddha. The reason for this is shown in the fact that no high class Brāhm in participate in an abuddha brāddha, that function being left to a particular section of the community known as Achdris (Skt. dehárgas) who take part in obsequies as well.

The details of the gifts are as follows: a large tripartite field of wet land, known as Batrețikă, in the village of Jakharādi; two fields, called Pați and Năgathāṇi, at Kiriă; four plots of land at Padi in the Hubār pargaṇā; one kunu of land at Chheni; and three kunus of land at Kulodi.

Of the localities mentioned, Jakharādi is identical with the modern Jukhrādi in the Panjlā parganā of the Chamba wazārat. Kiriā is now called Kirīhā and is in the same parganā of Panjlā. Padi is probably a mistake for Sapadi or Sapadi, which village is in the Hubār parganā of the Bhaṭṭiyāt wazārat, while Chudūdū in the same parganā is at present known as Chadūrū. The other localities could not be identified.

From the mention of the fourth annual śrāddha of Bhotavarman in this inscription, Prof. Vogel has concluded that Bhotavarman died in A. D. 1442. This is correct only if the śrāddha was performed in the very Śāstra year 22 when this charter was issued. Apparently the inscription refers to the śrāddha as an event which was then past though we cannot ascertain the exact extent of its priority.

No. 8. MINDHA PLATE OF SAMGRAMAVARAMAN

(Plate V, A)

As recorded by Dr. Vogel, the last owner of this plate was a Brāhman, Siv Karn by name, in the village of Mindhā of the Panjlā parganā, on whose death the grant lapsed. The plate is now deposited in the Bhuri Singh Museum at Chamba, where it bears the number B, 11. It measures $6\frac{1}{2}$ high by $12\frac{1}{2}$ wide, and is in a good state of preservation, except that its handle is broken off and corners are somewhat damaged. The writing on it covers sixteen lines, of which the last, containing only the subscription, appears in the left margin.

The record is couched in Sanskrit throughout. The composition does show a number of mistakes, but on the whole it is much less faulty than that of any of the foregoing inscriptions.

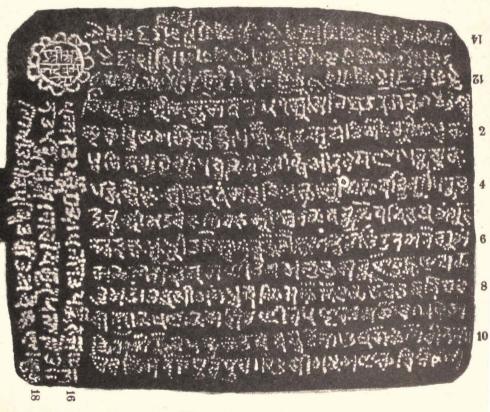

Its object is to register the gift, by P. M. P. Sangrāmavarman, of a village called Mimdha, included in the Kirikiśindara mandala, as a perpetual grant to a Brāhman named Chipu, son of Rāśi and grandson of Jiu, belonging to the Bhāradvāja gotra with the five-fold pravara and to the Katha śakhā. The record is not dated.

The granted village is the present Mindha in the Panjla pargana, while Kirikisindara is identical with Kiria of the preceding inscription and is now known as Kariha. This village was formerly the headquarters of a separate pargana, having the name Kirikisindara or simply Kiria, but now that pargana forms a part of the Panjla pargana within which Kiriha is a village. Mugala, a boundary village, retains its name to this day and is also in the Panjla pargana.

The writer of the grant was one Pandit Damodara, while it was engraved by a copper-smith, named Rupunuka.

This inscription informs us that king Samgramavarman's mother was Parama-bhaṭṭārikā Mahārājñī Jijilidevī, and his father P. M. P. Bhotavarman.

No. 9. UHAM PLATE OF ANANDAVARMAN

(Plate V, B)

This plate² is said to have been discovered in the possession of a Brāhman named Atrā at the village of Uhām³ in the Mehlā parganā of the Chamba wazārat, and is

The phrase udaya-sailo mitra-mandalasya has also a secondary sense here: 'mountain from behind which rises the orb of the sun.'
 No. B, 12 of the Catalogue.

In the list of villages at my disposal there is no village of the name of Uham in the Mehla pargand, but there is one called Utan and possibly this is what is meant.

now kept in the Bhuri Singh Museum at Chamba. The plate is in a good state of preservation. It has a handle on its left and measures 6" high by 7½" wide excluding the handle. The engraving is done in dots and on account of that it is not very clear. Consequently the reading at several places remains doubtful. The writing covers eighteen lines in all, of which lines 12-15 run inversely in the top margin, while lines 16-18 appear in the left margin; line 15 consists of only two syllables. In the left top corner of the plate there is engraved a seal in the form of a rosette, which hears a legend in its centre in Nāgarī characters, reading 'Śrī-Ānamdavarma ā.'

The language of the record is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyali and the composition is very faulty.

The inscription refers itself to the reign of P.M. Anandavarmadeva and records his gift of a village named Umha in the Maihla mandala to a Brāhman called Malukaśarman, of the Śāndilya gotra. The boundary-limits are well-defined.

The composer of the record was one Pandit Beduṇā of the Gautama gotra, while it was evidently written on the plate by one Mehatā Makhaṇa.

The date of the document is mentioned in lines 1-2. It has been read as Sastra year 57, Saka 14 [0*]2, the twelfth day of the bright fortnight of the month of Karttika. In the catalogue of the Bhuri Singh Museum, Dr. Vogel gives the Saka year as 1403. In fact, as is clear from his manuscript with me, he read the figures as 1423 and corrected it into 1403. Obviously he thought that the third figure namely 2, was wrongly written instead of a zero by the scribe, since by calculation Saka 1403 rightly corresponds to Sastra 57. According to my reading, however, we have only 142; what Dr. Vogel read as 3 after that is in reality an initial a. I, therefore, think that the scribe omitted the zero altogether and that the intended number was 1402. In this case we may take it to refer to the expired Saka year and not to the current. Anyway, the week-day having not been specified, the date is not verifiable. As it is, it corresponds to Saturday, 3rd November, A. D. 1481.

As regards the localities, the donated village Umha is identical with the present Uhām or Utān situated on the left bank of the Rāvi above Mehlā, the headquarters of the parganā of the same name, which is mentioned in the inscription as Maihla mandala. The mountain-pass stated to be in the east of the gift village refers to the neck, near the village Dāduī, through which the road from Mehlā to Bakān and Basu passes. The brooklet of Śakalā is now known as Sakāli, while the sacred footprints of Mehlā refer to a pillar bearing foot-prints of the goddess Jalamukhī or Jālapādevī under which name she is now known and worshipped at Mehlā. The river spoken of in the north is no doubt the Rāvi.

No. 10. CHAMBA PLATE OF ANANDAVARMAN (Plate VI. A)

This plate' was in the possession of one Badu Chhajju at Chamba. It is fairly well preserved, except that a small bit from its lower right corner has chipped off, resulting in the loss of two or three letters. It has a handle to its left with a hole pierced in its centre. The engraving is rather poorly executed on account of which some portions of the text are not clear. The writing covers seventeen lines in all, of which the last line appears in the left margin.

The language of the record is incorrect Sanskrit mixed with Chambyāli.

Its object is to register the gift of several parcels of land by king Anandavarman to two Brāhmans of the Bhāradvāja gotra, Gangādhara and Gayādhara by name. The donees are brothers, the names of their father and grandfather respectively being Leghā and Sarmi. Their father, Leghā, is possibly identical with the donee in one of Samgrāmavarman's grants, namely in No. 7 above. The record is not dated, but the occasion of the gift is stated to be the udyāpana of an ekādaśī (vrata) when there was also a Śiva-Pratishthā. It is not clear what this latter ceremony refers to. In some inscriptions from Chamba the term pratishthā is employed also in the sense of 'a ceremony performed on the completion of repairs to a temple.' Thus, in the present instance, the Śiva-pratishthā means either 'installation of śiva-linga' or 'completion of repairs to a Siva temple.' No village is mentioned in the document. Only the names of the different fields donated occur, which cannot be identified.

We learn from this record that Anandavarman's father was Samgrama-varman and mother Paramabhaṭṭārikā Mahārājñī Sampūrṇadevī.

The writer of the inscription was one Pandit Mano, while it was incised by a goldsmith whose name is not preserved.

No. 11. GHURETHA PLATE OF GANESAVARMAN; SAKA 1434 (Plate VI. B)

The owner of this plate' was one Gharathu Prabndyāl of the village of Ghuretha in the Bhariyā parganā. It is now preserved in the Bhuri Singh Museum at Chamba and listed there as B, 13. It measures $5\frac{7}{8}$ wide by $4\frac{3}{4}$ high. Its handle and a part of its upper left corner are broken off. There is a seal in the damaged corner, as usual in the form of a resette with a Nāgarī legend in its centre.

The language is partly incorrect Sanskrit and partly Chambyali.

The inscription records the gift, by king Ganesavarman, of a village called Yvaila to a Brāhman named Jaso of the Śāṇḍilya gotra. There are two villages of the name of Ohlī in the Bhariyā pargana. One of them probably represents Yvaila, the gift village.

The record is dated the Saka year 1434, the Sāstra year 88, the new-moon day in the month of Māgha, the particular occasion being a sūrya-parvan. This last usually refers to a solar eclipse. The given date corresponds to Saturday, 5th February A.D. 1513, but there was no solar eclipse then. There was, however, a solar eclipse on the next following amāvāsyā day, that was in the month of Phālguna, Monday 7th March, A.D. 1513.² Probably this was the intended date, but by mistake the writer wrote Māgha instead of Phālguna. The writer was one Pandit Ramā.

No. 12. CHAMBA PLATE OF GANESAVARMAN: SASTRA 97

(Plate VII, A)

The owner of this plate¹ also is stated to be Badu Chhajju² of Chamba. The plate is entire and has a handle to the left with a hole pierced in its centre. It measures 10" wide by 7½" high and has no seal. The inscription on it runs into 14 lines of which the last one appears in the left margin.

The language is incorrect Sanskrit mixed with Chambyall.

The object of the inscription is to register two grants of land at the village of Gvadi by king Ganeśavarman jointly to two Brāhmans, Badu Kamhno and Badu Amno by name. It is stated in the record that one grant was made by queen Prāgadei (Prayāgadevī) at a place called Śingarapura, while the other was made on the occasion when Badu Kamhno had immersed the bone-remains of king Anandavarman in the Ganges. As is clear from the next inscription (No. 13), queen Prāgadei was Ānandavarman's wife and Ganeśavarman's mother.

The date of the document is given as the 8th day of the navarātra in the month of Chaitra of the year 97. The year obviously refers itself to the Sāstra reckoning. The navarātras occur twice in a year, once in the bright fortnight of Chaitra and for the second time in that of Áśvina. Towards the end of the record it is stated that the grants were formally conveyed to the donees at the time when Ganeśavarman was anointed king. This would show that the above date also refers to Ganeśavarman's accession. But Pandit Thakur Das informed me that the month of Chaitra is considered not auspicious enough in Chamba for the tikks ceremony. We have, thus, to suppose that the two gifts had been earmarked on two previous occasions as specified, that they were conveyed to the don ees at the time of Ganeśavarman's accession to the throne and that the title-deed was issued later, on the given date. It is not verifiable, but the year corresponds to A.D. 1521-22.

The village Gvadi, where the donated lands were situated, is identical with the modern Guādī in the Panjlā parganā. Ślūgarapura (Śringārapura?) must be a place outside the Chamba state. It is supposed that queen Prāgadei must have gone on pilgrimage at the same time when her husband's bone-remains were taken for immersion in the Ganges and that Śiūgarapura must have been a holy place that side, where she made her charity.

No. 13. DHADHYADA PLATE OF GANESAVARMAN; SASTRA 17 (Plate VII, B)

This plate was in the possession of one Nagar Brahman of Dhadhyada in the Panjla pargana. Except that both of its lower corners are slightly broken off, it is a well preserved plate. It has no handle and no seal. It measures $11\frac{3}{4}$ wide by $7\frac{1}{2}$ high, and bears twelve lines of inscription, the last line appearing in the left margin.

It records the gift of a field, called Dhadhyadā, by king Ganeśavarman to a Gvādu Brāhman named Ranāso, son of Sambhu, of the Bhāradvāja gotra. The boundaries of the land are well defined. The grant was not absolutely rent-free. The donee had to give to the state a tax in kind, called manganī, consisting of three pidas of grain, presumably from every harvest.

The date of the gift is not specified. Only the year 17 is mentioned, which is to be taken as referring to the Sastra reckoning. It corresponds to A.D 1541-42.

Dhadhyadā is the same as Dhadhyādā which is said to be within the Panjlā parganā. It is evidently not the name of a village, but only of a land.

The inscription informs us that Ganeśavarman's mother's name was Priāgadevi (Prayāgadevi).

No. 14. LAKSHMI-NARAYANA TEMPLE PLATE OF GANESAVARMAN'S TIME; SASTRA 34

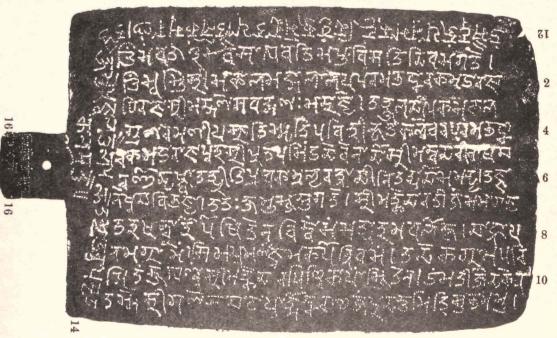

(Plate VIII, A)

This plate¹ belongs to the Lakshmī-Nārāyaṇa temple at Chamba and is now preserved in the Bhuri Singh Museum there, its catalogue number being B, 14. It measures 8½″ high by 14″ broad including the handle to its left. There is a hole pierced in the centre of the handle. The plate does not bear any seal. It has, all told, 16 lines of writing engraved on it, of which line 12 runs inversely in the top margin, lines 13-14 appear in the left margin, line 14 is a short one, lines 15-16 are equally short and run on the handle.

The record is couched entirely in Sanskrit with scarcely any mistake and is remarkable for that. It does not mention the place of issue, but begins rightaway with the date which is the year 34, obviously of the Sāstra reckoning, the 27th day of the month of Vaiśākha, in its dark fortnight. This appears to be irregular Ordinarily it should correspond to Tuesday, 24th May, A. D. 1558. Then the corresponding tithi was 7th of the bright fortnight of Jyeshtha. It is further stated in the record that the grant was made on the occasion of the Kumbha festival, which must have come off on the 1st of Vaiśākha, Thursday, 28th April, A.D. 1558. The corresponding tithi even then was 11th of the bright fortnight of Vaiśākha. Thus, the statement in the inscription that it was then the dark fortnight of Vaiśākha is not borne out. Possibly this latter refers to the date when the document was drawn up, while the gift was made about a month earlier, on Thursday, 28th April 1558, on the day of the Kumbha parvan. The Kumbha fair comes once in twelve years on a day when the planet Jupiter (Guru) enters Aquarius (Kumbha). It is held at some of the most holy places like Hardwar and Prayag (Allahabad).

The inscription refers itself to the reign of Mahārājādhirāja Gaņeśavarman, but the gift recorded in the present grant was made by his son and co-regent Mahārājaputra Pratāpasimha who, we learn from the inscription, had then gone on pilgrimage to the tīrthas of Badarínátha and Kedāranātha beyond Haridvāra, in the Himālayas. It is stated that he presented priceless jewels at the feet of the god Badarīnātha, which were later divided among the priests attending on that deity, and that at the time of the Kumbha fair he came to Kedāra tīrtha, observed a fast lasting six nights and made a gift of the village called Chāhnāya to a learned Brāhman named Gaņeśāchārya.

The gift village is very probably identical with the modern Chūhn, the head-quarters of the parganā of the same name in the Bhaṭṭi or Bhaṭṭiyāt wazārat. The Hamsatīrtha, mentioned in connection with the libation of water at the time of the donation, must have been the name of a holy site at or near Kedāranātha.

The inscription was engraved by the goldsmith Ratana.

It is not known as to how the grant came into the possession of the Lakshin - Nārāyana temple from its original owner.

No. 15. MOHDAYA GRANT OF GANESAVARMAN'S THME; SASTRA 34

(Plate VIII, B)

This plate¹ is said to have belonged to Jyotishi Chandramani and is now deposited in the Bhuri Singh Museum at Chamba, where it is enlisted as B, 15. It measures 6½" high by 10" broad excluding the handle. The inscription on it is neatly engraved in big letters and consists of 11 lines in all, the last line running in the left margin.

The record is composed in Sanskrit throughout and has a few mistakes. It is dated in the year 34, plainly of the Sastra reckoning and corresponds to A.D. 1558. No other details of the date are specified.

The document refers itself to the reign of Mahārājādhirāja Gaņeśavarman but registers a grant by his son and co-regent Mahārājaputra Pratāpasimha of the village Mohḍayā in the Hobāra mandala to a Brāhman named Banu.

The Hobāra mandala is the same as the present Hubār parganā. The list of villages at my disposal, however, does not show any village of the name of Mohdayā in that parganā.

The writer of the inscription was Pandit Surānandaśarman.

The grant was not totally exempt from rent, as the donee, it is stated, had to pay to the state four drovas of paddy and the other customary dues every year.

No. 16. CHAMENU GRANT OF GANESAVARMAN

(Plate IX)

This plate was discovered in the possession of one Purohit Mansā. It is an exceptionally large sheet of copper, measuring 10" high by 163" wide excluding the handle which is on the left and has a hole pierced in its centre. The writing on it covers 15 lines in all, of which the last line runs along the left margin. The appearance of the characters indicate that the present plate is a somewhat later copy of an old record.

The language is Sanskrit, intermixed with the Bhāshā in the latter portion. The record bears no date.

Its object is to register a land-grant by king Ganeśavarman to one Pandit Mādho, son of Bhāno and grandson of Tribho, belonging to the Atri gotra and the Vājasaneya śākhā. The donation comprised two parcels of land; one the major piece, was situated at or more probably consisted of the village of Chamenu, while the other, called Thakarota, lay at the village of Birora. Their boundaries are defined and are identifiable. Thus Chamenu and Birora are the same as Chaminū and Baror respectively. Lamji, the boundary village in the west, is known under that very name to this day. All the three villages are included in the Gudyāl parganā. The river Śamala and the rivulet Holā are also there and are identical with the present day Sāl and Hol.

No. 17. PUNILA-PRENGULA GRANT OF GANESAVARMAN (Plate X)

This plate is said to have been owned by Chandidas and Shirdas. It is broken into two. A triangular bit is broken off from the upper right corner of the left-hand side piece. The two pieces have now been clasped together into one whole. It measures 8" high by 17½" wide including the handle. It has, all told, 18 lines of inscription, of which line 12 appears in the right margin, line 13 runs inversely along the top margin, lines 14-15 occur in the left margin and lines 16-18 are very short ones and are engraved on the handle.

The language is Sanskrit throughout, though the composition is not altogether faultless. The record is not dated, but refers itself to Ganesavarman's reign.

Its object is to register two land-gifts to a Brāhman called Biṇi of the Gautama gotra. The donor of one grant is king Gaṇeśavarman himself, while the other gift was given by queen Apūrvadevī with the king's approval. The former grant consisted of two villages named Punīla and Prengula, and the latter comprised a field called Dholī at the village of Huneri. The recipient of the queen's gift is not specifically mentioned, but presumably he is the same Brāhman Bini.

The writer and the engraver of the inscription were Pandit Surananda and the goldsmith Arjani respectively.

All the places mentioned in the inscription are included in the Bharīyā parganā. Punīļa and Prengula are identical with Pandļā and Prayungāl respectively, while Kamatha is the same as Badūnā. Huneri cannot be identified.

The reading of the text here is not very certain and the meaning obscure.

The last six syllables of the text have been left unread; hence the sense of this portion is not clear. 12 D of A-q

No. 18. GANGUYA GRANT OF GANESAVARMAN

(Plate XI, A)

The owner of this plate was one Koluā¹ Atrā. It measures 6½" high by 9½" wide. Its handle is partly cut off. It contains 12 lines of writing in all, of which line 11 runs inversely in the top margin, while line 12 appears in the left margin.

The language is Sanskrit. The record is not dated, but it refers itself to Ganeśavarman's reign. It records the gift of a field by the king himself to a Brābman named Rāma at the village of Gānguyā.

The inscription was written by Pandit Surānanda and engraved by the goldsmith Ārajāni.

The village of Gänguyā is identical with the modern Gugāmh. As the inscription indicates, there are, in fact, two villages of the same name. They are now called Gugāmh Upralā and Gugāmh Jhiklā, i.e., the Upper Gugāmh and Lower Gugāmh. They are included in the Sāch parganā of the Chamba wazārat. The rājamārga or the main road mentioned in the inscription possibly refers to the old Khajiār road, while the Sāchediyā stream is now called Sāched.

The dands here as well as in several cases below corves the purpose of a hyphen.

^{*} The anusudre here is superfluous; read गांक्रया.

⁴ The reading of this syllable is not certain. Its formation is rather peculiar. It appears to be a with the signs of two medial vowels \bar{u} and \bar{u} attached to it. Perhaps we have to read क्यार. Anyway the sense of the word क्यार remain obscure, though obviously it is the proper name, however str nge, of the field referred to.

[•] There is a space sufficient for one letter left blank before य. The word द्वितीय suggests that another village of the same name of गृङ्ग् या is meant. We may, therefore, supply ङ्क्ष् in the blank space and read दितीय गिङ्ग यग्रामस्य.

No. 20. CHAMBA PLATE OF PRATAPASIMHA; SASTRA 51

(Plate XII, A)

This plate was in the possession of Pandit Mohan Lal, the Rājaguru, of Chamba. It is slightly damaged in the upper right corner, where one letter is lost. It has no handle. It measures $7\frac{1}{2}$ high by $10\frac{1}{2}$ broad. It has a seal in its top left corner, containing the name of the king in Nāgarī characters. The inscription on it covers, all told, 22 lines, of which lines 13-14 appear in the left margin and lines 15-18 run inversely in the top margin, while lines 19-22 are in reality no lines, as they contain only nine syllables engraved beside and below the seal for want of space.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The Sanskrit portion does not show many mistakes.

The inscription is dated in the Śāstra year 51, but further details of the date have not been given. In line 2 a word is doubtfully read as chaitra, but it is so out of place there that it can hardly be taken as referring to the month of Chaitra. The writer of the inscription had intended to state the corresponding Vikrama year, but he has not done so completely. He has written the first two digits as 16 and after that he has put only two dots, indicating thereby that two more digits were to follow. It is, however, not clear as to why he has left two blanks to be filled. The corresponding Vikrama year, according to calculation, was 1632, equal to A.D. 1575.

The object of the inscription is to record a gift of 2 jilos of land at Thakurāļā by king Pratāpsimha to Ramāpatiśarman of the Bhāradvāja gotra by way of gurudakshinā which shows that Ramāpati was ordained Rājaguru. This Ramāpati, as we shall see from a number of later inscriptions, was a son of Surānanda who figures as writer in some of Ganeśavarman's charters.

The word jilo evidently refers to a land measure but 'the exact measurement it signifies is not known.

The village Țhakurălă, where the granted land lay, is identical with Ţhukrālā in the Simhutā parganā of the Bhaṭṭī wazārat. In line 8 the inscription has Ṭhakurālā maṇḍala, but as is clear in line 11, the land granted was Ṭhakurālā proper. It is possible that Ṭhakurālā was also formerly: headquarters of a pargaṇā of the same name:

The seal and the inscription give the king's name as Pratapasimhabrahman which may be the same as Pratapasimhavarman. These alternative spellings will be found in some later records as well.

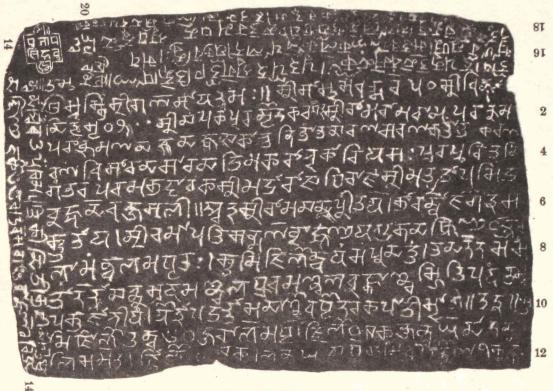

The scribe of the record was one Pandit Ramanu.

No. 21. LAKSHMI NARAYANA TEMPLE PLATE OF PRATAPASIMHA;

SASTRA 51

(Plate XII, B)

This plate belongs to the temple of Lakshmi-Nārāyana at Chamba and is now preserved in the Bhuri Singh Museum there, bearing the catalogue number B, 17. It measures 9\frac{1}{8}" high by 14\frac{3}{4}" broad. It has a seal embossed in the top left corner, with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 17 lines of writing.

The language is partly incorrect Sanskrit and partly Chambyāli. The record is dated in the Śāstra year 51, the 1st day of Māgha, the hibernal solstice or Makara-samkrānti. Since the week day is not mentioned, the date cannot be verified. As it is, it corresponds to Thursday, 29th December, A.D. 1575.

The charter records the grant of a village called Thahnana by king Pratapasimha to Samju Jeu. The boundaries of the donated land are well defined. The inscription informs us that the land granted by this charter formerly belonged to one Bhata Raṇadhīra. Some portions of the land of that village had previously been given to some other persons. They are stated to have been excluded from the present donation. It is not known how the grant ultimately became the property of the temple.

The donated village is identical with Thanenā in the Bharīyā parganā of the Chamba wazārat. Among the other places mentioned in the inscription, Bhiriā, Tadagrā and Ohlī are to be identified with Bharīmhām, Tadagram and Ohlī in the same parganā.

No. 22. LAKSHMI-NARAYANA TEMPLE PLATE OF PRATAPASIMHA, SASTRA 51 (DUPLICATE)

This plate belongs to the temple of Lakshmi-Nārāyaṇa at Chamba and is at present kept in the Bhuri Singh Museum there, its catalogue number being B, 18. It is a very well preserved sheet of copper, measuring 10" high by 12" wide excluding the handle to its left. The handle has a hole pierced in its centre. The top centre of the plate bears a seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 16 lines.

The language is partly incorrect Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The style of composition in the preamble is ornate, though that part is full of mistakes.

As regards the contents of the record, it is virtually a copy of the foregoing charter. The date, the donee, the donated village and many of the other details are exactly the same here as they are found in the previous plate, with one main difference, namely the present record does not exclude some pieces of land as belonging to certain other owners, as the preceding document specifies. It appears that after the present charter had been prepared it was discovered that some fields at the donated village were the personal property of certain individuals, which it was then thought necessary to exclude from the donation. And this necessitated the drawing up of a fresh charter. The present one is thus a discarded copy of the record, while the preceding plate contains it in its revised form.

illustrious Mahārāja Gaņesavarman, son of the illustrious Mahārāja Ānandavarman—the illustrious Pratāpasimhavarman who is highly venerable; who is pre-eminent among men; who is a great patron of Brāhmaṇas; who is devoted to worshipping divinities, honouring dvijas and respecting his elders; who is a protector of the submissive and the distressed; who in truthfulness is a Hariśchandra, in prowess a Bhīma, among archers an Arjuna, in generosity Karṇa, in conduct a Rāmachandrs (and) in the exuberance of intellect a Vidura; who is a very kinsman full of compassion towards his well-wishers; who would in chastisement behead his foes with the sword; who is (truly) a lord of great kings through conserving the eighteen elements (of his kingship); who is an ornament to the house of Mūshaṇa; who is proficient in raising his family to glory—has, out of devotion to the illustricus Lord Vishṇu, given (the village of) Thanaṇa as a rent-free grant to the Brāhman Jaü.

- (L. 8) The demarcation of the boundaries is recorded: In the east the boundary extends as far as the river $(R\bar{a}vi)$; in the south the brook forms the boundary; in the west the limit is below the precipitous slope; (and) in the north the steep precipice marks the limit. Further, the king has granted to Jeu one third share of the water from the Ohli watercourse at Thahnana.
- (L. 11) The king has donated to Jeu the (village of) Thahnana to the same extent of boundaries as was enjoyed by Bhata Ranadhira. The descendants of the illustrious king Pratapasimhavarman are to protect (this gift) and those of the Brahman Jeu are to enjoy it. This is the donation of the illustrious king Pratapasimhavarman, but this pious gift of the king should be protected by all.

No. 23. CHAMBA PLATE OF PRATAPASIMHA'S TIME; V.S. 1636 (Plate XIII)

This plate was in the possession of the $R\bar{a}jaguru$, Pandit Mohan Lal, at Chamba. Although it is slightly damaged and shows a few rents in different places, the inscription on it is almost intact. It measures $11\frac{1}{2}$ high by 14" wide, and has no handle. In its upper left corner it bears a seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription on it covers, all told, 43 lines, of which lines 31-34 appear in the left margin, lines 35-38 run inversely in the top margin, lines 39-41 likewise appear in the top margin, but to the left of the seal, and lines 42-43, in slightly bigger letters, over lines 39-41. There is hardly any space left blank on the plate. Its inscribed side looks crammed with writing, especially because the letters are comparatively small in size.

The language of the record is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī and the composition is faulty, particularly in the $bh\bar{a}sh\bar{a}$ portion where the text is in some places quite unintelligible.

No. 28 of APRAS, NC, 1903-04, p. 8,

It is a document of unusual length for a Chamba copper plate and its contents are equally unusual. Although it is essentially a charter registering a land grant, yet it incidentally records some transactions of a different nature, which are of much historical interest and importance. It is, however, to be regretted that owing to the text being defective, the true import so far as those transactions are concerned remains obscure.

The record opens, after the usual obeisance to Ganeśa, with the date which is the Śāstra year 55 corresponding to Vikrama Samvat 1636 on the Ananta-chaturdaśi day in the bright fortnight of the month of Bhādrapada. Since the week day is not mentioned, the date cannot be verified. As it is, it corresponds to Friday, 4th September. A.D. 1579.

After the date comes the usual preamble from where we gather that the ruler of Chamba at that time was Pratāpasimha, son of Gaņeśavarman and Sāhibadevī. It is then stated that Balabhadradeva, as heir-apparent to Pratāpasimha, conferred the present charter on Pandit Surānanda's son Ramāpati. Balabhadradeva is styled in the present inscription as mahāyuvarāja. As we know from his own charters, he was a son of Vīrabhānadeva and a grandson of Pratāpasimha.

It appears from the foregoing statement that Balabhadradeva was the grantor, but in reality, as is made clear in the subsequent part of the grant, his name has been associated with some donations previously made by his grandfather and great-grandfather. Thus, it is stated that a village named Bhuda in the Sāho parganā had been granted by Ganeśavarman. The donee's name is not mentioned, but he must have been Ramāpati's father Surānanda. Then Pratāpasimha is stated to have donated two villages on two different occasions as gurudakshinā, obviously to his guru Ramāpati,¹ one named Ocha in the Bātharī parganā and the other named Paṇathala in the Pihura parganā. The occasion of this last dakshinā was the Anantachaturdaśī vrata, evidently the very day which is mentioned in the date in the beginning of the record. The object of the present charter is thus to register the grant made on the Ananta-chaturdaśī day as well as the two grants previously made to one and the same donee.²

Then follows a description of the boundaries of each village, which is given in great detail. In the course of the description of Ocha, there is a mention of the king's two ministers having deprived the rightful owner of that village and having on that account been fined and dismissed by the king. The case was tried and decided by the king, while Balabhadra had to do a lot of service in that connection by way of personally going and reinstating the Pandit in his former position. It is chiefly in connection with the narrative of this case that the text is extremely perplexing.

In line 32 there is, to all appearance, reference to the capture or occupation of Bhati and Pihura, but the full significance of this is not clear.

CHAMBA PLATE OF PRATAPASIMHA'S TIME: V. S. 1636.

As regards the various places mentioned in the inscription, most of them are identifiable. Thus the mandalas of Sāho, Bātharī and Pihura are the same as the parganās of Sāho, Bāthrī and Piura, of which Bāthrī is in the Bhaṭṭi wazārat, and the other two in the Chamba wazārat. The village of Bhūḍa or Bhuḍa is identical with the modern Bhuḍā or Bhuḍā, while Ocha and Paṇathala cannot be identified with certainty. Ocha is probably the same as Achhānā. Aghāru, Siuḍi and Sāhlu are identical respectively with the modern Aghārūm, Syūmdī and Sāhlo in the Sāho parganā, while the river Sala is obviously the Sāl. Bhihriā seems to be the same as Bharīmhām in the Bhaḍīmhām parganā of the Chamba wzārat. Mamgalā is in the Sāch parganā of the same wazārat.

- (L. 1) On. Hail! Obeisance to the illustrious Ganesa! In the glorious Sastra year 55, (corresponding to the year) 1636 of the illustrious Vikramāditya, on the Ananta-chaturdasī (14th day) in the bright fortnight of the month of Bhādrapada;
- (L. 2) the illustrious Balabhadradeva, the grand heir-apparent (mahāvuvarāja) of the illustrious P. M. Pratapasimhabrahmadeva who is in residence at the splendid city of Champaka (and) who is a son of the illustrious Paramabhattāraka Ganeśavarman (who was) pre-eminent among men, adorable as a supreme deity. endowed with all virtues. (and) a worshipper of gods. Brāhmanas, and guests: who 1 in prowess is equal to Rāma. Parasurāma and Balarāma : who is expert in vanquishing his foes; who has his heart intensely devoted to the feet of Siva; who is an experienced warrior: who has all the quarters filled with the affluence of his glory resembling the autumnal moon; who is a gem in the dynasty of Mūshana: who is the very forehead mark of the noble family of Saliladeva (i.e., Sahilla-deva); (and) who is a very moon (sprung) from the milky ocean (in the form) of the womb of the illustrious great queen Sahibadevi : bestows (this) wonderful charter of land-grant, adorned by his own lotus-like hand, upon the son² of the illustrious foremost Bhattāchārva Surananda of the Gauda country, who? is pure in respect-of (all) the three families; who (regularly) observes the tri-sandhuā5 rites: (and) who is (ever) intent upon (performing) his sixfold6 duty.
- (L. 7) The grant consists of three villages from different parganās—three extensive lands including all that is attached to them, namely vegetation, water with the right to letting it flow in or out, houses, kitchen-gardens, trees, groves, shelters and the like.
- (L. 8) First, the village named Bhūda, to the extent of all its boundaries in the Śāho parganā, was granted by Gaņeśavarman. (Then) the village called Ocha, to the extent of its boundaries, in the Bātharī parganā, was donated as guru-dakshinā by the illustrious Pratāpasimhavarman. (Lastly) the village known as Paṇathala, in the Pihura parganā, an additional dakshinā consisting of land, given as dakshinā on the

This refers to the dones.

⁴ This alludes to the family-connections from the sides of one's father, mother and wite. Thus the term tri-kulanismala applies to one whose father is of pure descent, mother comes of a noble family and wife is likewise of high birth.

⁶ Namely, morning, midday and evening prayers.

occasion of the termination of the Ananta-chaturdasī vrata as well as of the uninterrupted (execution of the) vow, was conferred by the illustrious Pratāpasimhavarman upon the illustrious Ramāpati, with (the proper ceremony of) libation of water.

- (L. 11) That (grant) may be enjoyed by him (Ramāpati) as well as by his progeny as long as the moon, the sun, the polar star and the universe endure. Whosoever will encroach hereupon, deserves to be punished (and) put to death, (and) may descend into hell! All the aforementioned servants of the king should abide by (this charter). This (gift) is to be enjoyed by (the donee's) sons and son's sons in succession; it is not to be seized, not to be confiscated, not to be disputed, (and) no interference whatsoever should be caused (hereto). By the auhority of the copper-charter granted by us, he (the donee) may dwell (or) cause (others) to dwell (in the donated land), may enjoy (or) let (others) enjoy (it)—he may do whatever he pleases, nobody should offer any obstruction.
- (L. 14) Now the boundaries: The eastern boundary of Bhuda is marked by the stream of Aghāru, the stream being included in Bhuda. There also runs a watercourse above Aghāru. Should the donee so require, he is allowed at any time to conduct that water also to Bhuda. On the south the boundary is formed by the watercourse of Bhuda, the land called Kumdali, lying below and above the channel and extending as far as the chil grove, being included in Bhuda. On the west the boundary-line runs below the road to Siudi, inwards from the badah grove, below the large pit in the brook under the chil grove, also below the path leading to the water course, the water-mill above the river $(S\bar{a}l)$ being included in Bhuda. On the north the boundary lies above the river Sala $(i.e., S\bar{a}l)$, the flat ground of the river-bank being included in Bhuda, below the precipice rising above the houses of Salumi as well as below the stone steps in the land called Sidha beyond the brooklet of Kaithā, inwards from the Nirogā rock beyond the old Sāhlu road above the wet Having defined land, all the land as far as that road being included in Bhuda. Bhuda with this much extent, the illustrious Ganesa (i.e., king Ganesavarman) gave it to the Pandit.
- (L. 19) Now the details also of the land given as guru-dakshinu. One lühadi of partly wet and partly dry land at Bhihriā; one lāhadī of wet land at Bhihriā; the lands called Hathadī, Chaurī and Ohlī at Mamgalā; three kunus of wet land

[•] This refers to the royal donor whose order is obviously recorded here in direct speech.

[•] The original, from here, is in the bhāshā, extremely faulty and in places quite unintelligible. Hence the translation given from here onwards will be found to be more of an attempt at an explanation than a literal rendering.

⁴ The original has simply gurapana bhi, and it is indeed too much of imagination to derive so much sense out of it as we have done. The expression is rather obscure. But for the fact that we know, the inscription has, after mentioning Ganesavarman's gift of Bhuda, stated (text line 9) Pratāpasimha's grant of Ocha as guru dakshinā, we might explain the expression under discussion differently. The term gurupana, which we have equated with guru-dakshinā, in reality means 'rank of guru,' and the expression gurapana bhi in the given context would rather denote 'the king also invested the Pandis with the rank of Guru or Rājaguru.' And possibly it is a passing reference to Ganesávarman's honouring Surānanda with the dignity of Rājaguru. And for Pratāpasimha, we know from another inscription (above Inscription No. 20) that he had Ramāpati as his Guru.

on the Ravi, including the land called Kahola—all these lands were given by Pratapasimha, on the occasion of the Ekādaśi visarjana to Pandit Bhabho. The ministers took Ocha to themselves and enjoyed it for three years. They took the avatralī property of Tatā, consisting of 13 gold mohurs, moveable articles, grain, cattle, six plots of ahadi land and 7 gold mohurs in cash. The king tried the case and delivered judgment. The illustrious Balabhadra himself went and brought the Pandit and brought the Pandit's wife from Balaur. Both the ministers were dismissed. The village and land, which had been misappropriated by the two ministers, were granted by the illustrious king Pratapasimha and the illustrious Balabhadra to the Pandit as a hastodaka grant on the occasion of the Ananta-chaturdasi visarjana. Should in future any descendants of Ravidasa, Chamdi and Bamka prefer claim to the said property, then the ministers' claim will be deemed false. My descendants, the scions of the Solar race, should in future preserve this pious gift of mine. The ministers were fined three hundred gold mohurs, and that sum was given to the Pandits Rāmunu, Sāma and Ratana. If the Pandit be assessed any amount on account of his land, then the king's judgment will prove false. These mohurs realised from the fine are to go to the king. The value of the Pandit's grain was estimated at 18 eighteen thousand copper tamkas. The village and the land were enjoyed without being granted. All my descendants should protect this gift of mine for the Pandit's progeny. Out of the amount of the fine, twenty-five mohurs are to be given to the Pandit and the rest is to go to the king.

- (L. 29) Balabhadra gave the house, the hospice of Ukaradā, including the four wells and the road, and one kunu of land in Choseri, on the occasion of the tulāpurusha ceremony. One lāhadī of land to each. One lāhadī at Mahīla was given by Virabhāna (Vīrabhāna). One kunu of land at Dhiṇaha, one kunu at Muhradī, two jilos at Ṭhakurāhlā, including Lughana and Dhulī, in Dahuradā, were granted when he took Bhatī. When he took Pihura, he gave Paṇathala as guru-dakshinā.
- (L. 32) The illustrious Pratāpasimha donated the village named Ocha on the occasion of the consecration of the temple of Badarīnārāyaṇa. Its boundarles are on the east it includes the whole of the watershed below the shrine of the Nāga Bādhara; on the south it includes the pasture land on both the sides of the Toṭṭhala brook, inwards from Dhanala, the grazing ground being within Ocha, the boundary of the land including the mound of Kulodī, as far as the Durbā road, below the land of Kehnana, including all the land in front of the pool of water which is beyond the former border of the land of Ocha, above Śamāli, as far as the mound of Kulodā and the near bank of the Tadālu brook, inwards from the large parapet, inwards from the stream running beyond that, including all the land up to Dādarā, above the long ridge beneath Kulodī, under the big rock, inwards from the kaith tree; on the south-west¹ the boundary lies behind the path leading to the water-mill and includes the uncultivated land, below the path on the upper descent, behind the Āru field, inwards from the channel, running alongside it; and on the north³ the boundary extends as far as the water-mill situated on the near bank of the Lukhāli stream, behind the upper channel, inwards from the big oak tree, below the path leading to Agolī and Manola, including the water-mill and the watercourse diverted from the stream. The land of Ocha has been defined thus and incorporated in this grant. One field measuring 19 pathas of seed-corn lies in the direction of Agolī within Viśamṭu, above the dilapidated house of Barbāḍā, behind Mehlaṇa, in front of the Ṭoṭṭhala brook, as far as Baghahu ridge, including in its boundary the Bhaoha pasture.

No. 24. DRABILA GRANT OF PRATAPASIMHA; SASTRA 58

This plate was in the possession of a Brāhman, named Duryodhan, in Chamba. The engraving on it is rather carelessly executed, especially in its latter part where it appears to have, moreover, been rubbed off to some extent. It measures $5\frac{3}{4}$ high by 10" wide excluding the handle on its left. It has altogether 16 lines of writing, of which lines 12-15 appear in the left margin while line 16 occurs in the top margin where there is also a seal, now very faint, with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī and the composition is extremely faulty. The text has been left uncorrected because of its intelligibility in spite of the mistakes. The inscription is dated the 9th day of Vaiśākha, the year 58 obviously of the Sastra reckoning. It corresponds to the Vikrama Samvat 1639, and as such the date may be equated with Sunday, 6th May, A.D. 1582, though in the absence of any mention of the weekday it is not quite verifiable. The object of the charter is to register certain gifts by king Pratapasimha to one Bhata Bhaganu, belonging to the Yajurveda and the Bādhula gotra. The chief gift consists of 2½ bhangas of land at the village of Drabila. The donation included additional five lāhadīs of land as well as some houses, etc. Besides, the same donee was a recipient of a house-site in the town of Chamba as well as a specified amount of daily provisions in recognition of his priestly services by way of performing havana and japa on behalf of the king at various shrines. In this connection three temples are mentioned, Chandragupta, Lakshmi-Nārāyana and Bamśigopāla. Of these, the first is a Siva temple and the name Chandragupta applies to the linga therein. They are all at Chamba.

The particular village of Drabilā is said to be within the Sāch pargaṇā of the Chamba wazārat, though the list of villages at my_disposal does not show any village of the name of Drabilā in that pargaṇā. It may, however, be pointed out that there are several villages of that name within the state of Chamba, belonging to different pargaṇās.

- (L. 8) When the illustrious king Pratapasimha would perform havana at the temples of the gods Chandragupta and Lakshmi-Narayana, Bhata Bhaganu should then perform, on behalf of the illustrious king, two havanas, (and tell) four mālās. As honorarium for this Bhata Bhaganu is to be supplied with the daily provisions of ? tamkas in cash, 3 seers of fine rice, ½ seer of pulses 2 sīrsāhīs of salt and 1 seer of ghee.
- (L. 11) The descendants of the illustrious Pratāpasimha are to maintain his pious gift for the family of Bhaṭa Bhāgaṇu.

I This syllable appears above the line; evidently it was omitted first and was supplied later on.

² It is considered unnecessary to add here a translation of the conventional epithets attached to the name of the king especially when most of them have already been translated above, see p. 67

(L. 12) The illustrious Pratāpasimha has given as śāsana one house-site in the town of Chambā to the priest Bhata Bhāganu for the daily performance of go-dūhana-mālā at (the temple of) Chandragupta and of havana at (the temple of) Baméīgopāla.

No. 25. MANGALOA PLATE OF PRATAPASIMHA; SASTRA 58 (Plate XIV, A)

This plate was found in the possession of a Brāhman, Rām Chand by name, at the village of Mangaloā in the Loh Tikrī purganā of the Churāh wazārat. It measures 5½" high by 8" wide. It has a seal, crudely engraved, in the top left corner with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription runs into 14 lines, of which line 11 runs inversely in the top margin, lines 12-13 appear in the left margin and line 14 in the right.

The language of the record is Chambyālī with a few expressions intended to be in Sanskrit. The record is dated in the year 58, referring undoubtedly to the Sāstra reckoning, on the 13th day of Vaiśākha, without mentioning the week-day. The corresponding Vikrama Samvat must be 1639, and the date may thus be equated with Thursday, 10th May, A.D. 1582.

The object of the charter is to record the grant of a village named Mamglaua, by king Pratāpasimha to the temple of Śrī-Nārāyana by which is meant the temple of Lakshmī-Nārāyana at the city of Chamba. It is further stated that the village was placed under the care of three individuals, Hamīra, Hedo and Chipu by name, who were practically to enjoy the donated village. Each of them had to pay to the temple a specific tax both in kind and in cash.

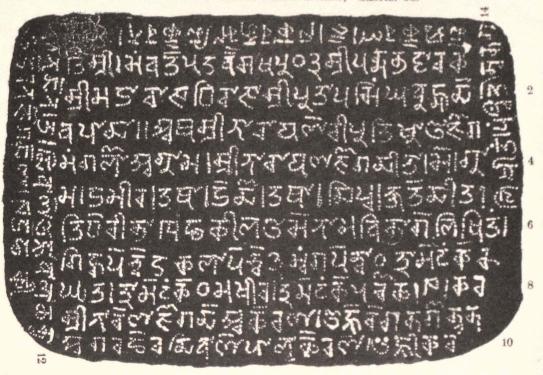

The donated village is obviously the same as Mangaloa, the provenance of the plate.

The writer of the charter was one Pandit Durugu.

- (L. 1) Om. Prosperity! In the year 58, on the 13th day of Vaisākha, the illustrious P.M. Pratapasimhabrahmadeva has bestowed the village Mamgalaua on (the temple of) Lakshmi-Narayana on the occasion of its renovation. That village has been entrusted to Hamira. Hedo and Chipu.
- The details of the agreement entered into are specified as follows: (Hamira is to give) 8 pedas of wheat, 3 pedas of peas, 1 peda of green-grams and four copper tamkas: (Hedo is to give) 1 seer of ghee and 1 copper tamka; (and Chipu is to give) } seer of honey and 5 copper tamkas in cash. This tax should be regularly paid to the Lakshmi-Nārāvana (temple).
- (L. 9) The king should take care of their children in future and they should pay the tax without fail. If they continue tilling the land and fail to pay the tax, then the king may resume the land from them and entrust it to others. Such is the agreement.

No. 26. CHAMBA PLATE OF PRATAPASIMHA; SASTRA 62 (Plate XIV, B)

This plate belonged to the Purchit. Badu Dido by name, at Chamba, and is now preserved in the Bhuri Singh Museum there, bearing the catalogue number B. 19. It measures 71" high by 12" wide including the handle on its left, which has a hole pierced in its centre. It has no seal. The inscription covers 20 lines in all of which lines 15-17 occur in the left margin, lines 18-19 run inversely in the top margin and line 20, which is a short one, appears on the handle.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī and the composition is very faulty. The text has been left uncorrected, as the sense is quite clear throughout.

The record is dated the 20th day of Vaisākha in the year 62, which plainly refers to the Sastra reckoning and as such corresponds to the Vikrama Samvat 1643 and may be equated with Tuesday, 17th May, A.D. 1586.

¹ That is, the king should preserve the grant for them.

No. 7 of APRAS, NC, 1906-07, p. 8.

[•] No. 7 of APRAS, NC, 1906-07, p. 8.
• This is what Dr. Vogel reads and accordingly concludes that the present is the latest known charter of Pratapasimha (see HPHS, Vol I, p. 299). An examination of the sign for the figure read as 6 will show that it answers more to 4 than to 6 though for either it appears somewhat distorted. In fact the unusual form of the figure 4 seen in No. 25, line 7 and No. 37 line 1 resembles the one in question. I would read the number of the year as 42 rather than as 62, not so much for the aforementioned reason, as for the following two considerations: First, Badu Amno, the father of the donee in this grant is obviously identical with Badu Amno figuring in one (No. 12) of Ganesavar.nan's grants, the date of which corresponds to A.D. 1521-22. The difference of time between the father and the son would be that of 64 years in the case of the date of the present charter being the year 62, which is abnormally long whereas it would be that of 44 years in the event of the date of the present inscription being the year 42, which is not so abnormal. Secondly, in line 9 of the present document it is stated that Pratapasimha made the grant at his father's instance, which indicates that his father was alive then. It will be either A.D. 1566 or A.D. 1586 according as the number of the year in question is read either as 42 or as 62. The former appears more likely. It may be recalled that according to Dr. Vogel Pratapasimha's father Ganesavarman died in A.D. 1559 (see HPHS, Vol. I, p. 297). This conclusion is based evidently on the fact that A.D. 1559 (or A.D., 1553 according to me) is the last year known from his dated records. It may, however, be pointed out that four (Nos. 16-19) of his records bear no date. It is quite likely that some of them may be later than A.D. 1559 and that Ganesavarman was still living in AlD. 1568 as shown above. According to me thus, the present inscription instead of being the latest, is the earliest of Pratapasimha's charters.

The object of the inscription is to record a land-grant made by king Pratana. simha, at his father's suggestion, to one Badu Ratana, son of Badu Amno and grandson of Badu Gayādhara of the Bhāradvāja gotra. One Badu Amno figures as one of the two donees in a grant by Ganeśavarman (No. 12). Possibly he is identical with Badu Amno, the father of Ratana. Similarly the latter's grandfather Gava. dhara is mentioned as one of the two grantees in a grant by Anandavarman (No. 10). The gift, it is stated, was made on the Ganga (the Ganges) at Haridvara (Hardwar), from which it is clear that the donor had gone to that holy place on pilgrimage. The donation consisted of several parcels of land situated at several villages, namely Mehlä, Suroda, Chambi, Rajera, Khadera and Kilo or Keloda. Of these the first is the headquarters of the Mehla parganā. Suroda and Chambi are identical with Sarod and Chambi in the Sach pargana, and Rajera is in the Panila parganā, all in the Chamba wazārat. Khaderā is probably the same as Chhaderā in the Panila pargana, whereas it has not been possible to identify Kiloda or Keloda, though it is presumably the same as Kuloda or Kulodi mentioned in another inscription of Pratapasimha (No. 23, text lines 34-36).

The writer of the grant was one Chhaju.

No. 27. CHAMBA PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V.S. 1646

(Plate XV)

This plate was also in the possession of the Rājaguru, Pandit Mohan Lal, at Chamba. It is now kept in the Bhuri Singh Museum there, and bears the catalogue number B, 20. It measures 11" high by 14" wide. It has no handle and no seal. Instead of the latter it has the word sahī engraved in Nāgarī characters in the top left-hand corner. This means 'correct' and corresponds to the word drishtam which occurs elsewhere in earlier documents and means 'seen'. Both the expressions convey the sense that the document concerned has been inspected by the donor and found correct—thus issued under the proper authority and with the requisite approval. The document runs into 27 lines, of which lines 22-24 appear in the left margin, lines 25-26 in the top margin and line 7 in the right margin.

The language of the record is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyali. The composition is fairly correct.

The record is dated in the Sāstra year 65, corresponding to the Vikrama Samvat 1646, in the month of Vaiśākha, on Wednesday, the 3rd day of the bright fortnight — Akshaya-tritīyā — the nakshatra being Hastā. The date is irregular inasmuch as the week-day on the said tithi was Monday and not Wednesday. Moreover, the mention of Hastā nakshatra in connection with the Akshaya-tritīyā is clearly a mistake; for, the Akshaya-tritīyā occurs on the conjunction of Krittikā and Rohinī. The date may be taken to correspond to Monday, 7th April, A.D. 1589.

^a Mr. K.T. Telang was probably the first to recognise such a denotation of the expression drishtam occurring at the commencement of a charter (JBBRAS, Vol. X, p. 360, note). Bühler and Hultzsch amplified the same view (BI, Vol. I, p. 9 f., Vol. VI, p. 88, n. 2). Fleet preferred a different explanation, treating it as an auspicious formula (CII, Vol. III, p. 240, n. 2). Kielhorn first accepted Fleet's view (EI, Vol. III, p. 259 and n. 7), but later changed to that of Bühler and Hultzsch (EI, Vol. IX, p. 268 and n. 6).

It records a gift of land by king Balabhadravarmadeva to Pandit Ramapati alias Pūrņānanda, son of Bhattāchārya Surānanda, of the Bhāradvāja gotra. The gift is meant to be guru-dakshinā, which shows that Ramapati became the Guru of Balabhadra. The donated land lay in the Udaipur parganā of the Chamba wazārat, as is clear from the boundary marks. Tadoli, mentioned to be on the south of the gift land, is a village, 4 miles from Chamba, on the left bank of the river Rāvi, while Sajilā and Dāru, now Sajlā and Duāru, are a little above Tadoli within a mile or so, on the west as stated. The other places are not identifiable.

The writer of the grant was Ramāpati himself, while it was written in the house of one Upādhyāya Nārāyana in the presence of the royal donor and a number of other witnesses. It will be seen that Ramāpati figures as writer in most of Balabhadra's charters.

The word sahi, which appears on the top, just over Ganesaya in the first line, is Persian sahih, meaning 'correct', 'accurate', or 'to sign.' Here it refers to the charter, implying that the latter has been seen and found corre or approved by the royal donor.

That is, at the time when the king formally accepted Ramapati as his guru. The mantra-grahana or pûjd-mantra-grahana ceremony is so called because on that occasion the preceptor enjoins on his disciple a particular mode of performing daily worship and also whispers into his ear a special guru-mantra to be repeated by him daily. The disciple is expected to keep the mantra as a secret, even though it be such a guru-dakshipa. The gift given to the preceptor on such an occasion is called guru-dakshipa.

a seal embossed in its top left corner with a Nagari legend in three lines, containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 13 lines, of which line 12 appears in the left margin, while line 13 runs inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyali, with only a few mistakes.

The record is dated in the Sastra year 66, corresponding to the V. S. 1647, on the 12th day of the dark fortnight of the month of Phalguns. The week-day is not mentioned. The date may correspond to Friday, 12th March, A. D. 1591.

It records the gift of the village Suhrā by king Balabhadravarman to two Brāhmans, Jumo and Ghaṇasu by name. The donated area is stated to be situated between the brooks of Sajilā and Dāru. These last two are the names of villager, also mentioned in the foregoing inscription, now called Sajlā and Duāru. The gift village is identical with Surem, the provenance of the plate. Bhadruhā is now known as Bhadrohi and is the name of a jungle or an uncultivated land nearby there.

The writer of the grant was Surananda's son Ramapati.

No. 29. CHAMBA PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1648

(Plate XVI, B)

This plate³ was also owned by the $R\bar{a}jaguru$, Pandit Mohan Lal, at Chamba It measures 8" high by $11\frac{1}{2}$ " wide excluding the handle on its left. It has a seal in the top centre with a Nāgarī⁴ legend in three lines containing the king's name. There are, all told, twenty lines of writing, of which lines 15-16 appear in the left margin, lines 17-19 are, so to say, half-lines and run inversely in the top margin, while line 20, consisting only of the expression $sr\bar{i}$ -subham-astu occurs on the handle.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The record is dated in the Sāstra year 67, corresponding to V.S. 1648, on the 12th day of the dark fortnight of the month of Bhādrapada. The week-day is not mentioned. The date may correspond to Saturday, 4th September, A.D. 1591.

The object of the inscription is to record the gift of the village Jhahvāra to two Brāhman brothers named Pirathï and Kuśahari, sons of Narahari, of the Gautama gotra, hailing from Gayā. The same village is stated to have previously been enjoyed by a prince named Chattarasimgha and donated by king Pratāpasimha. Further details in this connection are lacking. The same village is mentioned also in the earliest known grant of Balabhadra (No. 27), but it has not been identified. The name, however, suggests it to be the same as Hobār, the headquarters of a parganā of the same name in the Bhatti wazārat.

⁴ No. 30 of APRAS, NC, 1903-04, p. 8.
⁴ It may be observed that the mangala at the end, namely $ri-kubham-astu appearing on the handle, considered to be the last line of the inscription, is also in Nagari characters.

As regards the boundaries, it is stated that they are the same as defined at the time when the village was given by Pratapasimha.

The charter was written by Surottama's son, Ramapati.

It is to be enjoyed as long as the moon, the sun, the stars and the universe (endure). Whosoever, whether of my family or anybody else, will encroach hereupon, may descend into hell.
- (L. 11) Here the extent of the land donated at Jhahvāra is the same as (was formerly) enjoyed by the prince Chattarasimgha (Chattar Singh). Jhahvāra is granted as a śāsana in the same manner and with the same details of boundaries as was given by the illustrious Pratāpasimha by means of a title deed. Gayāsarī Pirathī's sons and grandsons who will come after him are to enjoy (this gift).

The singular number is grammatically incorrect, as the donees are two though both of them are brothers. The mistake is noticeable in the case of two donees in another charter (No. 28 above).

No. 30. JUNGAL PLATE OF BALABHADRA: V. S. 1648

This plate was in the possession of one Ghinku of the Jungal village in the Sāho pargaṇā. It measures 7½" high by 10½" wide excluding the handle on its left. It has a seal with a Nāgarī legend in three lines containing the king's name. The inscription covers 18 lines of which lines 13-15 occur in the left margin and lines 16-18 run inversely in the top margin.

The language, as usual, is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The record is dated in the Śāstra year 67, corresponding to V.S. 1648, on the 12th day of the bright fortnight of the month of Āśvina, the week-day being not given. It may correspond to Monday, 20th September, A. D. 1591.

The object of the inscription is to register the gift of the village Jola by king Balabhadravarman to a Brāhman named Khidara Ṭamdyamtu. The latter name is an al, now known as Ṭamdetu. The donee belonged to the Kāśyapa gotra. Though the grant is stated to be a hastodaka one, still the donee was to pay certain taxes both in kind and in cash. Besides, he had no right on the forest product of the donated area, that being reserved to the state.

The donated village is now called Jūml and is in the Sāho parganā. Nigailā is the same as Naghelā in that very parganā. Bharādī could not be identified. The village Jungal, the provenance of the plate, I think, is the same as Jūml, Jola of the inscription, though none of these names is to be found in the list of villages at my disposal. The charter was written by Ramāpati, son of Surottama. Surottama is the same as Surānanda.

No. 31. LAKSHMI-NARAYANA TEMPLE PLATE OF BALABHADRA;

V. S. 1649

(Plate XVII)

This plate belongs to the temple of Lakshmi-Näräyana at Chamba proper and is now kept in the Bhuri Singh Museum there, bearing the catalogue number B, 21. It measures $10\frac{1}{2}$ high by 15 wide. There is a gap in the middle of its left margin where the handle seems to have been broken off. In its upper left corner it has the seal with a Nägari legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 23 lines, of which lines 18-20 appear in the left margin, line 20 being a short one and mostly destroyed, and lines 21-23 run inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The record is dated in the Śāstra year 68, the Vikrama Samvat 1649, on the 3rd day of the bright fortnight of the month of Chaitra. The week-day has not been mentioned, hence the date cannot be verified precisely, though it may be taken to correspond to Monday, 6th March, A. D. 1592.

The charter records the king's donation of some plots of lands to a Brāhman named Risha, son of Sivadāsa, of the Bhāradvāja gotra. The lands lay in different villages, some of which can be identified. Thus Bhadrama is the same as Bhadram in the Rājnagar parganā. Jakharvādī is identical with Jukhrādī and Śailā with Sailā, both in the Panjlā parganā.

The grant was written by Ramapati, son of Surananda.

No. 32. LAKHALI GRANT OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1649

(Plate XVIII, A)

This plate was in the possession of three brothers, Pandits Sohnu, Hākam and Agrā, at Chamba proper. It measures $8\frac{1}{2}$ " high by $13\frac{1}{2}$ " wide including the handle on its left. In the top left corner of the plate there is the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 22 lines in all, of which lines 13-14 appear in the left margin, lines 15-18 are short ones and occur on the handle, lines 19-21 run inversely in the top margin and line 22 in the right margin, the whole of the available space on the obverse of the plate having thus been filled up by the engraving.

The language of the record, for the most part, is Sanskrit, a few lines being in Chambyālī. The preamble, which usually comprises epithets of the king, is much shorter in the present instance than that found in most other charters of Balabhadra.

The record is dated in the Sastra year 68, the Vikrama Samvat 1649, on the 12th day of the bright fortnight of the month of Ashādha. The week-day is not given. The date may correspond to Sunday, 11th June, A. D. 1592, The inscription records that the village of Lakhali in the Sāhū mandala, which had formerly been given to one Sarasi Mādho, was granted to a Brāhman named Nārasimha, son of Sūryadāsa, of the Gautama gotra, apparently with the consent of its former owner, Sarasi Mādho, who is stated to have handed over the village and the title-deed to Nārasimha. The implications of this transaction are not clear, but it may be presumed that Sarasi Mādho was childless and bequeathed the village which he had held as sāsana to Nārasimha who might have been related to him in some way and that the king simply signified his approval of the bequest by means of the present charter.

The Sāhū mandala refers to the Sāho parganā wherein is included the village of Lakhlı or Lakhalı.

The writer of the charter is Surottama's son Ramapati.

B .- CHAMBA PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S 1649.

No. 33. CHAMBA PLATE OF BALABHADRA: V. S. 1649

(Plate XVIII, B)

This plate is not included in the collection of inscriptions enlisted by Dr. J. Ph. Vogel, nor are there any notes concerning this to be found in the manuscript material left by bim. It is thus plain that the present plate was recovered subsequently. It is said to have been in the possession of Purohit Badu Dido who also owned the Chamba plate of Pratāpasimha, Šāstra 62, dealt with above (No. 26). The newly discovered plate was examined by myself in the summer of 1939 when I also secured photographs of it. It measures 9" high by about 13" wide excluding the pierced handle on its left. In the top centre of the plate there is the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription covers 19 lines in all, of which the last three run in the left margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyali. The record is dated in the Sastra year 68, the Vikrama Samvat 1649, on the 11th day of the dark fortnight of the month of Chaitra, which may correspond to Tuesday, 17th April, A.D. 1593, though in the absence of any mention of the week-day in the document the given date cannot be verified exactly. The charter is peculiar inasmuch as it does not as usual register any land-grant but records the conferment of priesthood (purohiti that is paurohitya) on a Brāhman, named Ratana, the foremost Badu, son of Ano, belonging to the Bhāradvāja gotra. The ceremony of conferment was, after the fashion of common ceremonial grants, preceded by libation of water (hastodaka). The investiture was thus more in the nature of a donation. It has further been specified that, as a purohita, Ratana was to inherit all those customary emoluments and advantages which the purchita in Pratapasimha's time had enjoyed, and that this gift was to be reserved for Ratana's descendants, which in other words neans that the post of priesthood was intended to be hereditary. This, coupled with the fact that the present title-deed was discovered in his possession, makes Purohit Badu Dido a direct descendant of Ratana.

The holy Gopāla has been cited as a witness to the donation, and that refers to the deity of the temple of Bamśī-Gopāla at Chamba.

Ratana of the present charter is plainly identical with that figuring as donee in the aforementioned Chamba plate of Pratāpasimha, which as has already been pionted out, was discovered like vise in the possession of Purohit Badu Dīdo. That plate gives the name of his father and grandfather as Amno and Gayādhara respectively. Amno and Gayādhara again appear as grantees, the former in a grant by Ganeśavarman (No. 12) and the latter in that of Ānandavarman (No. 10). This indicates how Ratana's family had all along been in the good books of the royal house of the Chamba State.

There is one thing more in connection with the conferment ceremony. It is stated that the hastodaka was performed jointly by Balabhadra and Vāsudeva. The identity of this Vāsudeva is not known. The Rājaguru, Pt. Thakur Das, suggested to me that he in all probability was a son of Balabhadra. No other record makes any mention of him, so that his exact relationship with Balabhadra cannot be determined. Can it be that he was a younger brother of Balabhadra, assuming that the two brothers were named after Balabhadra (i.e., Balarāma) and Vāsudeva (i.e., Krishna), the gods, of whom, as is well known, the former was the elder brother of the latter? In modern times, at least, it is sometimes found that some parents take a fancy to naming their children in that fashion.

Towards the end three of the customary verses have been cited, but the composer has eleverly avoided all reference to a land grant, choosing the variant reading brahmavrittiharas-tathā (haret-tu yah) instead of harech-cha vasundharām. The writer was Ramāpati, son of Surānanda. It may be recalled that this Pandit Ramāpati was the Rājaguru of Balabhadra and was responsible for composing most of the numerous charters of Balabhadra.

No. 34. CHAMBA PLATE OF BALABHADRA: V. S. 1650

This plate was found in the possession of Dogrā Bholā at Chamba proper. It measures $8\frac{1}{2}$ high by $12\frac{1}{2}$ wide excluding the handle on its left. Half of the handle appears to have broken off. In the top left corner there is the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 23 lines in all, of which lines 15-16 appear in the left margin, lines 17-19 and lines 20-23 run inversely in the top margin. The last four lines are very small, being thrust in the top left corner beside the seal.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The charter refers itself to the reign of Balabhadra and is dated in the Śāstra year 69, the Vikrama Samvat 1650, in the month of Jycshtha, on the 7th day of the dark fortnight. This may correspond to Saturday, 12th May, A. D. 1593. The inscription records the king's grant of a village named Drabilā in the Pamjila mandala to three Brāhmans, Pitho, Malika and Mamgu by name, of the Kāśyapa gotra. The donees were apparently brothers. It is stated that the donated village was formerly held by one Chakalāla Bhikhārī who is further on mentioned as one of the witnesses to the demarcation of the boundaries of the granted area. The record ends with the statement that Mamgu and Malika gave one atu of land to Pitho over and above his rightful share, thereby presumably showing respect to the eldest. The grant was not an absolute charity, because the recipients were required to pay a tax of seven pidas of grain out of their first crop to the king, probably once a year.

The writer of the grant was Ramapati.

No. 35. CHAMBA PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1651 (Plate XIX, A)

This plate³ was also in the possession of Purohit Badu Dīdo at Chamba. It measures 8% high by 12% wide excluding the pierced handle on its left. In its top left corner it bears the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription covers 17 line of which line 14 appears in the left margin and lines 15-17 run inversely in the top margin.

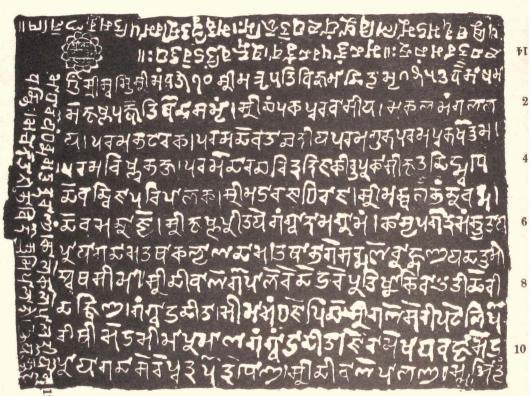

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The record is dated in the Śāstra year 70, the Vikrana Samvat 1651, in the month of Pausha, on the 12th day of the bright fortnight, which may correspond to Saturday, 14th December, A. D. 1594.

B.—CHAMBA PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1652.

The charter refers itself to the reign of king Balabhadra, but registers a grant of some lands by Queen Dharmadevi to Purohita Ratanaśarman of the Bhāradvāja gotra. The donation comprised four kunus of land, of which two kunus lay at Suroda, one at Bhadrama and one at Maihilā. This last one kunu, it is stated, had been given to Ratana by the illustrious Vīrabhāna on an occasion of the Tulāpurusha ceremony, while the one kunu at Bhadrama had been given on the occasion of the śuddha-śrāddha¹ of the illustrious Vīrabhāna. From this it follows that Balabhadra's father Vīrabhāna had in his life time made the Tulāpurusha gift, one of the sixteen mahādānas² and that by the time of the present charter he had passed away.

The donee Ratanaśarman is identical with Ratana who figures likewise as grantee in two other charters also (Nos. 26 and 33), and of whom we have already spoken above (pp. 74 and 87).

The villages of Suroda, Bhadrama and Maihilā, where the donated plots of land lay belong to different praganās. The first of these is identical with Sarodi, also called Sarod, in the Sāch parganā. It is also mentioned in two other charters (Nos. 26 and 31). The second one is the same as Bhadram in the Rājnagar parganā, and also occurs in another charter (No. 31). Maihilā is the same as Mehlā, the headquarters of a parganā of the same name, which is mentioned also in another record (No. 26).

The writer of the charter was Surananda's son Ramapati.

No. 36. CHAMBA PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1652

(Plate XIX, B)

This plate was owned by Koluā Atrā, a pujārī, at Chamba proper. It measures 8½" high by 11½" wide. It had a handle on its left, which is now almost completely broken off. In its upper left corner it has the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. There are altogether 15 lines of writing on it, of which lines 12-13 are in the left margin, and lines 14-15 appear inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The inscription, refers itself to the reign of Balabhadra and is dated in the Sastra year 71, the Vikrama Samvat 1652, in the month of Vaisākha, on the 10th day of the dark fortnight which may correspond to Tuesday, 25th March, A.D. 1595. The charter registers the king's grant of the village Gamgvā or Gamgvāha to three Brāhmans, probably brothers, named Prāyāgadāsa, Kalyānadāsa and Bhāgesarman, of the Kāśyapa gotra. The occasion of the gift was the consecration ceremony performed by the king at the temple of Gopāla, now called Bamśigopāla. This shows that some repairs or renovation had been done to that temple and the completion of the work occasioned the ceremony when the present gift was given as a dakshinā. It is indicated in the inscription that the donated village was formerly granted by This is borne out by the king Ganeśavarman to a Brāhman named Rāma. fact that among Ganeśavarman's charters there is actually one registering such a grant, namely Ganguya grant of Ganesavarman (No. 18), Ganguya of that record being the same as Gamgvā or Gamgvāha of the present one, to be identified with the modern Gugamh as has already been shown above (p. 55). For the extent of the boundaries of the donated village, the present charter refers to the aforementioned grant of Ganesavarman and adds that they were the same as defined therein. It has, however, not been made clear as to what happened to Rama, the former owner of the yillage, and how the same village came to be re-granted. Nor is there any indication to show that Rāma was somehow related to the donees mentioned in the present charter. Even his gotra is not specified in Ganesavarman's grant where he figures as donee. Can it be that he died childless and his property as a brahmadeya being not revertible to the State, was transferred to other Brahmans, namely Prayagadasa, Kalyanadasa and Bhagesarman?

The writer of the charter was Ramapati.

No. 37. SAILA GRANT OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1655 (Plate XX, A)

This plate was found in the possession of one Narsingh Bayal Mangaleru. It measures $10\frac{1}{4}$ " high by $13\frac{1}{4}$ " wide including the pierced handle on its left. In the top centre it has the usual seal with a Nagari legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 26 lines in all, of which lines 17-20 appear in the left margin, line 20 being a short one and running on the handle, and lines 21-26 run inversely in the top margin. The last six lines are, so to say, half-lines, lines 21-23 being separated from lines 24-26 by the seal in the centre.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyāli. The record is dated in the Śāstra year 74, the Vikrama Samvat 1655, in the month of Vaiśākha, on the 7th day of the dark fortnight, which may correspond to Monday, 17th April, A. D. 1598. The object of the charter is to record the king's gift of a village called Śaila to a Brāhman, named Harigaṇaśarman, son of Kehlaṇa, of the Kāśyapa gotra. The boundaries of the donated area have been well defined. Besides the village, some houses at Chamba proper were also given by the king to the same donee.

The donated village Saila is probably the same as Sailā mentioned in the Lakshmī-Nārāyaṇa temple plate of Balabhadra; V. S.1649 (No. 31). It will be seen from that record that a plot of land at that village was granted to a Brāhman, Risha by name, along with several other lands. It follows, therefore, that the plot previously donated was excluded from the village donated by the present charter. As has already been shown, the village Śaila or Śailā is to be identified with Sail in the Panjlā pargaṇā. Some of the boundary villages can also be identified Thus Bhoida, Praila and Dalanāṇā appear to be the same as Bhyod, Parel and Dilgeṇā respectively all of which are in the very Panjlā pargaṇā.

The writer of the charter was Surānanda's son Ramāpati.

No. 3 of APRAS, NC, 1906,07, p. 8, where the reading of the Sastra year is given as 76, of course, with query. As will presently be seen, the correct reading is 7. At the same place, it has likewise been suggested to the gift village of Saila belongs to the Kalandra pargana, whereas it is now shown actually to be included in the Panjla pargana. The number of lines of the text as stated there will also be found different from the one given here. The difference is, however, only apparent and will readily be perceived by comparing the illustration with the text of lines 21-26 which have been counted there as line 21-23.

The sign for the numeral 4 is somewhat unusual, though it certainly cannot represent any other numeral than that. The same form for the numeral 4 is seen again below in line 24 in numbering a verse.

No. 38. CHAMBA PLATE OF BALBHADRA; V. S. 1656

This plate was found in the possession of Purchit Mansā at Chamba proper and is now kept in the Bhuri Singh Museum there, bearing the catalogue number B, 22. It is rather an unusually big sheet of copper, measuring 7½" to 8¼" high by 18" wide, excluding the handle on its left. In the top corner it has the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. It has, all told, 16 lines of writing on it, of which lines 13-14 are in the left margin and lines 15-16 run inversely in the top margin.

No. 32 of APRAS,NC, 1903-04, p. 8,

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyāli. The document is dated in the Śāstra year 75, the Vikrama Samvat 1656, in the month of Āshāḍha, on the 2nd day of the dark fortnight, which may be equated with Thursday, 31st May, A.D. 1599. In respect of the centents, the present charter is similar to the Chamba plate of Balabhadra; V. S. 1649 (No. 33), since both of these record the appointment of a family priest. In the present instance the recipient of the honour is a Brāhman called Iśvaraśarman, son of Mādhava, of the Atri gotra, who, it appears from the details given in the record, was a priest attached to the royal family in the time of Pratāpasimha as well. The present charter does not specify any special occasion of the conferment. Nor does it mention any gift to be enjoyed by the grantee beyond stating that he was to continue earning and enjoying as he used to do in Pratāpasimha's time. That this was to last as long as the universe endures shows that in this case, too, the title of priesthood was meant to be hereditary. Thus Purohit Mansā who owned the present plate must be a direct descendant of Iśvaraśarman, the original recipient.

The charter was written by Surānanda's son Ramāpati.

No. 39. CHAMBA PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1656 (Plate XX. B)

This plate was possibly also in the possession of Purohit Mansa at Chamba proper, who owned the preceding one, though there is no definite information as regards that. It measures about $10\frac{3}{4}$ high by 12 wide and has no handle. From its lower right corner a small bit has broken off, and as a consequence thereof two or three aksharas have been lost. In the top left corner of the plate there is the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription covers 21 lines in all, of which lines 17-18 appear in the left margin and lines 19-21 run inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The preamble of this record exhibits a considerable change so far as the epithets applied to the king are concerned. Being conventional as usual, the new epithets do not enlighten us much with regard to the king's real achievements, though they reflect some poetic merit on the part of the composer through his grandiloquent style much appreciated in those days. The record is dated in the Śāstra year 75, the Vikrama Samvat 1656, in the month of Āshādha, on the 10th day of the dark fortnight, which may be equivalent to Thursday, 7th June, A. D. 1599, that was thus just a week after the foregoing charter had been issued.

The present charter records that the king took a plot of land from the Brāhman Iśvaraśarman of the Atri gotra at the village of Sahraula for making a garden and a tank there, and that in lieu thereof he gave two extensive fields to that Brāhman. The smaller of the two lay in the very same village of Sahraula, while the bigger was in another village called Chināloi, where the Brāhman also received a house-site along with a kitchen-garden and a threshing-floor. From the details given, it appears that the Brāhman was given nearly twenty times as much land as was taken from him. He is to be identified with the recipient of the foregoing charter.

The garden and the tank, referred to in the inscription as then being in contemplation, subsequently did come into being, for they still exist at that village as the property of the State. The village of Sahraula is only about two miles from Chamba, being the same as Sarol in the Rājnagar pargaṇā. It has not been possible to identify Chināloi or Chinālui, though apparently it is to be sought in the same Rājnagar pargaṇā.

No. 40. SAKLA PLATE OF BALABHADRA; SASTRA 75

This plate was discovered in the possession of a Brāhman, Padmā by name, at the village of Saklā in the Sāho³ parganā. The left side of the plate, where there is a handle, is narrower than the right side. It measures thus $5\frac{1}{4}$ " to $8\frac{1}{4}$ " high by 10 $\frac{1}{4}$ " wide including the handle. The engraving is not well executed. The seal, too, is not properly shaped. It is comparatively small in size, though it has the usual form of a rosette. The legend in its centre is indistinct and seems to read érī-Bala, while each of the two letters bhadra appears to be engraved within a petal, the characters being Nāgarī. The inscription covers 17 lines in all, of which lines 13-15 appear in the left margin and lines 16-17 run inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The record is dated simply in the Sāstra year 75, on the 27th day of Asoja, that is the month Áévina. The corresponding Vikrama Sanivat would be 1656. The equivalent of this date in the Christian era may be Sunday, 28th October, A. D. 1599.

The object of the inscription is to record the king's grant of a village named Raulika to a Brāhman called Sado, son of one Kukyala Jio. From the details in the bhāshā portion, it appears that the donee had formerly shared the grant with his elder brother, and that he was to pay a tax of two pidas of grain annually, one pida from the first crop and one from the second crop, though the grant is termed as hastodaka-śāsana which usually indicates 'a tax-free gift.' Some bhāshā expressions are not intelligible.

The charter was composed by Surottama's son Ramapati.

² Translated literally it would mean: pidas nil, pathas 6, in words, six manis'. The terms poina and mani are evnonymous.

In Dr. Vogel's manuscript the name of the pargand is stated to be Panjla, but the list of vinuses does not show any village of the name of Sakla in that pargand, while one is found in the Saho pargand.

No. 41. LAKSHMI-NARAYANA TEMPLE PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1664

This plate² belongs to the temple of Lakshmi-Narayana at Chamba proper and is now preserved in the Bhuri Singh Museum there, its catalogue number being B, 23. It measures 8½" high by 12" wide. It had a handle on its left, which has almost entirely broken off. Some letters of the inscription ran also on the handle. They, too, have been lost. Small bits have chipped off from the corners of the plate, except the top right corner. The chipping off at the lower corners has resulted in the loss of two or three syllables. In its top left corner the plate has the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 19 lines, of which lines 14-15 appear in the left margin, line 16 occurs on the handle and lines 17-19 run inversely in the top margin. It cannot be ascertained whether the handle originally contained more lines. Even the extant line of writing on the handle, consisting only of a few letters, has only the signs of the mātrās preserved, the lower portions of the syllables having been destroyed.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The charter is dated in the Śāstra year 83, the Vikrama Samvat 1664, in the month of Bhādrapada, on the 7th day of the bright fortnight. The date may be equivalent to Wednesday, 19th August, A. D. 1607.

The inscription records the king's grant of some land at a village called Pura, Pura or Pūri in the Śaho mandala to a Brahman named Baradani Gopi of the Kasyapa gotra.

The Śāho mandala resers to the Sāho parganā, but no village of the name of Pura, Purā, or Pūri is to be found there. The villages mentioned along the boundaries, namely Parautā or Paharautā and Haiṭā, are the same as Parothā and Hemṭhā respectively. Both of them are in the Sāho parganā. The river referred to in the record is the same as the Sāl.

Towards the end several persons are named as witnesses to the demarcation of the boundaries of the donated area.

It is not known how the grant later on came into the possession of the temple of Lakshmi-Narayana.

The boundaries: the upper limit (runs) alongside Parautā belonging to the watchmen of the holy Nārāyana (the donated land lying) between the stream of Haiṭā and the stream of Paharautā, the river (Sāl) (forming) the boundary-line in the front. The land that lies inwards from the river is to be enjoyed by Gopī. This pious gift of the illustrious king, this village of Pūri with its boundaries well defined should be preserved for Gopī.
- (L. 14) The prince Parasarāma, Chamdidāsa, Kidāri, Bhikhāri, the barber Sibuņu, Maluka,, the king's personal servant Ranu, Bīrbalā, Budho, and Champu have fixed the amount of seed-corn and defined the boundary-lines. This should be maintained.

No. 42. CHAMBA PLATE OF BALABHADRA; SASTRA 84

This plate was found in the possession of the present Rājaguru, Pandit Thākur Dās, at Chamba proper. It measures 11" high by $11\frac{1}{2}$ " wide. It had a handle on its left, but that is now broken off. In its top left corner there is the usual seal with a Nāgari legend containing the king's name. There are altogether 17 lines of writing on it, of which line 16 occurs in the left margin and line 17 runs in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyalī. The record is dated in the Sastra year 84, on the 20th day of Phalguna. The corresponding Vikrama Samvat must be 1665, and the date may thus be equated with Friday, 17th March, A. D. 1609.

The inscription records that the prince Aniruddha donated, with the consent of king Balabhadra, a village called Simgi to three Brāhmans, Dāmodara, Bisuda and Lakhi, while he was at Prayāga. The occasion of the gift is stated to be the śrāddha of the Kolvāļa queer. From these details it follows that the prince Aniruddha was at that time on pilgrimage and visited the holy place of Prayāga (Allahabad) where he performed the śrāddha ceremony. It is known from other sources that the prince Aniruddha was Balabhadra's son. The Kolvāļa queen evidently refers to one of Balabhadra's consorts, the mother of Aniruddha.

⁸ Since she halled from Kulu, she is styled Kolvala i.e., '(princess) of Kulu.'

The donated village Simgi is identical with Simgi in the Udaipur parganā, 8 miles from Chamba on the road to Dalhousie via Kolhadi. The other villages mentioned in the inscription are all in the same parganā of Udaipur. Thus Mihlā, Gunoda and Biņotā are the same as Milhā, Ganodi and Bhanhotā respectively. Kharolī is said to be a hamlet in the Udaipur parganā, though the list of villages does not include it. Some of the names of the witnesses mentioned towards the end are each preceded by a term denoting the village to which the particular individual belonged. Thus Chinadi and Chajhvāla evidently mean 'resident of Chaneda' and 'resident of Chamhuim' respectively. These two villages are in the Udaipur parganā. Kudhyāla is also a similar term, though it is not clear to which village it refers.

The charter was written by one Puramdara.

No. 43. CHAMBA PLATE OF BALABHADRA: V. S. 1667

(Plate XXI, A)

This plate is also said to have been in the possession of the present Rājaguru, Pandit Thākur Dās, at Chamba proper, though the land, the gift of which is recorded therein, now belongs to the temple of Lakshmī-Nārāyana. The plate measures 8½" high by 11" wide excluding the handle on its left. In the top left corner there is the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The writing on the plate covers 20 lines, of which lines 17-18 appear in the right margin, while lines 19-20 run inversely in the top margin. A small piece has chipped off from the bottom right corner, and as a result thereof some aksharas at the ends of lines 14-16 have been lost.

The language is almost throughout Sanskrit, line 10 containing a few details in the bhāshā. The charter is dated in the Śāstra year 86, the Vikrama Samvat 1667 in the month of Kārttika on the 11th day of the dark fortnight, which may be taken to correspond to Tuesday, 2nd October, A. D. 1610. The inscription records the king's grant of some land to a Brāhman called Narottamaśarman, son of Rāmadeu, of the Gautama gotra. The land lay between Obadī and Gādui, the former of which is identical with the village Obarī in the Sāch parganā, while the latter is supposed to be the name of a field.

The charter was written by Ramapati.

No. 44. MANGAROL PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1670 (Plate XXI, B)

This plate was received from one Samju Gopālu of the village Mangarol in the Sāho parganā, and is now kept in the Bhuri Singh Museum at Chamba proper, its catalogue number being B, 24. It had a handle on its left, but that is now broken off. It measures 10" high by 12½" wide. In its top left corner it has the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription comprises 20 lines, of which lines 16-17 occur in the left margin, while lines 18-20 appear inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The inscription is dated in the Śāstra year 89. The corresponding Vikrama Samvat is stated to be 1600, but that is most probably a mistake on the part of the engraver. The intended reading must be 1670. The tithi and the occasion of the grant are mentioned further on in the record as being the Gangā Daśaharā, i.e., the 10th day of the bright fortnight of the month of Jyaishtha. This might be equivalent to Wednesday, 19th May, A. D. 1613. This was a day previous to the fast day of Nirjalā ekādaśī.

The inscription refers itself to the reign of Balabhadra, but records a land-grant made by his son, the prince Janārdanadeva, to one Samju Dadū of the Kāśyapa gotra, at Haridvāra (Hardwar), on the aforementioned date. The donated land lay in the village of Mamgalaura, which is the same as Mangarol, the provenance of the plate. The donation included also a field called Halyalā which is now known as Halelā, but that is at present not cultivated, having turned into a jungle. Towards the end, a reference is made, by way of confirmation, to the effect that the same donee had been given a piece of land at the Padharā that is the plateau of Sāho, on the occasion of the inauguration ceremony of a house, probably the prince's own mansion.

No. 45. MADANPUR PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1671

It is not known as to who owned this plate or from which place it was obtained. Nor are its present whereabouts known. It is further to be regretted that no impression or photograph of this plate is available. Fortunately, however, transcript of its inscription and some particulars about it are to be found in the manuscript material left by Dr. Vogel. Its measurements are given there as 9" high by 141" wide. It is said also to have had a small handle to its left and a seal in its upper left corner, which as usual had a Nagari legend containing the king's name. It is not stated there as to how many lines the inscription consisted of. his transcript, however, Dr. Vogel has shown 20 lines of writing, but considering the unusual length of the matter given in the last line there and comparing it with the average matter in every other line, it may be concluded that the inscription consisted of 22 lines. Further, in his transcript, Dr. Vogel has shown against line 16 that from that line onwards the inscription runs in the left margin. Bearing this in mind, when we see that line 19 contains only a few letters, we may infer that lines 16-18 appeared in the left margin, line 19 ran on the handle and line 20 (or lines 20-22) in the top margin as in the case with so many other similar plates.

The text given below is a copy¹ of Dr. Vogel's transcript. I have not been able to check it, since neither the original nor any estampage of it was available to me.

The language of the record for the most part is Sanskrit, some portion being in Chambyālī. It is dated in the Śāstra year 90, the Vikrama Samvat 1671, in the month of Vaiśākha, on the 11th day of the bright fortnight, which may correspond to Sunday, 10th April, A. D. 1614. It refers to the reign of Balabhadra and records his gift of some land to a Brāhman, named Badu Dhahļūśarman, son of Sādoka or Sādo, of the Kāśyapa gotra, a resident of Madanapura, though the bhāshā portion of the text makes Sādo himself the donee. The occasion of the gift was the udyāpana of the ekādaśī vrata apparently observed by the donor.

Madanapura, the native place of the donee is to be identified with Madanpur, 3 miles north-east of Nürpur. From this it may be supposed that the present plate was in the possession of some Brāhman in that village.

The writer of the charter was Ramāpati. Towards the end of the record there is an unfamiliar imprecatory verse which may be taken as the writer's own coinage. The remarkable part of it is that it swears the Hindu and Turushka (Mohammadan) kings, saying that if they violate the grant they would incur the sin of eating the flesh of cow and of pig respectively. It need not be pointed out that to a Hindu a cow is too sacred to be killed and to a Mohammadan pork is forbidden.

¹ In one or two cases where the reading appeared to me otherwise for obvious reasons, I have not followed Dr. Vogel's transcript.

And therein two lāhaḍīs of land are granted. He as well as his progeny may enjoy that so long as the moon, the sun, the polar star and the universe endure. Whosoever would encreach hereupon deserves to be punished and put to and may descend into hell!
- (L. 11) There the extent (of the donated area) is two 2 lahadis. The illustrious king gave this to Sādo on the occasion of the udyāpana of the ekādaśī vrata. lāhadī of that belonged to Chakadrādu Bhikhana and one l lāhadī to Khilālī. extent of the boundaries is the same as was formerly enjoyed—the same has been given to the Badu. No. 46. GULEHI PLATE OF BALABHADRA: SASTRA 93

This plate¹ is stated to have been in the possession of a Brāhman, Parama by name, at the village of Gulchi in the Berā parganā. It measures 6½" high by 9½" wide, and has no handle. In its top left corner it has the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 10 lines only, of which the last line appears in the left margin.

The language is Chambyālī mingled with some expressions in Sanskrit. The record is dated on the 10th day of the dark fortnight of the month of Mārgasīrsha in the year 93 which obviously refers to the Śāstra reckoning. The corresponding Vikrama Samvat must be 1674. The date may be taken as equivalent to Wednesday, 12th November, A. D. 1617. The charter records the king's gift of one lāhadī of land to a Bairvāla Brāhman named Gamgu, which had formerly belonged to one Kūnvāni Nārasimha.

The writer of the charter was Pandit Ramapati.

No. 47. NURPUR PLATE OF BALABHADRA; SASTRA 94

This plate is said to have been in the ownership of one Sukhā Brāhman, the purchit of the Raja of Nūrpur. It is also said that the grant recorded herein has been confiscated. The plate measures $7\frac{1}{4}$ high by $9\frac{1}{4}$ wide. It had a handle on its left, which is now broken off. In its top left corner it has the usual seal with a

No. 87 of APRAS. NC., 1904-05, p. 18, where the name of the locality given as Guhhyai is obviously a misprint for Guhlyai which is mentioned in the inscription.

No. 2 of APRAS, NC, 1904-05, p. 6, where the reading of the year is given as 74 instead of 94.

Nagari legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 11 lines, of which the last two lines appear in the left margin.

The language is Chambyālī throughout except in the opening sentence where it is Sanskrit. The record is dated on the 13th day of Vaiśākha in the year 94 which must be taken to refer to the Śāstra reckoning. The corresponding Vikrama Samvat must be 1675. The date may thus be equated with Sunday, 10th May, A. D. 1618.

The inscription records the king's gift of the village of Lamjerā in Hubāra to one purchita Byāsa¹ of Nurapura. Hubāra is the same as Hobār parganā in the Bhaṭṭi wazārat. The list of villages, however, does not show any village of the name of Lamjerā in that parganā, though there is one called Mamjherā. Nurapura is obviously the same as Nūrpur.

The donee is required to remain loyal to the Chamba State and fulfil his duty towards it. This is put as a sort of stipulation with regard to the donation. The donee or some of his descendants might have disregarded that and it might have been as a consequence thereof that the grant was later confiscated.

The charter is said to have been written by one Bihāri in the presence of Pandit Ramāpati.

(L. 1) Om. In the glorious (Śāstra) year 94 as well as (in the year) 1675 of Vikramāditya, on the 8th day of the bright fortnight of Āśvina, the illustrious P. M. Balibhadravarmadeva, has granted here the village named Bamaṇa with its fixed boundaries, in the Mahile mandala, to a Brāhman called Dhrubuṇū. He as well as his progeny may enjoy it so long as the moon and the sun (endure). Whosoever would encroach hereupon deserves to be punished and put to death and may descend into hell!

⁴ See below, p. 177.

- (L. 6) Now the boundaries. The illustrious king has donated the village named Bamaṇa as a hastodaka grant; the details thereof are recorded: on the east the upper limit of Nātha's Śāsana falls within Bamaṇa; on the south (the land) beneath the declivity of Mudhyarā is included in Bamaṇa; on the west the boundary-marks of the two māsus (of land) belonging to the carpenter and of the (one) māsu (of land) belonging to the ploughman are within Bamaṇa; (the land) behind the descent falling within Bamaṇa. This is the extent of the boundaries. The illustrious king has given this land grant to Dhrubuṇu. This pious gift of the illustrious king should in future be preserved for Dhrubuṇu's sons and grandsons.

No. 49. HADSAR PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1675 (Plate XXII, A)

This plate was owned by one Thakaru. It measures 8" high by 13" wide including the handle on its left. In its top left corner it has the usual seal with a Nagari legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 20 lines of which lines 14-16 run in the left margin, line 17 on the handle and lines 18-20 inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The charter is dated in the Sāstra year 94, the Vikrama Samvat 1675, on the 14th day of the dark fortnight of the month of Mārgaśīrsha, which may be taken to correspond to Friday, 6th November, A. D. 1618.

The inscription records that the king donated the village of Dattahilasara for the purpose of establishing a sadāvarta or more correctly sadāvrata in the name of the God Maṇimaheśa. The grant was given to four individuals, apparently brothers, by name Anamta, Bihārī, Banabyārī and Dāsa, who were not Brāhmans but Khatrīs, belonging to the Kakāda sub-caste. This sub-caste is nowadays known as Kakkad. These persons were not grantees in the usual sense, but were in reality trustees of the endowment and were charged with the duty of running the charitable institution founded by the king, which was to be maintained with the income and produce from the donated village.

The donated village is to be identified with Hadsar in the Bharmour parganā of the Bharmour wazārat. The sadāvarta or alms-giving institution established there was evidently for the benefit of the travellers, usually mendicants, on pilgrimage to the holy place of Manimaheśa, which is two stages farther from Hadsar, this last place being itself about 10 miles from Bharmour on the way from Bharmour to Manmahesh or Manimaheśa.

The charter was composed by Ramāpati.

No. 50. JVALAMUKHI PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1676 (Plate XXII, B)

This plate was discovered in the possession of one Miśra Brij Lal of Jvalamukhi in the Kangra district. It measures 75" high by 101" wide excluding the handle on its left. In its top left corner there is the usual seal with a Nagari legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 18 lines in all, of which line 15 occurs in the left margin, while lines 16-18 run inversely in the top margin.

No. 21 of APRAS, NC, 1901.05, p. 8. The number of text lines is given there as nineteen which should be eighteen.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyali. The charter is dated in the Sastra year 95, the Vikrama Samvat 1676, on the 7th day of the bright fortnight of the month of Magha, which may be taken to correspond to Monday, 31st January, A. D. 1620. The object of the charter is to record two land-grants by the prince Janardana, with the approval of king Balabhadra, to a Sarasvata Brahman, named Miéra Govardhana of Kāśi, belonging to the Garga gotra. Of the two grants, one consisted of only one lāhadī of land, which was given evidently as a dakshinā on the occasion of a recitation of the Harivamśa Purāna, while the other was made at the time of the prince Prithvīsimha's birth and comprised one whole village, called Riṭṭā or Riṭā, and a part of another, called Bhanī. These are identical with Raiṭā and Bhānīyām respectively in the Mehlā parganā referred to as Maihlā mandala in the inscription.

The inscription was written by Pandit Lakshmikanta.

No. 51. CHAMBA PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1686 (Plate XXIII, A)

This plate² is said to have been in the possession of one Badu Sidh of Chamba. It measures 8½" high by 11½" wide including the handle on its left. In its top left corner it has the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 17 lines, of which lines 14-15 appear in the left margin and lines 16-17 run inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyāli. The charter is lated in the Śāstra year 5, the Vikrama Samvat 1686, on the 7th day of the bright fortnight of the month of Āshāḍha, which may be equated with Wednesday, 17th June, A. D. 1629. It records the king's grant of one lāhadī of land together with a house-site and a kitchen garden in the Bhirimyā or Bhiriā mandala which is the same as the Bhadīhām parganā. The donee is one Pandit Lokanāthaśarman of the Bhāradvāja gotra. The gift was made on the suddha Śrāddha' ceremony of the king's mother, queen Dharmadei (Dharmadevī).

The charter was written by Pandit Lakshmikanta in the presence of five witnesses whose names are mentioned.

Literally, 'in the course of listening to the Harivamia.

In the year 1686 of the illustrious king Vikramāditya, in the glorious Šāstra year 5, in the month of Ashādha, on the 7th day of the bright fortnight, the illustrious P. M. Balabhadravarmadeva has, here, on the occasion of the suddha śrāddha ceremony of his mother, donated in the mandala named Bhirimyā one lāhadī (of land) along with a watercourse, a house and a kitchen-garden to the Brāhman Pandit Lokanāthaśarman of the Bhāradvāja gotra, of pure descent?, a performer of the trì-sandhyā³ rites. He as well as his progeny may enjoy that so long as the moon, the sun and the universe endure. No. 52. JVALAMUKHI PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1686 (Plate XXIII. B)

This plate was also in the possession of Miśra Brij Lal of Jvālāmukhi in the Kangra district, who owned another one, namely Jvālāmukhi plate of Balabhadra of V. S. 1676 (No. 50). It measures 7½" high by 11½" wide including the handle on its left. In its top left corner it has the usual seal with a Nāgari legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 17 lines in all, of which line 13 appears in the left margin and lines 14-17 occur inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The charter is dated in the Śāstra year 105, the Vikrama Samvat 1686, on the full-moon day of the month of Kārttika, possibly to be equated with Thursday, 22nd October, A. D. 1629. It is noteworthy that the Śāstra year is mentioned here as 105 instead of as 5 only, since the centuries are usually omitted in this reckoning. The object of the inscription is to register the king's grant of four lāhadīs of land at the village of Padī in the Hubāra mandala to the very same Miśra Govardhanaśarman who figures as donee in the other Jvālāmukhī plate referred to above (No. 50).

The grant was written by Pandit Lakshmikanta.

No. 53. LAKSHMI-NARAYANA TEMPLE PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1686

This plate¹ belongs to the temple of Lakshmi-Nārāyaṇa at Chamba proper and is now preserved in the Bhuri Singh Museum there, bearing the catalogue number B, 25. It measures 8" high by 9½" wide excluding the handle on its left. In its top left corner it has the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription covers 19 lines, of which the last four appear in the left margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The record is dated in the Śāstra year 5, the Vikrama Samvat 1686, on the 12th day of the bright fortnight of the month of Māgha, which may be taken to correspond to Friday, 15th January, A.D. 1630.

The charter records the king's grant of a village named Midaghā in the Chūhnā mandala to a Brāhman called Baradāṇa Gokalaśarman of the Kāśyapa gotra. In the bhāshā portion of the inscription the donee is referred to also as the family of Gopī, who in all probability is identical with the Baradāṇī 2 Gopi of the Kāśyapa gotra, the donee in an earlier charter, namely the Lakshmī-Nārāyaṇa temple plate of Balabhadra of V. S. 1664 (No. 41). It is thus presumed that this Gopī is the father of Gokalaśarman.

The charter also confirms an earlier grant made by Mīā Sabalasimha obviously to the same donor. That grant consisted of a village named Kayala in Yaśaura and is stated to have been made at the Ganges on the occasion of a Dasaharā, which shows that the prince Sabalasimha had then gone on pilgrimage to Haridvāra.

The of Baradar is the same as Beradapa.

The Chūhnā maṇḍala is now called Chūnh pargaṇā and is in the Bhaṭṭi wazārat, but the village Miḍaghā is said to be known now as Buhāṇā. The list of villages, however, does not show either of the two in that pargaṇā, though there is one named Gohāṇā. Yaśaura refers to the Jasaur pargaṇā, of the Churāh wazārat and the village Kāļei there is supposed to be the modern representative of the village Kayala of the record.

The donee was given also a house-site which had formerly belonged to one Kamano Bilohī. And, besides, he was exempted from the desa-rīta and the levy of goats. The former denotes certain dues customary in the locality concerned, while the latter refers to the then prevalent custom of villagers contributing goats and sheep to the state for the purpose of sacrifice at the temple of Chāmuṇḍā in Chamba on particular occasions.

No. 54. CHAMBA PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1688

This plate has been in the possession of the State, apparently without any record as to how and whence it was obtained. It is now deposited in the Bhuri Singh Museum at Chamba where it bears the catalogue number B, 26. It measures 6½ high by 9½ wide excluding the small handle on its left. In its top left corner it has the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription comprises only 12 lines, the last appearing in the left margin.

The record is dated in the Sastra year 7, the Vikrama Samvat 1688, on the 7th day of the bright fortnight of the month of Phālguna, which may be held to correspond to Friday, 17th February, A.D. 1632. It registers the king's gift of a village called Lāhaḍā to a Brāhman named Malūkaśarman. From the details in the bhāshā it is evident that the same village was formerly held as a śāsana by another Brāhman named Kihlyālā Khimdū. It is to be presumed that this former donee left behind no successor of his, and that his śāsana, being not revertible to the State, was conferred on Malūka whose al is stated to be Sigāṭa.

The donated village is identical either with Lāhdā or with Lāhrā, both of which are in the Bhatti-Tikrī² parganā of the Bhatti wazārat.

The writer of the grant was Pandit Lakshmikanta.

¹ No. 2 of APRAS, NC, 1906-07, p. 8. The name of the pargand given there as Loh Tikri is a mistake for Bhattle. This correct name is given in the Catalogue of the Bhuri Singh Museum at Chamba, p. 10, B. 26.

It is called Bhatti-Tikri so as to distinguish it from Loh-Tikri which is in the Church wazarat.

No. 55. CHAMBA PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1689

This plate² belonged to Chhunphanān Podhi, Māngnu, and others at Chamba and is now kept in the Bhuri Singh Museum there, having the catalogue number B, 27. The left side of the plate, where there is the handle, is narrower than the other. It thus measures from $4\frac{1}{4}$ " to $5\frac{1}{4}$ " high by $7\frac{5}{8}$ " wide excluding the handle. In its top left corner it has the usual seal with an incomplete Nāgari legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 15 lines in all, of which lines 11-12 appear in the left margin and lines 13-15 run inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The record is dated in the Śāstra year 8, the Vikrama Samvat 1698 which is obviously a mistake for 1689, on the 5th day of the bright fortnight of the month of Mārgaśīrsha, which may be considered to correspond to Tuesday, 6th November, A. D. 1632. The object of the charter is to record the king's donation of a village named Pajyārā in the Sācha mandala to a Brāhman called Mārkandeyaśarman of the Bharadvaja gotra.

No. 9 of APRAS, NC. 1906-07, p. 8.

The occasion of the gift is stated to be the udyāpana of an ekādašī vrata which was presumably observed by the royal donor himself. Since the date given above is the 5th day of the bright fortnight, the vrata referred to must have been on the foregoing ekādašī of the dark fortnight. Thus, the gift was actually made on that day but was recorded about ten days later.

Towards the end, the inscription adverts to two villages called Badauṇā and Divakhara, adding that they may be continued to be enjoyed by Mahīdhara's children in the same way as Mahīdhara had enjoyed them. The relation of this Mahīdhara with the aforementioned grantee Mārkaṇdeya is not clear. In fact the very relevancy of the concluding portion is obscure.

Besides the places referred to above, some more are mentioned in the record in the course of defining the boundaries of the gift village. They are, all except one, in the Sāch parganā, the Sācha mandala of the inscription. Thus Pajyārā, Tumdā, Odā, Khajyārā and Divakhara are identical respectively with Pamjyārā, Tumdā, Orā, Khajiārā and Dibkharī. Khajiārā or Khajiār is about 10 miles from Dalhousie on the Dalhousie-Chamba road, and is well known for its fine extensive glade with a lake in its centre. The place is much frequented by visitors during the season. Dhayvali of the record is probably the same as Duhelī, while Badaunā may be identified with Chumrī-Badūne-dī in the Bhadīhām parganā.

The grant was written by Lakshmikanta in the presence of two witnesses.

No. 56. KUMRA PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1689

(Plate XXIV, A)

This plate¹ is said to have been in the possession of a Brāhman, Parjā by name, at the village of Kūmrā in the Piyurā parganā. It measures 5¾ high by 8″ wide including the handle on its left. In its top left corner it has the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The seal is, however, found to be reversed and the legend defective. The inscription consists of 12 lines of which the last appears in the left margin.

The language is Chambyālī, except in the opening passage where it is Sanskrit. The deed is dated in the year 1689 evidently of the Vikrama era, on the 15th day of the month of Mārgaśīrsha, which may be equated with Thursday, 13th, December, A. D. 1632. The charter records the donation or rather conveyance, by the king, of the village Pihura to an inhabitant of that place, named Hari, who does not appear to be a Brāhman. The same village, it is clear from the details given, was formerly in the possession of two other persons, namely Dhajanī Jagadīsa and Sāmuru Durugu. These were pledged to remain loyal and be ever in service of Chamba, and this same condition has been declared to be binding on the succeeding beneficiary as well.

The village of Pihura is identical with Piyura, the headquarters of the pargaṇā of the same name. Sāmura, after which Durugu is styled Sāmuru, is the same as Sāmrā, the headquarters of the pargaṇā of that very name.

There were four witnesses to the agreement, including the prince, Miā Prithvisimha. It was written by Pandit Lakshmikānta.

¹ The seal is reversed. The reading of the legend may be corrected as श्रीबलभद्रवर्ममाग्या as found in other charters.

The reading of the figure within brackets is doubtful. It may be that this sign is meant only to fill up the space and that the intended date is only 1, i.e., the lat of of Maghai (Margatirsha).

No. 57. NAGODA GRANT OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1691

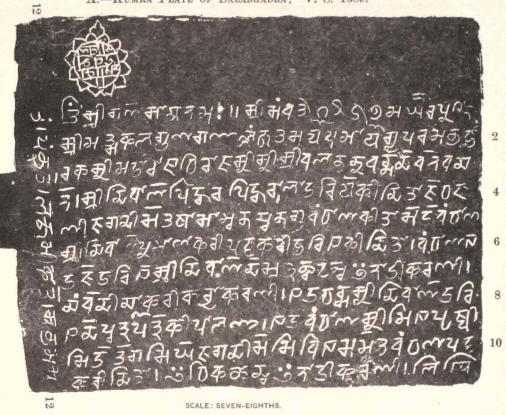

This plate was owned by one Badu Phīnchu. It measures 9" high by $12\frac{1}{2}$ " wide excluding the handle on its left. In its top left corner it has the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. A small bit has been chipped off from the bottom left corner where, as a result thereof, two letters have been destroyed. The inscription consists of 17 lines, of which lines 14-15 appear in the left margin and lines 16-17 inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The inscription is dated in the Sāstra year 10, the Vikrama Samvat 1691, on the Krishna-janmāshtamī day, that is the 8th day of the dark fortnight of the month of Bhādrapada, which may be equated with Wednesday, 6th August, A. D. 1634.

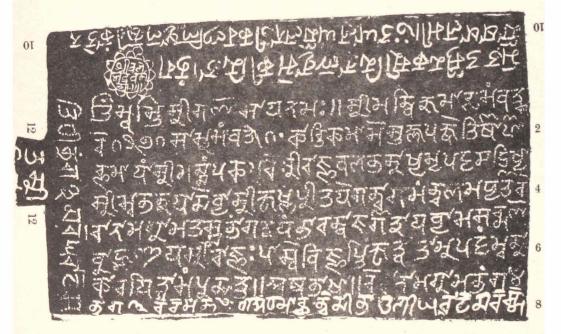

The charter records the king's donation of a village and one-third of the priest's honorarium to a Brāhman called Tripuradāsa of the Bhāradvāja gotra. In the bhāshā portion, the donee is alluded to also as Badu Gigā which appears to be his more common appellation. The donated village is called Nagoda which, it is stated, was formerly owned by one Bhāṭa Jīvana. It has further been specified that one kunu of land at that village was withheld and instead of that the donee was given as much of wet land at Chambī which is another village adjoining to Nagoda. The one kunu of wet land at Chambī is stated to have belonged to one Maradū.

A.-Kumra Plate of Balabhadra; V. S. 1689.

B.—CHAMBA PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1691.

The significance of a passage in the $bh\bar{a}sh\bar{a}$, line 15, is not quite apprehensible, though the literal rendering of it suggests that the same donee had formerly been given a $gh\bar{a}l\bar{s}$ or a reserved pasture at Brahmaura.

The villages Nagoda and Chambi are both in the Sach parganā, the former is also called Nagodi, while Brahmaura is the same as Bharmour, the principal village of the Bharmour wazārat and the headquarters of the Bharmour parganā therein.

The grant was written by Lakshmikanta.

No. 58. CHAMBA PLATF OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1691

(Plate XXIV, B)

This plate is said to have been in the possession of those very individuals who owned the Chamba plate of Balabhadra of V. S. 1689 (No. 55), namely Chhunphanan Podhi, Mangnu, and others at Chamba. It is slightly narrower on the left side than on the other. It thus measures from 4½" to 4½" high by 8" wide including the handle on its left. A portion of the handle has been broken off. There are two letters, constituting the twelfth line of the inscription, on the extant part of the handle which shows traces of some more letters that are now destroyed. In the top left corner of the plate there is the usual seal with a Nagari legend containing the king's name. The inscription comprises 12 lines, of which lines 9.10 run inversely in the top margin, line 11 appears in the left margin and line 12 on the handle.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The document is dated in the Šāstra year 10, the Vikrama Samvat 1691, on the full-moon day of the month of Kārttika, which may be taken to correspond to Sunday 26th October, A.D. 1634. It records that Queen Subhadrādevī, the consort of Balabhadra, granted some land at the village of Rerā in the Gadāśa mandala, to a Brāhman named Vyāsaśarman, with the consent of her husband. The details given are somewhat confused, but this is what they seem to mean: The whole of the village comprised four bhangas of land. Out of that, one bhanga was to be enjoyed exclusively by Vyāsaśarman. The remaining three, which included a watermill and a pasture, were to be equally divided between, or, in other words, to be jointly enjoyed by, Vyāsaśarman and Mārkande. This latter is to all appearance identical with Mārkandeyaśarman who figures as donee in the aforementioned charter (No. 55).

The donated village is identical with the present day Remrā in the Rājnagar pargaņā.

The charter was written by Lakshmikanta.

Its object is to record the king's donation of six¹ lāhadīs of land at the village of Jakhurvādī to the Brāhman Bhāgīrathaśarman of the Bhāradvāja gotra. The donated land is stated to have belonged formerly to a Pandit whose name has not been specified.

Here as well as in the word seg low in line 11, the letter suppears to be correction over an erasure, so that it is quite likely that some interested person has tampered here with the original wording which might have been gri and green respectively. The motive is clear: the original meant a gift of two lahadis of land, whereas the altered reading makes it a i of six lihalis instead.

No. 60. MAMDU GRANT OF BALABHADRA: V. S. 1692

(Plate XXV, B)

This plate is said to have been in the possession of Pandit Purshottam and others at Chamba. It measures $7\frac{1}{2}$ high by $9\frac{7}{8}$ wide excluding the handle on its left. In its top left corner it has the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscriptions consist of 17 lines, of which lines 13-14 appear in the left margin, while lines 15-17 run inversely in the top margin. The last three letters of the last line, however, continue in the left margin in such a way that they seem to form a part of line 14.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The record is dated in the Śāstra year 11, the Vikrama Samvat 1692, on the 10th day of the bright fortnight of the month of Jyeshtha which may be equated with Saturday, 16th May, A.D. 1635. Its object is to register the king's gift of a village named Māmdū in the Pamjalā mandala to the Brāhman Ravidatta of the Bhāradvāja gotra who appears to be identical with the writer of the foregoing charter. The donee was also given a house-site at Chamba proper, which had belonged to one Chilāmī Šehlālū.

The Pamjalā maṇḍala refers to the Panjlā pargaṇā while Māmḍū, the donated village, is the same as Māmḍh included therein.

The charter was written by Lakshmikanta.

NO. 61. GAMNJI PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1692 (?)

This plate was found in the possession of a Brāhman, Dhodhu by name, in the village of Gamnjī of the Sāho parganā. It measures 7" high by 12" wide excluding the handle on its left. In its top left corner it has a seal. The legend on it is rather indistinct and seems to contain a slightly different reading from that usually found on the other seals of Balabhadra. Near the top right corner of the plate, a piece about $2'' \times 1''$ is broken off. The gap thus caused has resulted in the loss of some letters in the last two lines of the inscription which consists of 14 lines, lines 13-14 running inversely in the top margin and the last line being a short one.

The language of the record is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyali. composition in both the parts is extremely faulty, though the purport of the deed is fairly clear. It is dated in the Sastra year 11. The corresponding Vikrama year is stated to be 1699 but that is perhaps a mistake for 1692, for we know that by V. S. 1699 Balabhadra was already succeeded by his grandson Prithvisimha, the earliest of whose known charters is dated in V. S. 1698 (No. 70). The other details of the date are mentioned further on in the record in connection with the grant registered, namely the occasion of the solar eclipse on the new-moon (amāvāsuā) day in the month of Bhadrapada. The specific reference to the solar eclipse should ordinarily be a determining factor for the verification of the date, but in this particular instance it seems to have made the matter more complicated. A reference to Dewan Bahadur L. D. Swamikannu Pillai's Indian Ephemeris will show that there was no solar eclipse at all in V.S. 1692, nor in V.S. 1699. However, there was one in V. S. 1700, and that on the same tithi as has been stated in the record. namely on the new-moon day in the month of Bhadrapada, corresponding to Sunday, 3rd September A. D. 1643. This appears to be the intended date. To accept this, however, we have to assume firstly that the mention of the Sastra year in the record as being 11 is a mistake for 18, secondly that the reading of the Vikrama year there as 1699 is correct, and thirdly that this V. S 1699 refers to the expired year which would mean that the current Vikrama year was 1700 when there was a solar eclipse on the stated day. Still, the difficulty already hinted at remains unsolved: the Vikrama year 1699 or 1700 falls in the reign of Prithvisinha, while the document refers itself to that of his grandfather and predecessor, Balabhadra, so that we have to choose one of the two alternatives, either to treat the record as a forgery, though the date in that case is verifiable, or to accept it as a genuine grant of Balabhadra with an irregular date.

The charter purports to record that king Balabhadra donated two villages named Mata and Guḍajī to a Brāhman called Ghughuru or Ghumghuru of the Bhāradvāja gotra on the occasion of the solar eclipse. The donee is stated to be a resident of Guḍajī. This village is to be identified with Gamnjī, the provenance of the plate, while Mata is probably the same as Maṭyārā. Both of them are in the Sāho parganā, the mandala of Sāhu or Sāho of the inscription.

The charter is stated to have been written by Pandit Lakshmikanta.

NO. 62. PADUNA-KHALERA GRANT OF BALABHADRA, V. S. 1693

This plate is said to have been owned by one Kukhvān Bisheshar at Chamba It measures $8\frac{1}{4}$ " high by $8\frac{1}{4}$ wide excluding the handle on its left. The plate is slightly damaged: a part of its handle is chipped off, the top left corner and the bottom right corner are also broken off to the extent of about $1\frac{1}{2}$ " by $1\frac{1}{2}$ " and 1" by $1\frac{1}{2}$ " respectively. As a result of the damage the seal has almost completely disappeared, while some letters in the end of line 13-15 are missing. The inscription consists of 21 lines, of which lines 16-17 appear in the left margin and lines 18-21 run inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The charter refers itself to Balabhadra's reign and is dated in the Sāstra year 12, V. S. 1693. No further details of the date have been mentioned. The given year corresponds to A. I) 1636. It records that Queen Mathurādevī and Prince Sudarśana, respectively the consort and son of Balabhadra, gave away two villages, called Padūṇa and Khalerā. in the Sāho mandala to a Brāhman, named Sundaraśarman, of the Bhāradvāja gotrā with the consent of the king.

The Śāho mandala refers to the Śāho parganā which includes the two donated villages. Khalerā is now called Khanlerā, while Padūņa is known under the very same name.

The charter was written by Pandit Ravidatta.

NO. 63. CHAMBA PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1693.

(Plate XXVI)

This plate of unusually big size is stated to have been in the possession of the former $R\bar{a}jaguru$, Pandit Mohan Lāl, at Chamba. It measures $12\frac{3}{4}$ " high by 15" wide excluding the handle on its left. In its top left corner it has the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 25 lines, of which lines 18-20 occur in the left margin and lines 21-25 run inversely in the top margin, the continuation of the last line, comprising two letters and two dandas, appearing again in the left margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The record is dated in the Śāstra year 12, V. S. 1693, on the 3rd (Akshayatritīyā) day of the bright fortnight of Vaiśākha, which may be equated with Wednesday, 27th April, A. D. 1636. It registers the king's grant of a village to a Brāhman, Pandit Lokanāthaśarman by name, of the Bhāradvāja gotra. The granted village is called Adhastha Uṭipa (in the bhāshā Buhnī Uṭipa), that is to say the Lower Uṭipa which is stated to be in the Pamjalā mandala (Panjlā pargaṇā). The Upper Uṭipa (Uparalī Uṭipa) is mentioned among the boundaries which are specified in elaborate details. The list of villages, however, shows only one village of that name in the said pargaṇā. Some of the other villages mentioned among the boundaries can also be identified. Thus Drabheṭā, Bhujā, Drabilā, Manyādā, and Nanvāha are respectively the same as Drabheṭ, Bhujā, Drablā, Munyādā and Nuṇāh. The donee was also given a house-site at Chamba.

Moreover, (the donated area) includes the farther Kaphādī below the confluence of two brooks, the large rock of Khaladūnā within the junction of two paths, (and the field named) Digātā over the path leading to Bhujā. Having combined all this land with its fixed boundaries, the illustrious king Balikarna has given it to Lokanātha as a hastodaka rent-free grant.

- (L. 14) Now the boundaries: On the east the boundary is (formed by) the footpath as well as by the mulberry tree below the broken path of Selvānī (and) inwards from the brooklet of Chachhī; on the south the boundary is (marked by) the ridge of Sukeṇā, the large mulberry tree (and) the kaith tree above the main path as well as the ridge of Nanvāha; on the west the boundary (lies) below the Nāga's ridge with klaim trees, above the paved path (and) inwards from the terrace as well as the junction of two paths; on the north the limit is (marked by) the branch of the brook of Bhuṣā. NO. 64. SIMDA GRANT OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1693

This plate is stated to have been in the possession of one Paṇḍit Gaurīdatta. It measures $9\frac{1}{2}$ high by $10\frac{1}{4}$ wide excluding the handle on its left. In its top left corner there is the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 23 lines, of which lines 19-20 occur in the left margin and lines 21-22 inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The charter refers itself to the reign of Balabhadra and is dated in the Śāstra year 12, V. S. 1693, on the rull-moon day of Kārttika, which may be held to correspond to Wednesday, 2nd November, A. D. 1636. It records that Balabhadra's son, prince Mānasinha, donated the village of Śimda in the Jaśaura or Yaśaura mandala to Dharanidharaśarman, son of Pandit Ramāpati, of the Bhāradvāja gotra, with the consent of the king. The donee's father is identical with Balabhadra's Rājaguru, Surānanda's son, Ramāpati, who figures as writer in most of Balabhadra's carlier charters. As has been observed above, Lakshmīkānta was also a son of the same Ramāpati. Thus Lakshmīkānta and Dharanīdhara were brothers.

No. 43 of APRAS, NC, 1903-04, p. 10.

The donated village is to be identified with Sinda in the Jasaur parganā, the Jasaura or Yasaura mandala of the record. Dr. Vogel seems to have visited Sinda, as he has left us an account of its exact location, which is as follows: "Sinda, 2 miles south-west (above) Kalhel, the second stage of the Chambā-Pāngī road and present headquarters of the Jasaur parganā. The village consists of only one house in which three families live." Dr. Vogel has also recorded the information that the field called Suralī, stated to be on the western boundary of the donated village, "is now included in the sāsana." The village of Drabilā mentioned in the record is the same as Drablā, only ½ mile west of Sinda. In Chamba, there are several villages of the name of Drabilā. The one in question is in the Jasaur parganā.

The charter was written by the donee's brother, Pandit Lakshmikanta.

NO. 65. LAKSHMI-NARAYANA TEMPLE PLATE OF BALABHADRA:

V. S. 1693

This plate² belongs to the temple of Lakshmi-Nārāyaṇa at Chamba and is kept now in the Bhuri Singh Museum there, bearing the catalogue number B, 28. It measures $8\frac{3}{8}$ " high by $9\frac{1}{2}$ " wide excluding the handle on its left. In its top left corner it has the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 21 lines, of which lines 15-17 occur in the left margin and lines 18-21 run inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The inscription refers itself to the reign of Balabhadra and is dated in the Śāstra year 12, the V. S. 1693, on the 11th day of the dark fortnight of Chaitra, which may be taken to correspond to Sunday, 12th March, A. D. 1637. The charter records that the prince Mānasimha, son of Balabhadra, donated the village of Gadoda in the Yaśaura mandala to a Brāhman called Gokalaśarman of the Kaundinya gotra. According to the details in the bhāshā the donee owned a shop which was taken from him and in lieu of that he was given another shop.

¹ The word smeta here is perhaps to be taken in the sones of 'opposite' or in front of', rather that in that of 'including.'

The Yasaura maṇḍala refers to the Jasaur pargaṇā and the village Gadoḍa is perhaps identical with Gadesar there. The boundary village Bhalālā is the same as Bhalelā in the very same Jasaur pargaṇā.

NO. 66. CHAMBA PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1394

This plate was also in the possession of the former $R\bar{a}jaguru$, Pandit Mohan Lal, at Chamba. It measures about 8" high by $10\frac{1}{2}$ " wide excluding the handle on the left. In its top left corner it has the usual seal with a Nagari legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 23 lines, of which lines 19-21 appear in the left margin and lines 22-23 run inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The charter is dated in the Śāstra year 13, V. S. 1694, on the 12th day of the bright fortnight of Māgha, which may be taken to be equivalent to Wednesday, 17th January, A. D. 1638. It registers the king's gift of a village called Mathura, Mathuru or Madhuru, in the Śāho mandala, to the Brāhman Pandit Padmanābhaśarman of the Bhāradvāja gotra. As detailed in the bhāshā portion, the donee had formerly been given several fields and homesteads at various other places. These former charities have been incorporated in the present charter.

The Śāho mandala refers to the Sāho parganā. The donated village is now known as Madhrūmīm. Of the other places mentioned in the record, Dadarā is still known by that very name, Padoṇa is possibly the same as Padūṇa which occurs in another inscription (No. 62) as well, Aghāru is now called Aghārūm—this is mentioned also in an earlier inscription (No. 23). Koṭalā is identical with the present Koṭlā, and Sahrāṇa is the same as Sarāhaṇ. These are all in the Sāho pargaṇā. Digara is to be identified with Diggar in the Panjlā pargaṇā. Țhakurālā is identical with Ţhukrālā in the Simhutā pargaṇā of the Bhaṭṭi wazārat. It occurs also in an earlier record (No. 20).

The charter was written by Lakshmikanta.

Seal: The command of the illustrious Balabhadravarman.

- (L. 1) Om. Hail! Obeisance to the holy Ganesa! In the year 1694 of the illustrious Vikramārka, the glorious Šāstra year 13, the month of Māgha, the bright fortnight, on the 12th day, the illustrious P.M. Balabhadravarmadeva has, here, out of devotion to Lord Krishna, granted a village called Mathura to the extent of its boundaries in the Sāho mandala to the Brāhman Pandit Padmanābha-sarman of the Bhāradvāja gotra.
 - (L. 7) That is to be enjoyed, etc., (as usual).
- (L. 8) Now (the details in) the bhāshā: In Sāho, one I village (called) Madhuru together with Dādarā. The boundaries hereof are:—On the east below the declivity of Padoṇa; on the south inwards from the Dhapadyāṇi rivulet; on the west above the descent of Aghāru, including the Neula land; on the north within the pass of Koṭalā, including the watermill of Mathuru. Now the boundaries of Dādarā:—Inwards from the declivity in the direction of Koṭelā; on the north inwards from the stream of Kinolā; on the east within the Dhaṇa rivulet, including Hamyāda. In Sahrāṇa two 2 bhangas (of land), including two homesteads together with two kitchen-gardens, belonging to Pināu and Uta; in Digara one bhanga (of land) including the homestead along with the kitchen-garden, belonging to Hago; in Thakurālā one lāhadā including the Ludagha brooklet, three aṭus of dry land, the homestead together with the kitchen-garden, belonging to Karaṇvali Basandā;

one shop belonging to Kalvāna, (one) 1 mango (tree called) Garalaba (and) the homestead belonging to the Jujhaika—all these to the extent of their boundaries have been granted by the illustrious king by means of a charter. These former donations, the illustrious king has incorporated in (this) charter. In future the sons and grandsons of the illustrious king are to preserve this pious gift for those of Padmanābha.

NO. 67. SEI PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1695 (?) (Plate XXVII. A)

This plate¹ is reported to have been owned by one Byājā at the village of Sei in the Gudyāl pargaṇā. It measures 10½" high by 14" wide excluding the pierced handle on its left. In its top left corner it has the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. Below the seal is engraved the word sahī, also in Nāgarī, the significance of which has been discussed above.² It is, however, unusual that both the seal and the word in question occur together in this plate, as usually one of the two is deemed enough to serve the purpose. The inscription covers 20 lines in all, of which lines 16-17 appear in the left margin and lines 18-20 run inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The charter is dated in the Sāstra year 15, V. S. 1695, on the 5th day of bright fortnight of Vaiśākha. The Vikrama year corresponding to the Sāstra year 15 should be 1696 and not 1695 as stated in the record. The mistake is probably due to an oversight on the part of the writer. The case is of a common occurrence: do we not all of us, through the force of habit, very often, in writing, inadvertently refer still to the 'old' year for weeks together after the 'new' one has set in? Thus, in the present instance the intended Vikrama year is conceivably 1696. The given date may therefore be equated with Sunday, 28th April, A. D. 1639.

The inscription records that the king granted a village in the Sumgala mandala to a Brāhman, Jimdūśarman by name, of the Atri gotra. From the details in the bhāshā portion, it is evident that the same village was formerly held by one Bīrama, evidently as a śāsana, that he died by eating opium and that after his death the king transferred the grant to Jimdū and his son. Some expressions in that part of the record are rather obscure, so that it is not clear whether Bīrama's death was a case of suicide or whether it was a mere accident. It also appears that the king was present at the spot at the time of Bīrama's death and that he performed a sort of śrāddha of the deceased by treating Jimdū and his son to a dinner, who seem to have received the village, the property of the deceased, as dakshinā. The name of the village is variously given as Syaya, Syeha, Syahī, Syahū or Syāhu. It is represented by the modern Seī, the provenance of the plate, in the Gudyā lparganā. Sumgala, which is mentioned as the name of the mandala in the Inscription, is now a village in the same Gudyā lparganā.

All these boundaries are in Syahī. Bīrama of Syahu ate opium and died of that. On that occasion the illustrious king fed Jimdū and Jimdu's son on kachhāhadā and afterwards gave (them) Syahī as a rent-free grant. They have been exempted by the illustrious king from all levies and taxes in cash and kind. This is a pious gift by the illustrious king. Upon these (donees) the princes are not to cause any imposition; the illustrious king has taken (them) into his own fold, (so that) Jīmdū and Jimdū's sons and grandsons may enjoy (this grant) in the same manner as the Pamchāyat Brāhmans, commoners, Pandits and Purohits of Chamba town enjoy a rent-free grant.

No. 68. LAKSHMI-NARAYANA TEMPLE PLATE OF BALABHADRADEVA; V. S. 1697.

(Plate XXVII, B)

This plate¹ belongs to the temple of Lakshmī-Nārāyana at Chamba proper and is now deposited in the Bhuri Singh Museum there, bearing the catalogue number B, 29. It measures about 10½″ high by 13″ wide excluding the short handle on its left. In its top left corner there is the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 22 lines in all, of which lines 18-19 appear in the left margin and lines 20-22 run inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The charter is dated in the Śāstra year 16, V. S. 1697, on the full-moon day of Māgha, which may be held to correspond to Saturday, 16th January, A. D. 1641. It registers the king's gift of a village called Kuhmāro in the Sāho mandala to his cook, the Brāhman Vishņuśarman of the Kāśyapa gotra. In the bhāshā portion, the name of the donee is coupled with that of another person, namely Gorkhu, who might be related to him as brother. This section of the record describes the donated area in great details all of which are not quite intelligible. Several villages are mentioned along the boundaries, most of which are identifiable. The donated village itself is said to be no longer existent now. Duila, Judyārā, Dharu, Taparā, Tikari and Dāḍui are all in the Sāho pargaṇā and are now known by their slightly modified names. Ohli, and Bhiriā are in the Bhadīhām pargaṇā. They are mentioned also in some earlier charters (Nos. 21, and 23 Bhiriā, Nos. 11 and 12 Ohli).

It is not known as to how the charter later came into the possession of the temple.

The charter was written by Pandit Lakshmikanta.

No. 69. CHAMBA PLATE OF BALABHADRA; V. S. 1697.

This plate was in the possession of Chhunphanān, Podhi, Māngnu and others at Chamba, the very individuals who had two more plates with them (Nos. 55 and 56). It measures $6\frac{3}{4}$ " high by $8\frac{5}{8}$ " wide including the handle on its left. In its top left corner it has the usual seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription covers 18 lines in all, of which the last three run inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The record is dated in the Śāstra year 16, V. S. 1697, on the full-moon day of Phālguna, which may be held to correspond to Monday, 15th February, A.D. 1641. Its object is to register the king's gift of a village called Sarotha together with a hamlet named Chihnaṇa in the Jasora maṇḍala to a Brāhman named Mārkaṇḍeyaśarman of the Bhāradvāja gotra.

The Jasora mandala refers to the Jasaur parganā in the Churāh wazārat. The donated village still exists and has its name unchanged, while Chihnana is probably to be identified with the modern Chhanen.

It may be observed that the present charter is chronologically the last of the known records of Balabhadra's reign.

No. 70. MINDHAL PLATE OF PRITHVISIMHA: V. S. 1698

(Plate XXVIII, A)

This plate belongs to the temple of Chāmundā devī at the village of Mindhal in the Sāch parganā of the Pāngī wazārat, and is now kept in the Bhuri Singh Museum at Chamba proper, where it bears the catalogue number B, 30. It measures 7½" high by 10½" wide including the pierced handle on its left. In its top left corner is engraved the word sahī² in Nāgarī characters. The inscription consists of 21 lines in all, of which line 14 appears in the left margin, lines 15-17 run inversely in the top margin and lines 18-21, comparatively very short ones, occur on the handle.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The inscription is dated in the Šāstra year 17, V. S. 1698, on the 8th day of the bright fortnight of Vaišākha, which may be taken to correspond to Thursday, 8th April, A. D. 1641. It records that king Prithvisimha donated the village of Mimdhala in the Pāngī mandala together with the residents of that village to the goddess Chāmuṇḍā. We further learn from the record that Prithvisimha had come from Kulū and worshipped the goddess when he made his gift to her, and that the wazārat of Pāngī was then in the charge of Dayoda Bājo. The term dayoda means, 'son of a nurse'. We know that Prithvisimha, when an infant, was protected and taken to Kulū by a nurse called Baṭalo of whom we shall learn more in a later inscription. According to a tradition this Baṭalo had two sons named Ajo and Bājo. This latter seems to be identical with the one mentioned in the present record as the officer in charge of the Pāngī wazārat.

The significance of the gift of a village along with its inhabitants in the present instance is this that the villagers of that place thenceforwards were to be regarded as subjects of the deity to whom, as such, they had to render their services and pay all dues and no longer to the king. The inscription specifies the services to be rendered and dues to be paid by the villagers. Some expressions in this specification are, however, too obscure. This includes the levy of a ram to be offered by the villagers to the deity as dues for grazing their sheep and cattle on the mountain-range of Gādhā.

This Gādhā Dhār is now known as Gaddī Dhār. It is the hill against the slope of which Mindhal. Mindhala of the inscription, is situated.

The inscription was written by Pandit Lakshmikanta.

It may be observed that the present inscription does not mention Prithvisimha as Chambādhipati which epithet is applied to him in the next charter issued three years later. Here he is said to be on his visit from Kulu to the temple of Chamundā at Mindhal. Probably he was on his way to the city of Chamba, where he was to succeed to the throne.

No. 71. CHAMBA PLATE OF PRITHVISIMHA; V.S. 1701

This plate is said to have been owned by one Bhat Duryodhan of Chamba proper, belonging to the Bhāradvāja gotra.¹ It measures 7½" high by 8½" wide excluding the handle on its left. In its top left corner is engraved the word sahī in Nāgarī characters. The inscription runs into 18 lines, of which lines 15-16 occur in the left margin and lines 17-18 inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The charter is dated in the Śāstra year 20, V.S. 1701, the 13th day of the dark fortnight of Phālguna, which may be equated with Friday, 14th February, A.D. 1645. It records the king's gift of one lāhaḍī of land at the village² of Bhuroḍa or Bhuroḍi to one Bhaṭṭa Gopālaśarman of the Vādhula gotra, the Āpastamba śākhā, a Drāviḍa Brāhman, hailing from South India, on the occasion of his (king's) mother's śuḍdha śrāddha. The donated land had previously belonged to one Haladhara.

It may be inferred from the mention of the śuddha śrāddha of the king's mother that she had died about five years previously.

The charter was written by Pandit Lakshmikanta.

No. 72. CHAMBA PLATE OF PRITHVISIMHA; V.S. 1702

(Plate XXVIII, B)

This plate was owned by one Nika Sibanotar and is now preserved in the Bhuri Singh Museum at Chamba proper, having the catalogue number B, 31. It measures about 7½" high by 10½" wide including the pierced handle on its left. In its top left corner is engraved the word sahī² in Nagarī characters. The inscription consists of 17 lines in all, of which lines 13-14 appear in the left margin and lines, 15-17 run inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The charter refers itself to the reign of Prithvīsimha and is dated in the Ṣāstra year 21, V.S. 1702, on the full-moon day of Āshādha, which may be equated with Saturday, 28th June A.D. 1645. It records that Baṭvalādevī, who had served as wetnurse to the king Prithvīsimha, gave two lāhadīs of land at the village of Bhujalā in the Vikāṇa maṇdala to a Brāhman called Haṇuśarman of the Kāśyapa gotra on the occasion of the inauguration ceremony of a bridge. The bhāshā portion mentions the donee's al to be Kitvānī.

The mandala of Vikāņa refers to the parganā of Bakān or Bakān and the village of Bhujalā is now called Bhujluin.

The bridge, the inauguration ceremony of which is spoken of in the record, is now no longer in existence. It was caused to be built by the said nurse Batvalādevi. It spanned the river Rāvi near Nalhorā, the point where now-a-days there are the soldiers' barracks at Chamba. The bridge was known as Batlo-rā-seu or Batlo-kā-pul, 'Batlo's Bridge'. From there the road led to Nūrpur, Udaipur and Bakāṇ. According to another tradition the bridge was called Dugurā-seu after the name of Batlos' husband. It is said to have been a wooden bridge, though some say it was a mere jhūlā, that is a suspended rope-bridge.

The charter was written by Lakshmikanta.

No. 73. SARÁHAN PLATE OF PRITHVISIMHA; V. S. 1702

This plate is said to have been in the possession of Brāhman, Magnā by name, a resident of the village of Sarāhan in the Sāho paryanā, and is now deposited in the Bhuri Singh Museum at Chamba proper, where it bears the catalogue number B, 32. It measures $6\frac{8}{4}$ high by $8\frac{3}{4}$ wide including the handle on its left. In its top left corner is engraved the word $sah\bar{s}^1$ in Nāgarī characters. ¹ See above, p. 76, n. 2,

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The charter refers itself to the reign of Prithvīsiniha and is dated in the Śāstra year 21, V.S. 1702, on the 7th—achala-saptamī—day of the bright fortnight of Māgha, which may be taken to correspond to Tuesday, 13th January, A.D. 1646. It records again a gift of land by the king's wet-nurse Batvalā or Batulā to a Brāhman called Gorakhu-śarman, or Sipvāṇī Gorukhu, of the Kāśyapa gotra. The donated land lay at the village of Sahrāṇa, which is identical with Sarāhaṇ, the provenance of the plate. The extent of the gift area is stated to be one lāhaḍī in the Sanskrit part, but in the bhāshā portion it is said to be one-and-a-quarter 1½ lāhadīs, which appears to be the exact amount.

The charter was written by Lakshmikanta.

No. 74. LAKSHMI-NARAYANA TEMPLE PLATE OF PRITHVISIMHA; V.S. 1702

(Plate XXIX, A)

This plate belongs to the temple of Lakshmi-Nārāyaṇa at Chamba proper and is now kept in the Bhuri Singh Museum there, with the catalogue number B, 33. It measures about 10" high by $11\frac{3}{2}$ " wide excluding the handle on its left. A small piece has broken off from the lower left corner. In its top left corner is engraved the word $sah\bar{\imath}^1$ in Nāgarī characters. It may be pointed out that the last line of the inscription, mentioning the engraver's name, is also in Nāgarī characters. The inscription consists of 22 lines in all, of which lines 16-17 appear in the left margin, lines 18-21 run inversely in the top margin and line 22 is marginally inserted in the top right corner.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The record is dated in the Śāstra year 21, V.S. 1702, on the full-moon day of Phālguna, which may be held equivalent to Thursday, 19th February, A.D. 1646. Its object is to register the king's donation of a village called Gailā in the Nadha mandala to a Brāhman, named Bhūgarbhaśarman, of the Upamanyu gotra. The boundaries of the donated village are described in detail, but some of the particulars are not quite intelligible.

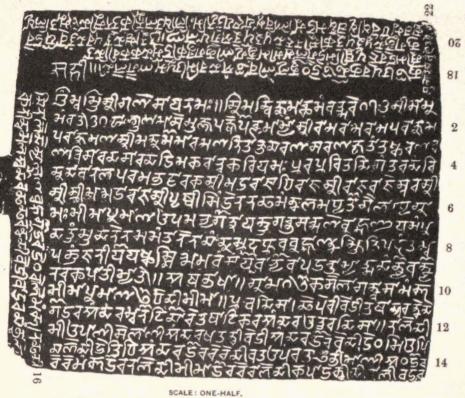

The Nadha mandala is now known as Rājnagar parganā. There is, however, a rivulet called Nadhala, reminiscent of the old name of the parganā. The gift village Gailā is identical with the modern Gvelā or Guelā. Rerā is the same as Remrā, mentioned also in an earlier charter (No. 58). The terms Rerālā and Chambhvālā mean 'resident of Rerā', and a 'resident of Chambhū' respectively. This latter place is to be identified with the modern Chhamhuim, also in the Rājnagar parganā. In the bhāshā portion the donated village is stated to be in Gadvāśā which cannot be identified.

The charter was written by Lakshmīkānta and engraved by the gold-smith Arjuna.

No. 75. CHAMBA PLATE OF PRITHVISIMHA, V.S. 1717

This plate is said to have been in the possession of the present $R\bar{a}jaguru$, Pandit Thākur Dās, at Chamba proper. It measures about $7\frac{3}{4}$ high by $9\frac{1}{2}$ wide excluding the handle on its left. In its top left corner it has a seal with a Nagari legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 19 lines in all, of which lines 15-16 occur in the left margin and lines 17-19 run inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The charter refers itself to the reign of Prithvīsimha and is dated in the Śāstra year 36, V.S. 1717, on the 12th day of the bright fortnight of Kārttika, which may be taken to correspond to Sunday, 4th November, A.D. 1660. It records that Prithvīsimha's eldest sister, princess Surūpadevī, gave one lāhudī of land at the village¹ of Bhadīha to a Brāhman called Bhagīrathaśarman of the Bhāradvāja gotra on the occasion of the consecration ceremony of a hospice. The donated land comprised several fields as detailed in the inscription.

The princess Surupadevi is described as the eldest sister of the king Prithvisimha (jyeshtha-bhayini) and as the granddaughter (daughter's daughter) of the king (mahārāja-dohatī, i.e., mahārājadauhitrī). The name of her maternal grandfather is, however, not mentioned.

The village of Bhadiha, now Bhadihām, is only one mile from and facing the city of Chamba, across the Ravi. It has also been mentioned in another charter (No. 51). It is the headquarters of a parganā of that very name.

The recipient of the present grant is identical with that of a grant by Balabhadra.

The charter was written by Pandit Lakshmikanta.

No. 76. DIVKHARI PLATE OF PRITHVISIMHA; V.S. 1718 (Plate XXIX, B)

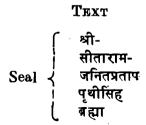

The provenance and ownership of this plate¹ could not be ascertained but since the land granted herein is stated to be in the vicinity of the village of Divkharī in the Sāch pargaṇā, it is named after that village. It measures about 7" high by 8½" wide excluding the handle on its left. In its top left corner it has a circular seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 14 lines, the last two lines running inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī, the Sanskrit portion being full of mistakes. The charter is dated in the Šāstra year 37, V.S. 1718, on the 5th day of the bright fortnight of Śrāvaṇa, which may be equated with Sunday 21st July, A.D. 1661. It registers the king's grant of one lāhaḍī of land between the two paths, one leading to Sācha and the other to Divakharī, in the Sācha manḍda, to a Brāhman called Prāgīdāsaśarman of the Kātyāyana gotra. The bhāshā portion mentions the al of the donee to be Matrarala, not a familiar one. The donee also received a homestead formerly belonging to one Ditu, also referred to by his al Rayvã. The record mentions also two individuals, Khayvasa Makhana and Koṭvāla Bidhiā, who demarcated the donated land on behalf of the king. The Śāch mandala refers to the Sāch pargaṇā, Sācha to Sach, the headquarters thereof, and Divakharī to Divkharī.

B.—CHAMBA PLATE OF UMEDASIMHA; V. S. 1805.

No. 77. LAKSHMI-NARAYANA TEMPLE PLATE OF SATRUSIMHA; V.S. 1734

(Plate XXX, A)

This plate belongs to the temple of Lakshmi-Nārāyana at Chamba proper and is now deposited in the Bhuri Singh Museum there, bearing the catalogue number B, 34. It measures about $8\frac{1}{2}$ high by 10" wide excluding the handle on its left. In its top left corner it has a seal with a Nāgarī legend containing the king's name. The inscription consists of 18 lines in all, of which lines 13-15 appear in the left margin and lines 16-18 inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyāli. The inscription is dated in the Śāstra year 54, V.S. 1734, 15th year of Śatrusimha—obviously referring to his reign—, on the 12th day of the bright fortnight of Vaiśākha. The Vikrama year corresponding to the Śāstra year 54 should be 1735 and not 1734 as mentioned in the record. Possibly here again we have a mistake similar to one already observed. The date may thus be equated with Tuesday, 23rd April, A.D. 1678. The mention of the regnal year is significant inasmuch as it shows that Śatrusimha's accession took place about A.D. 1664.

The inscription records the king's gift of six lāhadīs of land out of his personal property at Samota² to two Gosvāmins, Balabhadragiri and Bihārīgīri. The first of the two donees is stated to be a disciple of Rāmeśvaragiri, but probably the second was also a disciple of the same guru.

It is noteworthy that there is no indication of the grant being a perpetual one. On the other hand there seems to be an implication that it is liable to be seized in the case of the donees defaulting in their religious duty.

No. 78. CHAMBA PLATE OF UMEDASIMHA; V.S. 1805 (Plate XXX, B)

This plate's is reported to have been in the possession of the former Rājaguru Pandit Mohan Lāl, at Chamba. It measures about 9½" high by 11¾" wide excluding the handle on its left. In its top left corner is engraved a circular seal with a four-line legend containing the king's name. In the present instance it is not only the legend that is written in Nāgarī characters, but the whole of the inscription, too, is in that script. The inscription consists of 27 lines in all, of which lines 19-21 appear in the left margin and lines 22-27 run inversely in the top margin.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The charter is dated in the Śāstra year 24, V.S. 1805, Śaka 1610, on the full-moon day of Māgha, which may be equated with Sunday, 22nd January, A.D. 1749. Its object is to register the ⁸ Among the conventional epithets applied to the king are some which are not met with in any of the previous cherters.

^a The reference is possibly not to Balabhadragiri and his guru, but to Balabhadragiri and Bihārigiri as implied in the bhāshā portion.

⁴ This probably implies that in the event of any misconduct on their part the grant might be confiscated.

king's grant of a house-site and two lāhadīs of land to a Brāhman named Chakra-pāṇi of the Bhāradvāja gotra. The house site is stated to be situated in the locality called Ukhrūdā in the city of Champaka (Chambā) and to have belonged to Mîā Ajab Singh. The locality is now known as Khrūdā Mohallā. The piece of land lay in the village of Kudī in the Hubār pargaṇā of the Bhaṭṭi wazārat, which is identical with the modern Kuddī there.

The two gifts were made on separate occasions. That of land is stated to have been made on an occasion when Umedasimha visited Lahore. The gift was a dakshinā to the Pandit for his reciting the Durgā-saptašatī, evidently invoking the blessings of the deity for safety and luck to the king during his journey. Such a journey in those days of poor communications was conceivably attended with risks and difficulties. I

¹ [The danger threatening Umed Singh on his way to Lahore came not from poor communications to which the hill people were accustomed, but from the chaotic conditions in the Punjab after the first invasion of Ahmad Shah Durrani in 1747-48. For Umed Singh could probably travel with only a small retinue, as a strong following would have been interpreted as an assumption of higher rank and of more power than the Mughals conceded to the petty Zamindar (what Umed Singh was in their eyes), and thus, as an insult to the new Mughal Governor whose favour he was trying to win. We know of the visit also of number of other rajas and princes of Chamba and other Himalayan States to the aughai court and always the following accompanying them seems to have been smail.—H. Goetz]

No. 79. CHAMBA PLATE OF RAJASIMHA; V.S. 1833 (Plate XXXI, A)

This plate is said to have been in the possession of one Chama, presumably of Chamba. It measures 7% high by 11" wide excluding the handle on its left. In its top left corner it has a circular seal with a four-line legend containing the king's name. As in the foregoing inscription, so in the present one, too, Nagari characters are employed both in the legend and in the record itself. The present inscription consists of 20 lines.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyāli. The charter is dated in the Śāstra year 52, V.S. 1833, Śaka 1698, on Tuesday, the 8th day of the bright fortnight of Śrāvaṇa, which regularly corresponds to Tuesday, 23rd July, A.D.

1776. It records the king's gift of three lāhaḍīs of land at the village of Lower Gamgvāha in the Sāch pargaṇā to a Brāhman, Vidyādhara Śarman by name of the Atri gotra. The record also acquaints us with the names of the father and grandfather of the donor as well as of the donee.

The village Gamgvāha has been mentioned in two earlier inscriptions as well (Nos. 18, 36). The present inscription mentions two villages of that name one being upper and the other lower. They are now called Gugāmh Uprlā and Gugāmh Jhiklā respectively. Suratānapura, which is stated to be in their vicinity, is identical with the modern Sultānpur there.

The charter was written by Pandit Govardhaus, evidently a disciple of one Pandit Sivabhūshana.

10½" high by 6½" wide, the inscription running breadthwise. The plate has no handle. Nor is there any seal on it. The inscription covers 16 lines, the last two appearing in the top margin. The document is written in a cursive hand in Tākarī characters. It is stated in the document itself towards the end that it was written by Rājasimha. Thus, the present plate provides us with a specimen of the king's own hand-writing. The engraver engraved whatever the king wrote on the sheet of copper with pen and ink.

The language is Chambyālī throughout. The record is dated on the 25th day of Jeth (Jyeshtha) in V. S. 1845 (A. D. 1788). It is an unusual document inasmuch as it does not register any land-grant or the like, but contains a treaty between Rājasimha, the ruler of Chamba, and Samsārachanda, the chief of Kangra.

The terms of the treaty aim at the maintenance of friendly relations between the two rulers.

The treaty was written by Rājasimha at his camp at Nadoṇa, now Nadaun, in Kangra in the presence of several witnesses mentioned by name in the record.

No. 81. VADI GRANT OF SRISIMHA; V. S. 1913

This plate is said to have been in the possession of Pandit Durjodhan alias Purshottam at Chamba. It is not included in Dr. Vogel's collection. It therefore follows that it was discovered subsequently, like the Chamba plate of Balabhadra of V. S. 1649 (No. 33). The plate consists of three small sheets of copper mixed with brass, dovetailed into one whole. It measures 8" high by 13" wide excluding the handle on its left. The reverse of the plate shows traces of what appears to be a rejected or cancelled inscription. Though nothing can be read of its contents, its script is Nāgarī which is also employed in the grant under discussion. The inscription consists of 15 lines. In its top left corner it has a circular seal with a four-line legend containing the king's name.

From the way the inscription stops abruptly, without completing the verse quoted from the Durgāsaptaśatī, it appears to be an unfinished charter. The space left blank in line 1, for the numerals indicating the particular Vikrama year, leads to the same conclusion. Still, considering that the donee in this instance is a deity, the grant seems to have actually been issued and the document is, therefore, to be regarded as a valid one.

The language is partly Sanskrit and partly Chambyālī. The charter is dated in the Śāstra year 32, corresponding to V. S. 1913, on the new-moon day in the month of Māgha on the Ardhodaya occasion. Since this particular parvan falls only on a Sunday, the date is verifiable. It, thus, corresponds to Sunday, 25th January, A. D. 1857.

The inscription records that king Śrīsimha made an offering of the village called Vāṭikā or Vāḍī in the Panjlā pargaṇā to the goddess Jalamukhī, the deity of that village. The inhabitants of that village were exempted from all sorts of taxes, forced labour, etc. The whole produce from that village was to be spent on conducting the daily worship of the goddess.

Vāṭikā is the Sanskrit name of the village Vādī which still exists in the Panjlā parganā. The other villages mentioned in the record are Bhujā and Kikīhā which are identical with Bhujjā and Kakīhām respectively. The first of these is referred to also in an earlier inscription (No. 63).

No. 82. LAKSHMINARAYANA TEMPLE PLATE OF SRISIMHA; V. S. 1915—1917

This plate is built into the left-hand wall of the main gate, leading to the spacious courtyard within which there is a group of six stone temples, the principal one being that of Lakshmi-Nārāyaṇa.

Like the foregoing inscription of Śrīsimha, the present one, too, is in Nāgarī characters. A small portion in the beginning is composed in Sanskrit, while the rest is all in Chambyālī.

It records that on the 27th of Śrāvaṇa in the Śāstra year 34, V. S. 1915, king Śrīsimha issued orders to Lāhadyāļa Śiva and Mehatā Nagendra for the construction of a gate in front of the temple of Lakshmī-Nārāyaṇa, that the work was started immediately and that on the 19th of Śrāvaṇa in the Śāstra year 36, V. S. 1917, the construction was completed. The gate is called Vaikuṇṭhadvāra in the inscription. Mehatā Nagendra is stated to be the Wazīr (Vajira)² to the deity of the temple.

The record also mentions various artisans and workmen by name who were employed in the construction of the gate.

Towards the end of the record two Sanskrit verses are quoted, announcing the high reward awaiting the builders of temples.

The inscription closes with the mention of its writer who is one Upādhyāya Mirachu, an original inhabitant of Viśvasthalī,³ but at that time a resident of Champā (Chambā).

¹ For a brief description of them, see ACS, Pt. I, p. 10.

In the Sanskrit portion this term is rendered by mantrin.

⁸ This is identical with the modern Basobli State,

STONE INSCRIPTIONS

No. 83. LAKSHMI-NARAYANA TEMPLE NICHE INSCRIPTION; SASTRA 55 (Plate XXXII, A)

In the southern wall of the temple of Lakshmī-Nārāyaṇa at Chamba is a projecting niche with two small stone pillars, at a height of about 9' from the ground level. On the right-hand pillar is incised a short epigraph in three lines in the Devāsesha script. The letters are beautifully formed and deeply cut. Although the inscription is not hidden from view, yet it had remained unnoticed until recently.

When I copied it in June 1939, Pandit Thakur Das told me that even he had not seen it till then.

It is dated in the year 55, which plainly refers to the Sastra reckoning. As regards its contents, it simply records that the niche in question was caused to be built by one Pandit Durugu. This name is followed by another read as nai Gyana and taken for nāi Gyānā, i.e., 'Gyānā, the barber.' From this it follows that the niche was dedicated jointly by the Pandit and the barber. Pandit Thakur Das, who concurred with me in this interpretation, saw nothing strange in such a joint performance by two individuals of such unequal social standing as is exemplified by the present inscription.

It is not easy to assign a definite date to this record in spite of the fact that it mentions the year 55. As is characteristic with the Sastra reckoning, the number of centuries is omitted here. Such omission is often supplied by some accidental evidence. In the present instance, the mention of pandit Durugu furnishes us with that kind of aid. We know that the writer of Mangaloa plate of Pratapasimha (No. 25) is also one Pandit Durugu, and it may be presumed that he is identical with Pandit Durugu of the inscription under discussion. This presumption is raised to probability when we observe that the above mentioned record of Pratapasimha is dated in the Sastra year 58, that is, only three years later than the date of the present epigraph, so to say. In the case of Pratapasimha, however, we could equate the Sastra year 58 with the Vikrama Samvat 1639 with certainty. Accepting the proposed identification of Pandit Durugu of the two records, we may now equate the Sastra year 55 with V. S. 1636, corresponding to A. D. 1579, which would be the date of the present record. It may be added that the characters of the inscription assort very well with this date.

No. 84. CHABUTRA STONE INSCRIPTION; V. S. 1717 (Plate XXXII, B)

This record is carefully engraved on a block of stone, measuring about $2' \times 2'$, set in the eastern wall of a chabūtrā at Chamba proper. The chabūtrā is a square raised platform paved with slabs of state stone. It is situated on the left side of the road leading to Bhadravah, at the northern end of the plateau on which the city of Chamba stands, and is not far from the Dak Bungalow there. It commands a splendid view of the Sal river, flowing in front of it deep in a gorge. About a furlong down, this tributary joins the Ravi. When I visited the chabūtrā in 1939, it had a sapling of a pipal tree recently planted in its middle. The original pipal spoken of in the inscription had long disappeared and subsequently several other trees one after the other. The sapling I saw, I am told, was also a successor of that pipal which had been planted there over a quarter of a century previously and was seen by Prof. Vogel who has left us an account of it.1

The epigraph consists of ten lines. Its script is Takari and language Sanskrit. The average size of the letters is 1\frac{1}{4}". It records a pious act of public utility by a private individual, namely the planting of an asvattha (Ficus religiosa) and the erection of a stone terrace around it by one Sundaradasa, son of Viradasa and grandson of Balia Bhagirathadasa, belonging to the Garga gotra. The terrace with the tree was intended to be a shady retreat for weary wayfarers during the heat of the summer. The date of the dedication is specified in full details as Vikrama Samvat 1717, Saka 1582, Sastra 36, the 13th day of the dark fortnight of the month of Vaisākha, Wednesday, at the time of Vernal Equinox, which, taking the month as pūrnimānta, regularly corresponds to the 28th March, A. D. 1660.

The preciseness of the details of this date is the chief interest of the inscription, and it is perhaps on that account that it has been prominently noticed by Cunningham, 2 Kielhorn, 8 Vogel 4 and others. 5 The use of three eras together in this record is a singular instance and has proved of great help in settling certain difficult points in the Chamba chronology.

Nos. 85—103. VAJRESVARI TEMPLE INSCRIPTIONS (Plate XXXIII)

There is a beautiful old temple of Bhagavatī or Vajreśvarī at Chamba, situated at the entrance to the Sarota valley. It is believed to belong to the 11th century A. D. There is a short three-line inscription carved on one of the two pillars in front of the entrance to the shrine. Besides, there are eighteen brief one-line epigraphs that occur on the outer walls of the temple. The inscription on the pillar informs us that on the 17th day of Ahada (Āshādha) in the year 92 the work was started in the temple. The work evidently refers to repairs or renovation and the year 92 to the Śāstra reckoning. Since the palaeography of this record does not differ much from that of the Chabūtrā stone inscription of V. S. 1717, the Sāstra year 92 of the present inscription may be equated with V. S. 1773, corresponding to A. D. 1716. This inscription as well as most of the remaining eighteen mention each the name of an artisan. If the equation of the date is correct, it will follow that the reparation to the temple was done during the reign of Udayasinha (Udai Singh).

of the goddess Chāmuṇdā there, and found an inscription engraved on it in Nāgarī characters.

The inscription is divided into three parts, one on the top, one in the middle and one at the bottom section of the bell. The first is invocatory: quoting an appropriate verse from the Durgāsaptośatī. The second gives the date and the purport; in the Śāstra year 38, V. S. 1819, on Bhriguvāsara, the 8th day—Mahāshṭamī—of the bright fortnight of Chaitra, one Panḍit Vidyādhara made a gift of the bell to the goddess Chādā, that is Chaṇḍikā or Chāmuṇḍā. The third part of the inscription states that the bell weighed 27 seers, cost 27 rupees and was cast by a copper-smith, Ghamaṇḍi by name.

The given date regularly corresponds to Friday, 2nd April, A. D. 1762.

APPENDIX A

(Benedictory and Imprecatory Verses)

१ अन्घो द्वादश जन्मानि दश जन्मानि शूकरः । कुष्ठी जन्मसहस्राणि भूभिदानापहारकः ।। (Anushṭubh)

The confiscator of a land-grant (will become) blind for twelve births, a hog for ten births (and) a leper for thousands of births.

This verse occurs in the following inscriptions: Nos. 2, 11, 20, 27, 29, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 37, 38, 39, 40, 43, 63, 64, 78, 79.

२ अस्मिन्वंशे सुविस्तीर्णे यः कश्चिन्नृपतिर्भवेत् । तस्याहं हस्तलग्नोऽस्मि शासनं मा व्यतिकमेत् ॥ (Anushṭubh)

Whosever may become king in this prosperous family, I solicit him not to violate (this my) grant.

This verse occurs in the following inscriptions: Nos. 16, 21, 27.

३ दानपालनयोर्मध्ये दानाच्छ्रेयोऽनुपालनम् । दानात्स्वर्गमबाप्नोति पालनादच्युतं पदम् ॥ (Anushṭubh)

Between a gift and its preservation, the preservation is more meritorious than the gift. By giving one attains to heaven, by preserving to the position from where there is no more falling (into this world).

This verse occurs in the following inscriptions: Nos. 3, 49, 61.

४ न विषं विषमित्याहुर्बह्यस्वं विषमुच्यते । विषमेकािकनं हन्ति ब्रह्मस्वं पुत्रपौत्रकम् ॥ (Anushṭubh)

Poison is not poison: a Brāhman's property is poison. Poison kills one; a Brāhman's property sons and sons (i.e., the Brāhman's curse will doom the confiscator of his property as well as the confiscator's progeny to death).

This verse occurs only in one inscription, No. 21. ५ पालनात्परमो धर्म: पालनात्परमं यशः ।

पालनात्परमः स्वर्गो गरीयस्तेन पालनम् ॥ (Anushtubh)

From preserving (a gift results) supreme merit, great fame (and) the highest heaven; hence preserving (a gift) is exceedingly worthy.

This verse occurs in the following inscriptions: Nos. 3, 7, 8, 9, 10, 16, 17, 19, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 34, 35, 41, 43, 48, 51, 53, 54, 59, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 69, 75, 76, 78, 79.

६ ये चैतद्ग्रामरत्नं नृपकररिहतं पालयन्ति प्रतापै-स्तेषां सत्कीर्तिगाथा दिशि दिशि नियतं गीयते वन्दिवृन्दैः। ग्रामे गृह्णन्त्यमुष्मिन् किमपि नृपतयो हिन्दवो वा तुरुष्का गोकोलक्रव्यमिश्रं नियतमनुदिनं भुञ्जते ते स्वधर्मम् ॥ (Sragdharā)

¹ In the inscriptions Nos. 27, 31, 34, 37, 38, 39, 40, this first quarter of the verse reads अन्यक: सप्त बन्मानि.

In the inscriptions Nos. 27, 32, this last quarter of the verse reads भूभीदानापहारक, and in Nos. 35, 38 स्वयंदला-यहारक:

[।] In many cases यहा. is replaced by तप:

⁴ Many inscriptions read पालयत् instead of पालनम्.

^{*} This is not a verse from any smriti, though it is intended to pass as such. See remarks about it, under inscription No. 45.

Those who protect this jewel of a village given away by the king himself, their high renown on that account is regularly sung everywhere by panegyrists. Those kings, whether Hindus or Muslims, who seize anything of that village, certainly sin against their respective religions as if by daily partaking of beef and pork.

This verse occurs only in one inscription, No. 45.

७ वाचा दत्तं मनोदत्तं दत्तं पाणिकुशोदकैः । यो हरेत् त्रीणि दानानि स घोरं नरकं व्रजेत् ।। (Anushtubh)

८ सामान्यो'यं धर्मसेतुर्नराणां' काले काले' पालनीयो' भर्वाद्भः । सर्वानेतान्भाविनो' भूमिपालान्' भूयो भूयो' याचते रामचन्द्रः॥' (Śālinī)

९ सुवर्णमेकं गामेकां भूमेरप्येकमंगुलम् । हरन्नरकमाप्नोति यावच्चन्द्रदिवाकरौ ॥ (Anushṭubh)

१० स्वदत्तां परदत्तां वा यो हरेत वसुन्धराम् । १ विष्टां वर्षसहस्राणि विष्टायां जायते कृमिः ।। (Anushṭubh)

He, who confiscates the land given by himself or given by others, is reborn as a germ in faeces for sixty thousand years.

¹ In most instances this word is substituted by साधार which is plainly a mislection for साधारण.

A variant is नपाए। which occurs here in one case, No. 50.

[•] Instead of काल काले Nos. 52 and 64 have स्थ स्व काले.

[•] No. 81 has रक्षणीय: in place of पालनीय:.

[•] Nos. 50, 52 and 77 have म्योभ्य: instead of सर्वनितान.

^{*} Nos. 50, 52, 77 and 81 have नत्वा नत्वा instead of भूयोभ्य:.

[•] Nos. 50, 52 and 77 present the two halves of the verse in the reversed order.

[•] Nos. 15, 18 and 36 have the second quarter reading ब्रह्मवृत्ति हरेत् य:. Nos. 17 and 33 have the second quarter reading ब्रह्मवृत्ति हरेत् य:.

[&]quot;The second half of the verse in No. 8 reads विच्ठायां कृमिर्भू त्वा पितृभिः सह पच्यते.

This verse occurs in the following inscriptions: Nos. 1, 3, 4, 8, 15, 17, 18, 27, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 36, 37, 39, 50, 52, 63, 64, 67, 68, 71, 74, 78, 79.

A COPPER-PLATE GRANT OF BAHADUR SINGH OF KULLU

Among the copper-plates in possession of Pandit Mohan Lal. quru to His Highness the Raia of Chamba, there is one, which presents the exceptional case of a grant, the grantee of which can be readily identified, whereas the identification of its donor affords a certain amount of difficulty. The grantee, " the great Pandit Ramāpati, the son of Pandit Surānand and a resident of the illustrious town of Chamba." was an ancestor of the present owner of the copper-plate and must have held the office of rajaguru for more than half a century, under three, perhaps even four consecutive rulers of Chamba. His name occurs as that of the author of the title-deed on the copper-plates issued by Pratap Singh, and on those of Balabhadra, the latter's grandson, during the earlier part of his reign. It is clear that Ramapati must also have been the spiritual preceptor of Balabhadra's father Virabhana, though it is not attested by any document. His name is last found on a plate dated Sastrasamvat 86, Vikrama-samvat 1667, Kārttika ba. ti. 11.1 The next grant issued by Balabhadra in Sastra-samvat 5, Vikrama-samvat 1686, Magha su. ti. 12, is signed by a Pandit Padmanabha, and all later plates by Ramapati's son Laksmikanta. We may therefore assume that the death of Ramapati occurred between the two dates mentioned. The earliest mention of his name is on the copper-plate, which is here edited for the first time. We do not know who ruled Chamba in the Sastra year 35 (A. D. 1559); probably it was Ganesavarman, who was certainly still Raja in the preceding year. That Ramapati stood high in favour with his noble patrons, appears from the fact that three more plates, besides the present one, record grants of land bestowed upon him, namely, two of the four plates which we possess of Pratap Singh and the first of the twenty plates of Balabhadra.

It is strange to find that the donor of the grant under discussion does not bear one of the four names enumerated, but calls himself Bahādur Singh. From his titles it may be inferred that he was an independent chief, but the name is not found in the genealogical roll of the Chambā rājās, nor in any other copper-plates. The simplest explanation would be to assume that Bahādur Singh was another name of Rājā Gaṇeśavarman, which would be in agreement with the custom of double nomenclature still in vogue among the Chambā rulers. This assumption would be the more plausible, as the inscription mentions as second donor the heir-apparent (yuvarāja), Pratāp Singh, and this was as stated above, the name of Gaṇeśavarman's son and successor.

See the list of Chamba copper-plates published, A, S. R. 1902-03, pp. 245-6.

The Sastra-samvat is the same as the Saptarsi-samvat, or Lokakāla, also known as Rāja-samvat, Pahāri-samvat or Kaccā samvat of. Cunningham, Bock of Indian cras, p. 6 sqq.

On the other hand, it is noteworthy that Chambā is only mentioned as the place of residence of the grantee, not as that of the donor, as is the case with all other copper-plates issued by Rājās of Chambā. It is also remarkable that the motto Satyam pramānam of the donor of this grant is not found on any of the Ganeśavarman's plates. A still greater objection is that none of the localities mentioned in the inscription are known to exist in Chambā. May we assume then that Bahādur Singh was the ruler of some other State? The supposition is admissible, for among the plates of Balabhadra is one which is issued in favour of the guru of his neighbour, the Rājā of Nūrpūr.

The surname Singh was only in use among a limited number of Rājpūt families, as in Kuļļū, where it replaced the older Pāl. It is said that the first Rājā of Kuļļū who adopted the surname was Sidh Singh. Now we find that the name of his successor was Bahādur Singh, and there is every reason to believe that he was the donor of the grant in question. The exact date of his reign is unknown, but Jagat Singh, who ruled in the middle of the 17th century, is separated from him by four Rājās. Assuming twenty-five years for each reign, we arrive at the conclusion that Bahādur Singh must have lived about the middle of the 16th century, which is, as we saw approximately the date of our inscription. Moreover, Bahādur Singh's successor was Pratāp Singh, who consequently must have been yuvarāja during his lifetime.

Our hypothesis will become a certaint it the localities mentioned in the grant can be identified with places in Kullū. it is clear that a Rājā cannot dispose of land outside his own territory.

The "hermitage of Pulastya" (Pulastyāśrama) I am unable to identify with certainty. Though the worship of rsīs, locally called rikhis, is very prominent in Kullū, no shrine dedicated to Pulastya is said to exist. Mr. H. Calvert, I.C.S., Assistant Commissioner of the Kullū Sub-division, has, at my request, made enquiries regarding this point on the occasion of the Dasahra fair at Sultānpūr. But among the numerous rsīs, nāgas and other devatās gathered to pay their respect to 'laghum' a, Pulastya was conspicuous by his absence.

The cond ocality mentioned in the grant of Bahādur Singh is the village of Hatta. This, I believe, can be identified with certainty. On the confluence of the Biyās and the Ropru nālā, half a mile east of Bajaurā (map Bajaora; lat. 31° 50′ long. 77° 13′) we meet with a hamlet of the name Hāt, which would exactly correspond with Skr. Hatta (Cf. ghāt, from Skr. ghattā and gharāt, watermill, from Skr. gharatta). Hāt is also the name of one of the two phātīs, in which the Bajaurā kōthī is subdivided. The Sanskrit hatta means "a market", a very appropriate name for the spot, where the Central Asian trade route, after crossing the Dulcī Pass, reaches the Upper Biyās valley. The antiquity of Hāt is attested by a very fine

The genealogical list of the Kullū Rājās is evidently based on an authentic variational Unfortunately no proper system of transliteration has been followd, which renders it often impossible to decide on the correct forms of the names. Compare, for instance, Shureedut Taeshur Pal and Shirree Jerashur Pai. It would be well to re-edit the list, if the authentic vaineāvals were proturable.

lings temple, profusely decorated with carvings and by the remnants of three more stone temples. One of these, known as Jhaumpru sail (sail-a stone temple from silāstone), was still extant in the summer of 1901, though much ruined and partly buried in the sands of the Ropru Khad. This points to the fact that this stream has changed its course, which probably was the reason why Hāt became superseded by Bajaurā, situated at a safe distance from the dangerous confluence.

It will be seen that the Ropru nālā is the boundary between Kulļū and Maṇḍi, as noticed by the traveller Moorcroft, who also mentions the Bajaurā fort, which must have been demolished shortly before 1870. Its site is now occupied by a teaplantation. I am inclined to think that this fort (or a previous one standing on the same spot) is referred to in our copper-plate if at least we may assign to the word dranga the same meaning which it once had in Kaśmīr, namely, that of "a frontier fort, or a watch station."

In the same passage Moorcroft says that the Ropru flows at the foot of an eminence, on which stood the village of Syri. This I feel inclined to identify with the Sīrī-sthāvara of the copper-plate. Its position not far from Hat would make the identification very plausible. I must, however, remark that according to the information supplied by Mr. Calvert, the correct form of the name would seem to be Sairi. On the survey-map the name Sirg evidently marks the position of the village referred to by Moorcroft. It is interesting to find that the land granted by Bahadur Singh consisted of saffron-fields. Cultivation of saffron, for which Kasmir is still famous.4 is nowadays practically unknown in Kullū, though the physical conditions are probably as favourable there as in the valley of the Jhelam. Mr. Calvert informs me that there used to be saffron fields in Kullū. There was one, he says, quite near and below the castle which is now a tea-field belonging to Mr. Minniken; and up to five or six years ago there were a few saffron plants remaining there. It will be noticed how well this agrees with the topography of our inscrip-For it was the ancient castle of Bajaura, near which the saffron fields granted to Pandit Ramapati must have been situated. The area of the granted land is expressed in prastha, a measure of grain, according to the custom, universally practised in the hills, of indicating the size of the land by the quantity of seed-corn required for its cultivation. The pathā (the modern form of prastha) is still the unit used in Kullū for measuring grain. One pathā of husked rice is equivalent to 41 kaccā ser (nearly 2 pakkā ser or 4 lbs.). Twenty pathā make one lākh. The total area of the land given to Pandit Ramapati was therefore 41 lakh, and required 180 vakkā ser of seed-corn for its cultivation.

¹ Capt. Harcourt, op. cit. pp. 196 and 347 sqq., gives an enthusiastic, but no always accurate, description of this temple and its decoration. The alto-relievoes represent Ganga and Yamuna on both sides of the entrance, and Ganeta, Visqu and Durga Astabhuja in the outer niches of the south, west and north walls respectively. As we have thus been able to locate in Kullū at least one of the places mentioned in the grant of Bahadur Singh, his identity with the Kullu Raja of that name may be regarded as certain. This conclusion adds considerably to the interest of the inscription. Kullū is undoubtedly one of the most ancient principalities of the Panjab Hills. It is described by Hiuen' Tsiang under the name K'iu-lu-to, and on two Chamba copper-plates of the 11th century mention is made of the Lord of Kulūta, which is the ancient designation under which it is repeatedly referred to in Sanskrit literature. Nervertheless not a single pre-Muhammadan inscription has come to light in Kullū, a fact which is probably due to the backwardness of its inhabtitants, who are described by Hiuen Tsiang as "coarse and common appearance" and "of a hard and fierce nature." The inscriptions found in Kullu are all comparatively modern; they are without an exception composed in the local vernacular and written in a kind of Takarī derived from the ancient Sarada. These two circumstances combined render their interpretation far from easy. One of the oldest epigraphs is that on the famous temple Of Dhungri near Manali, in the upper part of the Bivas valley, which is known as Wazīrī Parol.4 This shrine. profusely decorated with woodcarving, is dedicated to Hirma Devi, the patron goddess of Kullū, in whom students of Sanskrit literature will recognize the rāksasī Hidimbā, the spouse of Bhimasena the Pandava. The inscription is of special interest for my present subject, because it mentions the name of Rājā Bahādur Singh as founder of the temple. Its date is J(y)eth pra. 20, the 29th year of the Sastra-samvat. The figures indicating the centuries are omitted, which is characteristic of this era, so that it would be impossible to fix its date without the aid of some other document. This we possess in our copper-plate which is dated Samvat 35. Karttika su. ti. 11. It is true that here also the date is expressed in the Sastra-samvat but, as we know that the grantee died between A. D. 1610 and 1629, the figures for the century can be supplied with certainty. The corresponding Christian year must be 1559. Consequently the year of the Dhungri inscription can only be A. D. 1553, and we have thus been enabled to date one of the most monuments of the Kullū valley.

Another prominent temple of the upper Biyas valley is that of Samdhya Devi or "the gooddess of dawn" in the ancient village of Jagatsukh, which traditionally is believed to have once been the capital of Kullū. The temple of Samdhya Devi has been largely renewed, but it contains some portions which are evidently ancient. On two slabs placed on the enclosing wall at the entrance of the courtyard an inscription is cut in three lines of 40 to 48 cm. in length. I must, for reasons stated above, abstain from giving a full transcript and translation of this epigraph. So much is certain that the first line reads: Sri Maharaja Udhran (read Urdhan²) Pāl. The second line commences with the name of Samdhyā Devī, and the third seems to contain a date, which I read Sam. 4 (?) ba, ti. 2. It refers of course to the Sāstra-samvat, and we must look for some other document to decide which figure we are to supplement for the hundreds.

Dr. Bühler, Indische Palaeographie, p. 57, speaks of "die sogenannte Takkari der Dogra von Jammu and Nachbarschaft." In reality Takari (or Tankari) is commonly used all through the Panjab Hills, and is also known in the plains.

⁴ The word parol, prol in the dialects of Kångrå, Kullü and Chambå, means "the main gate of any large building especially a palace or castle and, used as pars pro toto, the palace itself." It is a very appropriate name for that narrow part of the upper Biyås valley, which towards the Rohtang pass assumes the appearance of a gate. The word parol is presumably like Hindi paul derived from Skr. pratoli. See my note in Album Kern (Leiden, 1903), p. 235, eqg.

The name U[r]dhan Pāl is found in the vamśāvalī, as that of Bahādur Singh's third predecessor. The date of the temple of Samdhyā Devī is therefore separated from that of Hidimbā by the time occupied by the full reigns of Kailās Pāl and Sidh Pāl, and the partial reigns of Urdhan Pāl and Bahādur Singh. We may say by three full reigns. We shall therefore have to take either A. D. 1428 or 1528 as the date of the temple at Jagatsukh. In the first case the reigns of the intervening Rājās would have been very long, namely some forty years each; in the second case they could not have exceeded an average of seven years. The latter assumption seems to me the more plausible. Possibly the Jagatsukh inscription falls towards the end of Urdhan Pāl's reign and that of Dhungrī in the beginning of that of Bahādur Singh which would leave a somewhat larger space for the two intervening reigns of Kailās Pāl and Sidh Pāl.

The above topographical discussion points to the fact that Bahadur Singh ruled over the whole of Kullū proper, i.e., the upper Biyas valley. This is quite in accordance with the tradition which holds that he was the first to extend his territory. which under the Pal dynasty consisted only of Wazīrī Parol. There is one point, however, still to be elucidated. The present Wazīrīs, Lag Mahārāja and Lag Sāri, once formed an independent principality which was overthrown by Rājā Jagat This is fully confirmed by one of the Persian Sanads, dated the 3rd of A. H. 1067, addressed by Dara Shikoh to Jagat Jumāda-th-thānivah. "camīndār" of Kullū. As we have seen that Bahādur Singh's rule extended over Bajaurā and Dhungrī we shall have to assume that the principality of Lag, situated between those two places, though ruled by its own Rājā, was tributary to the Mahārāja of Kuļļū. Another point closely connected with this question is that of the origin of Sultanpur, the modern capital of Kullu. This place, situated on the confluence of the Biyas and the Sarvari stream, is said to have become the capital in the reign of Jagat Singh, who conquered it from the last Rājā of Lag. The latter's name is given as Sultan Cand in the Kangra Gazetteer, but in the same work it is stated elsewhere that Jay Cand was the last Rājā of Lag, and Sultān Cand his brother. According to Captain Harcourt's informants, Sultanpur was named after this Sultan Cand.

It must, a priori, appear strange, that the new capital of the Kullū Rājās was named after a petty chief, by whose expulsion it fell into their possession. In the sanad, referred to above, the name of the Rājā of Lag, after whose death Jagat Singh annexed the territory, is neither Jay Cand, nor Sultān Cand, but Jok (read Jog) Cand. This also tends to raise a doubt as to the authenticity of the said tradition. Nor is it in accordance with another tradition preserved by Moorcroft that "the removal (from Nagar, the ancient capital) took place about three centuries ago," which would mean about 1525 A. D.

It will be seen that in our inscription Bahadur Singh calls himself by another name. Suratrāna-rāja. The word Suratrāna is often found in Sanskrit inscriptions.³ as the rendering of the Arabic sultan, so that the name can mean nothing else than Raja Sultan. And the fact is still known in Kullu. as Mr. Calvert informs me, that Bahadur Singh called himself by that name. In connection therewith it is of great interest that there exists a tradition, different from that mentioned above, regarding the origin of Sultanpur. During my stay there I was told by the old wazir of the Rai of Rūpī, the descendant of the ancient Rājās, that Sultānpūr was founded by Sultān Singh, and Dhalpur, the suburb on the right bank of the Sarvari, by his brother Dhal Singh. It will be noticed how well this agrees chronologically with the passage quoted from Moorcroft. For Sultan Singh, alias Bahadur Singh, ruled and it is only natural that, after conquering the valley as far down as Bajaura, he removed his capital to a place situated in the centre of his dominions, while probably keeping Nagar as his summer-residence. Anyhow, it seems to me highly probable in view of the above, that it was not a defeated Raja of Lag, but the victorious chief of Kullū, who gave his name to the modern capital.

We have already seen that the copper-plate grant under discussion mentions as second donor the heir-apparent Pratāp Singh, and thereby establishes the authenticity of the genealogical roll of the Kullū Rājās published by Captain Harcourt. Our inscription aquaints us, moreover, with Bahādur Singh's grand-wazīr (Skr. mahāmantrin) Nārāyan Singh, and with the Rājā's three daughters Sunu, Gangā and Rango. For it was on the occasion of the marriage of these three ladies, that the grant was given to the rājaguru of Chambā; from which it may be inferred that they were married into the ruling family of that State. The bridegroom was presumably Pratāp Singh, the heir-apparent (to wit, of Chambā), if he had not yet succeeded his father Ganeśavarman by that time. For a Rājā of Kullū could not give his daughters in marriage to any one below a ruling chief or heir-apparent. The saying is that in matters of war and marriage a Rājā deals only with his equals. For two or more sisters to be married at the same time and to the same person is by no means an uncommon practice among Hill Rājpūts. The liberality shown on this occasion to Pandit Ramāpati indicates that Bahādur Singh attached much importance to a matrimonial alliance with Chambā. For we read at the end of the inscription that the Rājā "gave to Ramāpati the price of the land and again presented him with the same, "viz., he gave him in addition to the land its full value in money. And on his annual inspection of his possessions in Kullū he would receive a large hawk and a ser of saffron. The former may seem a somewhat unsuitable present to a pious Brahman, whose dharma forbids him to kill animals. But we know from elsewhere that the Rājās of Kullū, and probably other chiefs in the same position, were in the habit of sending a hawk as a tribute to the Emperor of Delhi.¹ Bahādur Singh evidently wished to do special honour to Ramāpati by a present otherwise due to his suzerain.

Besides a shop inside the frontier-fort, the gurudaksinā comprised also "a very excellent thathikā to catch hawks," (śyena-bandhana-thathikā, parama-śresthā). The word thathikā is not Sanskrit, but evidently a sanskritised vernacular term which would seem to be the modern thātī of Kuļļū dialect, a technical term particularly used in connection with hawking. I quote the following from the Gazetteer.² "The best way of catching hawks was the thātī, which is a sort of triangular enclosure erected at a prominent place on a ridge or spur, so as to draw the attention of the birds. Poles are set up at the three angles, and two of the sides are enclosed with nets, but the base of the triangle which is towards the hill top is clear; the apex is on the down hill side. A chikor is tied close to the ground inside the enclosure to attract the hawks by its call, and when one swoops down upon it, a man who is concealed in a thicket close by rushes forward, and drives the hawk into the net where he secures it."

Regarding the inscription under discussion the following points may be noted. The copper-plate, on which it is engraved, is of irregular shape, the average height being 21.5 cm., and the breadth 26 cm. at the top and 32 cm. at the bottom. To the proper right a handle of 2 cm. in length projects. The inscription consists of 20 lines. The first seven lines are only from 21.5 to 22.5 cm. broad, leaving an open rectangular space to the proper right, which is occupied by the motto, and by lines 18—19, which are written vertically and are about 10 cm. in length. The last line is written all along the proper right margin. It would seem that these three lines were added afterwards. The letters which measure 1 to 1.5 cm. are well engraved. The character is a transition from the ancient \S āradā to the modern Tākarī or Tānkarī. It is interesting to note that r after a consonant is sometimes expressed in the old fashion by a stroke to the proper right (cf. dranga, line 10) or in the modern way by a stroke to the proper left (cf. candra, line 18). The peculiar script used in the copper-plates of this period is designated in Chambā by the name of Devāšeṣa. The language is Sanskrit, metrcial only in the quotations from the Smṛti, which occur in the second portion of the inscription. Though by no means free from errors, the language, is comparatively correct, considering the date and the place of origin of the record. The mistakes are mostly due to negligence in observing the Samdhi rules and in the use of the signs of punctuation. I have made only such corrections as seemed necessary for the right understanding of the meaning. The lengthy Yamaka compound in lines 1-3 is regularly found in the Chambā grants of this period.

^{*} Kangra Gazetteer, Pt. II, p. 109 sq. In Diack's Grammar the word is spelled that. That the second syllable of the thathika is the instead of μ or t_i is possibly due to a clerical error. In the dialect of Chamba again the word is pronounced that.

- 1 Expressed by a symbol.
- Restored from analogous passages in Chambs copper-plates.
- The visarga is omitted in the original.
- 4 In the original there is an anustan over na. Possibly it belongs to the next syllable.
- The anusvaras over ga has been omitted in the original.
- The anusvara over pa has been omitted in the original.
- The ungrammatical form upabhuā janiyam occurre already in the Chamba copper-plates.
- The original has svayamdatapahārakah.
- The original has duhitur.
- 10 The correct construction would be cham kuukumate takan.
- 11 The original has bhumir.
- 18 The anusvara over di has been omitted in the original. After caturdaéa it has a visarga.
- 55 The original has Karttika, followed by a vertical stroke.
- 14 The original has sadharo yam.
- 18 The original has parvatona, a form evidently due to verracular influence: ct.. the words parja (Skr. proja) parvis m (Skr. proja), etc.
 - 16 The original seems to have datam, but the second absert is slightly damaged.
 - 17 The visarga is omitted in the original.
- 10 The form samkalpadattā corresponds with the vernacular samkalp dittā. The meaning of samkalp is "a donation, a grant."
- 10 The last three words evbviously belong to the original inscription, but lines 18-19 and the first part of 20 appear to have been added afterwards.

True warrant.

Om hail! He of the valour of the three Ramas, dexterous in attacking the enemy; he, whose heart has taken refuge at the lofty feet of the Beloved of Daksa's daughter: 2 he, who is experienced in warfare and with the fulness of his glory. imitative [of the rays] of the autumnal moon, has filled the Universe; the supreme prince, the king of kings, the illustrious lord, His Highness Bahadur Singh: the very illustrious heir-apparent Pratap Singh [and] the excellent prime-minister Nārāvan Singh offer to the great Pandit Ramāpati, the son of andit Suranand. who resides in the illustrious town of Chamba, the spotless descendant of three houses, who worships at the three divisions of the days and delights in the six duties [as a token] of their favour an ornamental charter [recording a grant] of land [and] adorned with their own lotus-like hands and thereby a gift of land, with [its] seed-corn, rent⁶ and so forth. He has been favoured and presented at the time of the marriage of the Rājā's first born daughter, Sunu by name, with [a field requiring] thirty pathas of seed-corn, situated in the neighbourhood of Pulastya's hermitage. At the time of the wedding of the Raja's daughter. Ganga by name, with [a field requiring thirty pathās of seed-corn in the vicinity of the village of Hat [and] at the wedding of the Raja's daughter. Rango by name, with [a field requiring] thirty pathās of seed-corn on Sīrī Hill, altogether a gift of saffron-fields with [their] seed-corn rent and so forth. [Further] a shop [kept by] Puru and Bhabho, inside the frontier-fort and a most excellent triangular net [thati] for catching hawks. With all this as a gurudaksinā has Pandit Ramāpati been favoured and presented by the Rājā, the illustrious Bahādur Singh. It should be enjoyed by him and his offspring for as long as the moon, the sun, the polar star and the earth shall endure.

He who confiscates it is to be chastised and killed, and will go down to hell. The following are verses from the law-books: "He who confiscates what he himself has given will be a blind man for twelve existences, a hog for ten existences [and] a leper for twelve existences." At the time of the marriage of Rājā Sultān's daughters a large hawk and a ser of saffron has been presented [to the grantee], and this is to be given every year at that very time when Ramāpati or his descendants come [to Kullū]. "He who takes away one gold piece, one cow or one inch of land, will go to

[•] It is difficult to decide, which exact meaning is to be assigned to the word blarana, either "the rent to be paid by the farmers to the landowner" or "the tribute to be paid to the king" or perhaps "the produce of the land,"

"The common law of men, firm like an embankment, should be guarded by you at any time; [this] Rāmacandra enjoins again and again upon all future princes." Rājā Bahādur Singh has given to Ramāpati the price of the land granted on occasion of the wedding, and has again presented him with the land.

¹ The literal meaning of vivaliat pravariana-bhumer (if the emendation be correct) would be "of the land coming forth from the wedding."
