P R E F A C E .

The present work is designed to afford not only a complete guide to the Vernacular of Tibet Proper, but also considerable technical information to the traveller in that little-explored land. The Tibetan territory is computed to hold a population of six millions, sparsely distributed over some 650,000 square miles ; and the time is said to be approaching when these extraordinary regions will be laid open to the enterprise of the explorer, the missionary, and the trader. In the days, then, that are to come, a knowledge of the idiom of the inhabitants will be a necessity.

Up to the present date, no grammar of the colloquial language has been placed before the public. Jäschke, indeed, in his learned works, has fully dissected the old classical language ; but the modern speech differs so materially from the literary vehicle, both in vocabulary and in grammatical structure, that a proficient in the latter might in vain attempt to hold converse with the native of to-day. The famous Moravian linguist, however, has brought together in his Dictionary great store of facts concerning the spoken tongue, particularly the Western ; and that store has proved a treasure-hoard to myself in these pages.

It is the lingua franca of the Tibetan Empire which has been analysed and codified in this Handbook ; not the dialectic forms spoken in corners of the country, as in Ládak, Lahul, and Sikkim, but the general Vernacular current in the heart of the land, and which will carry the traveller from west to east and from north-east to south. Besides availing myself of materials already published, I have had the advantage of close intercourse with two men formerly resident in Lhásá. Those two I freely consulted. A stay of three months in Darjiling last year, where I made the acquaintance of Tibetans from various districts, afforded much further help.

Three Parts are here attempted. First; the grammatical circumstances of the colloquial have been minutely set forth, with copious examples on every page. Secondly; a body of useful conversations has been prepared with especial view to the peculiar incidents of Tibetan travel. To these have been added many technical lists, bearing on the Religion, Natural History, and Geography of the land; and, as much of these collections is new, it is hoped they may prove valuable. Thirdly; the Compendious Vocabulary, in Tibetan and Ládaki, contains an assortment of such words and expressions as it was thought would prove most useful and uscable. Alternative renderings have been generally avoided as productive of bewilderment. A long illness, let me add, has caused the postponement of the publication of this work, but the result of the delay has been a complete revision of the whole.

GRAMMAR OF THE COLLOQUIAL.

THE TIBETAN GRAPHIC SYSTEM.

SIMPLE CHARACTERS.

Tenuis.	High-toned Aspirate.	Low-toned Aspirate.	Nasale.
ཀ Ka	ཁ Kha	ག Gha	ང Nga
ཅ Cha	ཆ Chha	ཇ Jha	ཉ Nya
ཏ Ta	ཐ T'a	ད Dha	ན Na
པ Pa	ཕ P'a	བ Bha	མ Ma
ཅ་ Tsa	ཆ་ T'sa	ཇ་ Dz'a	མ་ Wa
ས Sa	ཤ Sha	ཞ Zha	ཟ Za
ར Ra	ལ La	འ Aa	ཡ Ya
		ཧ Ha	ཨ 'a

Each consonant carries with it the vowel a, as indicated above, changed to e, i, or o, according as \sim or \smile is marked over the consonant, and into u, if \smile is marked underneath.

PREFIXES.—In numerous words, if any one of the five letters, ཀ་ ད་ བ་ མ་ or འ་, stands first in a syllable, it is termed a Prefix, and is silent, the letter following being sounded as initial. In all syllables comprising three or more characters (reckoning doubles and triplets as one only), should one of these five stand first it may be known to be a Prefix. In all two-character syllables the first letter is never a Prefix, except when the second letter bears a vowel mark or is a double or triplet (as in མདོ་ བདོ་ འདོ་ བཏུ་, sounded do, de, di, ta.) If the letter following a Prefix is a Low-toned Aspirate, then the latter loses its aspiration and becomes an ordinary Medial. Thus, དག་ sounds dhag, but བདག་ dag; མོས་ ghoi, but དམོས་ goi.

DUPLIX CHARACTERS.

(The actual pronunciation given in bracketted Italics.)

1. Y subjoined; as ཀྱ Kya (kya) ཁྱ Khya (khya) གྱ Ghya (kya) ལྱ Pya (chya) སྱ P'ya (chhya) རྱ Bhya (jhya, or chya) ཇྱ Mya (nya).

R subjoined; as ཀྲ Kra (ta) ཁྲ Khra (f'a) གྲ Ghra (dha) ཏྲ Dhra (dha, or ta) ལྲ Pra (ta) སྲ P'ra (f'a) རྲ Bhra (dha, or ta) ཇྲ Mra (mra, or ma) ཉྲ Sra (sa, or shra) ཊྲ Hra (shra).

L subjoined; as ཀླ Kla ཁླ Ghla རླ Bhla ཇླ Zla ཏླ Rla ལླ Sla. All sounded La, except ཇླ which makes Da.

2. R superscribed; as ཀོ (ga) ཀྀ (ka) ཏོ (nga) ཏྀ (ja) ཏློ (nya) ཏྲོ (ta) ཏློ (da) ཏློ (na) ཏློ (ba) ཏློ (ma) ཏློ (tsa) ཏློ (dza).

L " as ཀོ (ka) ཏློ (nga) ཏློ (cha) ཏློ (ja) ཏློ (ta) ཏློ (da) ཏློ (pa) ཏློ (lha).

S " as ཀོ (ka) ཏློ (ga) ཏློ (nga) ཏློ (nya) ཏློ (ta) ཏློ (da) ཏློ (na) ཏློ (pa) ཏློ (ba) ཏློ (ma) ཏློ (tsa).

Note.—The superscribing letter is not sounded (at least in Tibet Proper), but where it surmounts a low-toned aspirate, the latter, as will be seen, loses the aspiration.

TRIPLICATE CHARACTERS.

ཀྱ Rkya (kya) ཀྲ Rghya (gya) ཀླ Rmya (nya) ཀྴ Skya
 (kya) གྱ Sghya (gya) གྲ Spya (chya) གླ (jya) གྴ Smya (nya)
 སྱ Skra (ta) སྲ (ḍa) སླ Sdhra (ḍa) སྴ Spra (ta) སྵ Sbhra (ḍa) སྶ Smra (ura).

Again must be noted that a surmounting letter deprives the low-toned aspirate of its aspiration. Thus གྲ sounds ḍha, but སྲ sounds ḍa.

FINAL LETTERS; &c.

ས་ is styled second final after བ། ང་ བ་ and མ་ and is then silent; as in ཀླངས་ kap, མདངས་ dang.

ས་ as ordinary final either sounds i, or being dropped modifies preceding vowel; as ཉས་ nai or ne, རྩས་ chhoi, བཏོས་ dō.

ད་ final is inaudible, but modifies preceding vowel; as ཉད་ ne'.

པ་ as final is sounded, but, like ད་, modifies a into e, o into ō, and u into ū. བ། followed by ས་, as second final, is usually dropped prolonging last vowel; as ཉམས་ nā, བཱུགས་ ihū.

The inherent a of any final is unheard save in one-character syllables. བ། or བ་ as finals sound k or p respectively: ལཀཔ་ lakpa, རྱོབ་ gyop.

Where ད་ prefix is followed by བ་ as initial, both are silent; as དབྱགས་ w, དབང་ wáng, དབྱིབས་ yib.

བ་ as particle sounds wa; འ་ རྱ་ རོ་ as initials wā, wū, wō.

TIBETAN GRAMMAR.

CHAPTER I.

SOUNDS AND SYLLABLES.

The pronunciation of Tibetan words differs greatly from the orthography, and in the chief colloquial idioms there are many letters and combinations of letters which have lost their primitive sounds. That in earlier times the words were generally sounded as they still continue to be spelt seems plain, from the fact that at the present day, in the remotest fastnesses of Tibet, and, curiously, where the populace cannot read, the spoken language adheres more or less closely to the original spelling. This is the case in Skardo, north of Kashmir, as well as in the wild mountainous tracts of Amdo on the Chinese border, provinces 2,000 miles apart. The decay or change of pronunciation is to be found principally in letters occurring as initials or finals, as well as in letters compounded, as are Sanskrit characters, out of two or three others.

Our present treatise deals solely with the speech in general use. Accordingly, in these pages, all words shall be spelt as they are now sounded; and therefore, also, there can be no need here to explain the rules for the pronunciation of words written in Tibetan characters.

The sounds occurring in the main colloquial are the following:—

VOWELS.

- a : the short a, heard usually as the English u in “sun,” though in some words approaching to the a in “man,” “sand,” &c.
- á : the longer a, which shall always be marked, pronounced as a in “father.”
- ā : the prolonged a, sounded almost as a double or iterated a, both with the Italian sound; perhaps as the second a in our “papā.”
- e : generally carries the short sound of an English e in such words as “ten,” “mend;” but when the final letter of a syllable, it is heard, not like our English e in “he,” &c., but as the Italian e in “ché,” answering to our ai in such a word as “praise.”
- i : frequently as the English short i in the word “pin.” Thus we hear in Tibetan rin “price,” min “is not.” But as a final, it takes the orthodox sound of the letter i as heard in most European languages, namely, that of English e in “he,” “me,” &c.
- o : usually as our o in “tone,” “polo,” &c.; and rarely as our o in “pond,” “lot,” &c., except in words ending in ng, as song “went,” tsong “onion,” sounded as in our word “song.”
- ō : long o occurs only as an initial in Tibetan. Its sound, like the long “ā,” is somewhat peculiar, and as if two separate pronunciations of the single vowel followed one another, and were almost slided the one into the other. Perhaps ō-ōh might represent the sound, but often heard as wo.
- ö : when o is immediately followed by either n or d in the original spelling, it assumes this half-tone, a common sound in German and Danish, and heard in such French words as peu. As the d of the original is generally dropped at the end of a syllable, the ö in our orthography will be frequently found as the terminant letter in colloquial Tibetan words. Ex: yö “is,” nyö'-chung, “fragile.”
- u : always sounded as the English “oo.” As an initial is prolonged.

ii : another half-tone, occurring immediately before the letters n or d, the latter consonant as a final being then often hardly audible. May be popularly described as the letter "u" pronounced in an affected, mincing manner; but it is, of course, a regular vowel sound in several continental languages: heard in Müller in German, and in feu in French.

CONSONANTS.

- k* : as in "kettle."
- kh* : as the aspirated k in Hindustani; and in many parts of Tibet it is sounded as the ch in "loch," or as the Russian X.
- g* : always hard in sound, as in "gone." As a final sounds as k; and wherever in these pages we have printed g as final, let it sound k.
- gh* : nearly as k in ordinary talk, and will be understood always if so sounded. But we shall discriminate its occurrence; defining it as gh in the English "ghastly." As initial only. Ex: ghá-pa "where" (mostly heard as ká-pa).
- ng* : a nasal n. Is a single letter in Tibetan and is common as the initial letter of words. To attain the pronunciation of ng, when used as initial, first sound the English word "hunger," and then try to say the nger, without the hu, eliminating much of the g sound. As final, ng is very short and abrupt.
- ch* : as in "church."
- chh* : an aspirated form of ch, as in "reach hither."
- j* : as the English j in "judge."
- jh* : aspirated as in "Jhansi," but often sounded as ch.
- ny* : uttered like the initial sound in our words "neuter," "newt."
- t* : the dental t, as in "tumble."
- t'* : aspirated t, not as our th, but as thana, thora, in Hindustani.
- d* : dental d, as in "dunce." As a final, is in pronunciation nearly always dropped. However, in these cases, we shall indicate its place by an apostrophe: thus tö'pa for tödpa, yö' for yöd "is."

- dh*: aspirated d. In practice we advise the sound of an ordinary unaspirated t, which is sufficiently correct.
- n*: as in "nut." Both n and d, when either occurs as final in any syllable, modify the preceding vowel; changing a into e, o into ö, u into ü. Thus pün "brother," nyen yong (for nyan yong) "will hear."
- p*: as in "port." As final often for b; while on the contrary, as initial, in Eastern Tibet is changed into b occasionally.
- p'*: not heard as English ph (f), but with distinct aspirate sound.
- b*: as in bons. As final letter generally sounds p.
- bh*: had best be pronounced as our p; but really slightly different and different in Tibetan orthography. Thus bhe-u "a calf" sounds pe-u, and bhu-mo "girl" sounds pu-mo. We shall generally print bh where it occurs, while advising the sound of p.
- m*: as in "mat;" where it occurs before p it really represents n in the original spelling.
- ts*: only an initial, and heard as the tes in our words, "plates," "rates."
- ts'*: the same letter aspirated; as in our "cats' heads."
- ds*: a rough s, sounded with d as in the English "adze."
- y*: as in "yell," w: as in "wander."
- r*: as in "rather," but is never rolled.
- l*: as in "lamb." Where we have placed it as a final, it is often inaudible, and always changes a preceding a to e and u to ü. In the capital of Tibet, the l as final is said to be always heard.
- lh*: heard really as hl, or as the Welsh initial Ll. Thus Lhása sounds Hlása. However, we print lh in these pages in order to coincide with the Tibetan spelling.
- sh*: { these letters take the ordinary pronunciation; but s: { the depth of tone with which they are sounded differs in different words and affects the whole word. See pp. 15, 16.
- h*: the ordinary aspirate; never a silent letter.

ky : sounded as written, and as this is theoretically, and often in practice, the correct pronunciation, we shall always print it as ky; but frequently it is heard as if ty.

khy : to be printed thus, but often sounded t'y.

gy : to be printed thus, but often sounded dy.

chy, chhy, and jhy : these occur as initial sounds in those words which in the written language begin with the letters py, p'y, and by, respectively. They represent the modern pronunciation of the latter combinations. The y sound is generally distinctly heard after the ch, chh, and jh in all such words; e. g., jhye'pa "to make," "do," chhyir-tu "for," "because of."

In some parts of Tibet the p, ph, and b sounds prevail in these words, and not the anomalous ch, chh, and jh sounds; the only change being the omission of the y. All over Tibet p'imo is as commonly heard as chhyimo, p'ila as chhyi-la; whilst P'i-ling "an Englishman" is in much more frequent use than Chhyi-ling.

CEREBRAL LETTERS.

We find t, t', d, and dh occurring as cerebrals, and pronounced, not against the teeth as the ordinary forms, but with their sound thrown up against the roof of the mouth. The t in our English words torn and talk is really a cerebral and differs from the t in ten, &c. As is customary, these sounds in the following pages will be printed t, t', d, and dh. They only occur in those words which in the written language have initials bearing a subscribed r; e. g., brás "rice," sounds ḍai. However, according to the Appendix to Mr. Rockhill's "Land of the Lamas," it would seem that tr and t'r are in use in Lhasa. Of this use I am partly satisfied.

THE TONE-PITCH IN TIBETAN.

As in Burmese, Anamese, Chinese, &c., certain "tones," that is, a certain pitch of voice, have become recognised as attached to the pronunciation of words.

In many instances the different pitch, or tone, serves to discriminate words which otherwise would be sounded alike.

In Tibetan the tone depends altogether upon the particular letters which happen to occur in the original spelling as the two or three initial letters of any word. Though the letters, particularly the first consonant, may be silent in pronunciation, their presence or absence in the Tibetan spelling regulates the tone and is thus really felt.

In our transliteration we cannot exhibit the spelling or note the unpronounced initial consonant or consonants, but we shall, where requisite, mark the tone of a word resulting from such spelling.

In Tibetan there are properly three Tones. These are the High-pitched, the Medial, and the Low Resonant.

As the majority of words are uttered in a fairly high key, we shall not as a rule distinguish the High-pitched from the Medial or ordinary tone; but where useful for discrimination in words commencing with certain letters, we shall make use of the sign \smile above the first letter of the word to mark the higher pitch. The Low Resonant tone will be identified by the superscribed sign \frown on the initial.

The High-pitched tone is rendered by an elevated treble or feminine style of voice, continuously sustained at one pitch; and the Medial being scarcely lower, that must be the key in which the ordinary flow of words ought to run, merely subduing the voice to the Low Resonant tone, which is guttural in character, whenever a word or words proper to that tone are introduced. If one is on the alert to notice the variation of tone while listening to two natives in converse, the exact distinction of voice will be at once distinguished and can be readily applied and reproduced.

The initial invariably gives the tone for the whole word. Taking three different words, each according to our colloquial mode of representing sounds spelt precisely alike, we may note that, being shewn with the same initial, the only way of indicating the tone in print will be by the use of the above-given signs. Thus, we have ser "says," ser "a nail," and ser "gold." In the original spelling there is the following distinction in these words: ser "says," gzser "a nail," and gser "gold;" and that spelling determines in truth the present tone in use for each.

ser, "says" is pronounced in Low Resonant tone ser, "a nail," ,, ,, ,, High-pitched tone ser, "gold" ,, ,, ,, Medial ordinary voice.

Nevertheless, as already remarked, the general flow of talk is high-pitched; and it is in fact only in the case of words commencing with s or sh that any additional elevation of tone is distinctly audible. Accordingly, only on words beginning with these letters shall we hereafter denote the High-pitched tone whenever, in words so beginning, it happens to occur. When words commencing with s or sh have no special elevation of voice required, no mark will be superscribed, save, of course, when they are low-pitched and require the Low Resonant sign.

LOW RESONANT TONE.—Words commencing with gh, jh, dh, qh, bh, or r, are invariably guttural and low-pitched; and accordingly no mark will be superscribed, as it will be known that the Low Resonant pronunciation is required for all such words.

Words having as initial letter either ng, ny, n, m, w, y, l, dz, sh, or s, being variable in tone, we shall whenever the word is a Low Resonant one—but only then—indicate the tone, except in the case of the pronouns n̄ga and n̄garang, the auxilliary verbs ŷin, ŷö, and the negative particles m̄a, m̄i, which, it may be said at once, are always sounded in the Low Resonant tone, but which recur too often to have the tone indicated by sign. Capitals, also, cannot be marked.

Words commencing with either of the vowels o or u are likewise heard in the Low Resonant tone.

Examples: woma milk, n̄gempo bad, n̄yinmo day, n̄ats'd sickness, šampa a bridge, ŷangmo light (not heavy), lob-lob, flat, m̄e-tok flower, šhá hat.

But wang power, ngömpo blue, nying-top courage, num oil, sampa thought, yangts's clay cup, yang-lā hide or skin, lung wind, marpo red, sha flesh.

All words beginning with the letters kh, chh, p', and t', are high-toned in a pronounced degree.

SYLLABLES AND PARTICLES.

1. Primarily the language of Tibet is a monosyllabic tongue, every syllable being ordinarily a word of definite meaning. However, in later times, a decided tendency to polysyllabism has been steadily developing itself. Besides new coinages for the purpose of expressing new and complex ideas, which have been formed by linking two or more monosyllabic words so as to make an artificial polysyllable, the tendency has been exhibited in another way. For all things in common use there existed and do exist simple names, each a word of one syllable. Nevertheless, the colloquial has by degrees grown (so to speak) dissatisfied with these primitive designations, and has succeeded in expanding a large number of them into words of two syllables. More curious is this predilection, because apparently the original names were in most cases amply sufficient to discriminate the various objects indicated. And the phenomenon of the modern tongue preferring the longer words seems still more incongruous, when we find even in modern writings, the old plain monosyllables generally adhered to. Doubtless the change in the pronunciation of the simpler forms has had something to do with these accretions. In the written language, words which are now sounded alike, are spelled differently. At the beginning and end of words are still written certain letters which formerly were pronounced but now are silent. These additional letters (in the case of initials, now styled "prefixes") imparted a distinction in sound to words which from the second or third letter onwards were identically spelled. The process of attrition which has been going on in the pronunciation of the language, whereby time has gradually worn away the sound of the letters beginning and terminating words, has approximated to one another the sound of innumerable words, which in spelling and in former pronunciation were sufficiently discriminated.

Another element of confusion arises from the fact that certain collocations of letters have lost their original sounds and are now pronounced as if they were spelled with letters totally different. Thus the letters by, py, p'y, are now heard as if they were jhy, chy, chhy. We cannot in this place enter further into the subject; nor need we illustrate our remarks by examples. Nevertheless enough has been said to make plain that two processes, directly opposed to one another, have been long operating in this remarkable language. By wear and tear and carelessness, and for the saving of trouble which would result from the avoidance of sounding difficult combinations of consonants, words originally sufficiently distinctive have been reduced to such shadows and skeletons of their former selves as to be in many cases indistinguishable the one from the other. On the other hand, in order to counteract this process of denudation, and to escape from the inconvenient consequences of it, further syllables have been tacked on bodily to the older and half-wasted forms. Thus, while the syllables have been attenuated down to a minimum, rendering sufficient variety impossible, compensation has been sought, and confusion to some extent eluded, by conjoining syllables and producing by this combination the variety which the denuded monosyllables no longer afforded.

So it comes to pass, through the foregoing or other causes, that the Tibetan colloquial is no longer monosyllabic but MOSTLY MADE UP OF WORDS OF TWO SYLLABLES. One example: In written Tibetan Sná is "the nose," Rná is "the ear;" but, as initials, S. and R. are no longer sounded; and thus Ná becomes the word for each of two very different facial features. To prevent confusion in speech, Ná "ear," takes the particle wa. But Ná-wa means also "to be sick." Accordingly, at length, in the modern colloquial, Ná "ear," has developed into Námchhok. Nevertheless in writing the word "ear" we should still use the older forms Rna, or Rna-wa; while for such compounds as "ear-ring" we still hear ná-kor, not námchhok-kor. Analogously Ná "nose," has at length been developed into Náku, and even Námts'ul.

In words of two syllables the accent or stress is laid upon the second syllable, except when such second syllable is one of the servile particles pa, wa, po, or wo, or when the denominative affix ghu or bhu is appended, or even chha or tse. In these latter cases, the first syllable carries the accent. Thus we hear dáwa "the moon," not dawá.

2. In Tibetan we find a large number of primitive monosyllabic words to which have been affixed certain short syllables, each consisting of no more than two letters, which short syllables seem removable often at pleasure without altering the meaning of the word affected. To nouns and verbs one of two of these short syllables may be added, either pa or wa. When affixed to the root of a noun, the particle does not usually change the meaning of the word; but when an adjective is conjoined with the nouns, we frequently find the particle dropped. In the colloquial language the particle is not so often dropped as it is in the book language. However, when a compound word is created by combining two nouns, the particles (if any), are invariably omitted. The particles ma and mo, by custom, seem not removable. When either pa or wa is added to a verbal root, it may indicate either the Infinitive mood of the verb or a verbal noun, or else the participle. Thus the root: jhys takes the particle pa; and jhye'pa can mean "to do," or "the making," or "doing," according to circumstances. The employment of these servile particles, on the other hand, with ordinary nouns and adjectives, has come to be governed by pure custom and to be subjected to no general rule. With certain nouns and adjectives they are always heard; whilst with others they have come to be either optional or else neglected entirely. Finally, many substantives are pure monosyllables to which no particle or other syllable is, or has ever been, annexed.

NOTE ON PRONUNCIATION.—In Tibetan a final letter usually undergoes some modification. Where a syllable ends with the letter "g," it mostly takes the sound of "k," though in the following pages we have printed this final sometimes "g" and sometimes "k." So also with the letter "b," which as final sounds as our "p." Where "d" is the last letter it is nearly always inaudible and thus we have invariably omitted it, but at the same time this elision has been everywhere indicated by the use of an apostrophe. Thus jhyed-pa "to do" is invariably heard as jhye'pa, and so in these pages do we print it. Both "k" (g) and "p" (b) as finals are also often elided; thus paik-lep "bread" is usually heard as if pa'le'.

Final "s" is never heard in Tibet Proper, where it is either bluntly dropped or (and generally) assumes the sound of a quick "i." Thus the name of the chief province of Tibet is written dbus. The "d" and "b" are held to annihilate one another, leaving the word as us only. Now, in Central Tibet the name of the province is heard as ur, in Southern Tibet as Ū, and in Ladak only is the final letter sounded and the name pronounced us. It should be noted, however, that if the letter preceding the final "s" is a consonant, the "s" is simply dropped and no "i" sound heard.

When the first syllable of a dissyllable ends in "n" and the second syllable begins with "p" or "b," the "n" sounds as "m."

Lastly, all vowels, save those marked long, are sounded very short: men as our "men;" rin as our "pin."

CHAPTER II.

THE ARTICLE.

1. In the Tibetan colloquial, both of the so-called Articles are to be heard in constant use.

The Indefinite Article, "a," "an," is represented by the word chik, placed immediately after the substantive or adjective to which it belongs; and in those cases where the word which it thus follows terminates with any vowel, except o, or with one of the letters m, r, or l, the chik is changed into shik. In common practice the final k of the Article is hardly audible; so we may say hlam shi' a boot, m̄i-po chi' a man, kyermén chi' a woman, khyi shi' a dog.

When this Article occurs with a noun of any other case than the Nominative, it is in conversation generally dropped. Thus we hear Pu-tsá shi' a boy; but in the genitive Putsá-yi of a boy. Also when the noun is uninflected in the Accusative case, the Article is still unheard: Pu-tsá kkur shok: Bring a boy!

This Indefinite Article likewise carries the signification "one;" and, strangely enough, has at times the meaning "some," being even used with numbers in such phrases as "some four boys." (See Chap. V, § 7.)

2. The Definite Article is rendered dí "the," and is very much used in the colloquial, contrary to the literary custom. It is not an uncommon practice in general talk to place dí before the noun to which it belongs; though properly, like chik, it always ought to follow the noun or adjective. Where any singling out of a thing is desired, the Article may be placed both before and after the noun, as Di jhyá di, the bird.

When reference is made to anything just previously mentioned di is changed into dhé. Thus, supposing some man had been mentioned as appearing and we went on to say: "when the man came up, &c.," the Article used with "man" in this second and in subsequent immediate allusions, would be dhé.

Should the noun belonging to it stand in the genitive or other case, di is not necessarily dropped; and if it follow an inflected word the di would receive the inflections instead of that word.

CHAPTER III.

NOUN SUBSTANTIVES.

A.—FORM AND ETYMOLOGY.

1. As to form, noun substantives are of two classes—simple and compound.

2. The simple forms are primitive monosyllables, to which in many cases custom has attached an additional syllable partaking of the nature of a servile particle. This class therefore comprises words of one and two syllables; but where a second syllable occurs it is a mere expletive which sometimes indicates the gender of the noun and which frequently can be dropped without obscuring the meaning of the word. At times, however, the appended particle serves to discriminate words analogously spelt, moreover affixes other than pa, wa, po, wo, are never dropped.

We will first quote a short list of monosyllabic substantives to which particles are never appended and which are always used as they are here given:—

Khyi : dog.	Pün : brother.	Jhá : tea.	Ilam : boot.
Mik : eye.	Dom : box.	Gáng : hill.	Khyim : house.
Me : fire.	Lung : wind.	Ming : name.	Luk : sheep.
Chhu : water.	Do : stone.	Dul : journey.	Ti : knife.
Shing : tree.	Jhyá : bird.	Lak : hand.	Dhu : boat.

The above are naturally some of the simplest and most commonly occurring words in the language.

Of the particles found conjoined with the roots of nouns the first variety are pa, wa, and a. These may hardly be said to be used or not used at pleasure; but when any adjective is employed with the noun, the particle belonging to the noun is sometimes dropped, though its retention is always permissible:—

Sam-pa : bridge.	Kang-pa : leg.	Gom-pa : monastery.
Mū-pa : mist.	Dá-wa : the moon.	Ngur-wa : red duck.
P'or-pa : cup.	Kyá-wa : oar.	To-wa : victuals.
P'ák-pa : pig.	Chhar-pa : rain.	Tö'-pa : belly.
Tš'-pa : smoke.	Rau-a : a fence.	Chhu-pa : over-coat.
Khau-a : snow.	Ko-a : hide-boat.	T'o-a : hammer.

Another series of substantives assume a second syllable in po, wo, and bo—affixes which in composition are occasionally dropped:—

Le-po : a basket.	Dhá-wo : buck wheat.
Te-po : an axe.	No-wo : younger brother.
Tok-po : a friend.	Chhu-wo : a river.
Gyal-po : a king.	Re-wo : yak-skin canvas.
Ting-po : a pipe.	T'eb-bo : the thumb.
Tang-po : a beggar.	Dá-o : comrade.

Provincially the affix po is frequently heard as bo; e. g., Pai-bo for Palpo: a Nipal man; pömbo or even bömbo for pömpo: any official or head man—used also as form of address: Pömbo “Officer,” “Sir!” Again, wo often seems to lose the w sound, as no-o for no-wo, and pá-o for pá-wo “dare-devil.” Many nouns in po denote distinctly the male sex. Added to the participle, po expresses the doer of an action: lab-pa-po, “the speaker.”

Certain substantives take ma or mo—a non-removable affix:—

Nyi-ma : the sun.	Jhye-ma : sand.	Táb-mo : a fight.
Lo-ma : a leaf.	Chi-ma : a tear.	Long-mo : alma.
Wo-ma : milk.	Zi-ma : eyelashes.	Rol-mo : music.
Lá-ma : chief monk.	Dhe-mo : the elbow.	Gong-mo : evening.
Ping-kyu-ma : a kite.	Yor-mo : a sail.	Chong-mo : thimble.

In general, be it noted, mo indicates a feminine noun; but the above examples are not of that class—a class to be illustrated hereafter.

Other sets of particles, similarly attached, are ká, khá, ghá, tse, chha :—

Chhá-ká or	} a thing.	T'ang-ghá :	picture (on cloth).
Chhá-la :		T'ok-tse :	table.
Lo-ká :	work, a task.	Chem-tse :	scissors.
Yar-ká :	summer.	Yá-tse :	a duck.
Gün-ká :	winter.	Dsé-tse :	smoke-hole.
Log-ká :	lightning.	Ken-za :	staircase.
Lam-khá :	pathway.	Pé-chhá :	book.
Long-khá :	guts.	Lap-chhá :	talk, a chat.
Pang-khá :	a shelf.	Séi-chhá :	details, particulars.
Kang-serkhá :	crevasse.	To-chhá :	food.
Ya(l)-ghá :	a bough.	Lá-chhá :	sealing wax.
Khyo-ghá :	husband.	Lo-chhá :	woman's chatelaine.

To these may be added examples of words taking appendices regarded as diminutive affixes, though the effect in question is not always apparent :—

P'u gu :	a child.	Tong-bhu :	a hole.
Lu-gu :	lamb.	Sham-bhu :	cap.
Ang-gu :	pigeon.	Sing-bhu :	mare's milk.
Nyu-gu :	pen.	Dhung-bhu :	love.
Ung-gu :	lamp.	Ts'il-lu :	fat.
Dzng-gu :	finger.	Kyal-lu :	cloth bag.
Ts'i-gu :	kernel.	Ts'ál-lu :	a cock.
A-ku :	uncle.	Tur-ru :	a foal.
Ts'ang-khu :	cradle.	Khye-u :	infant.
Ná-ku :	the nose.	Le-u :	chapter.
Wo-ku :	the chin.	Pe-u :	calf.
Phil-bhu :	bell.	A-yu (or a-yo) :	puppy.

3.—Originally a monosyllabic language, the modern style would seem to prize compound forms. Thus the second or compound class of nouns, including dissyllables and trisyllables, is being continually augmented. Such words are either direct compounds of two or more distinct words crudely conjoined to express some complex thing or derived idea; or else they are mere paraphrases and euphemisms, signifying simple things, which have at length crept into ordinary use, superceding the ancient and more direct monosyllables. In the subjoined examples we shall not discriminate between the regular compounds and the paraphrases, merely adding that some of the latter are of ancient lineage, and that no simpler word for the thing indicated in such cases has been ever apparently in use:—

Nám-chhok or } the car.	Mé-lok :	flower.
Am-chhok :	Shom-dap :	leaf (large).
Nám-ts'ul :	Jhi-ts'i :	rat.
Mendá :	Tsi-ts'i :	mouse.
Sho-dang :	Káng-sák :	a pipe.
Shá-nye :	Daug-rok :	neighbour.
Shá-ka :	Men-shar :	girl.
Ge-long :	Shüm-mar-pa :	lamp.
Am-chhi :	Lek-bham :	a volume.
Lok-nyo :	Shing-ta :	cart.
O-mo-su :	Sá-lep :	brick.
Nang-mik :	Pák-lep :	loaf of bread.
Dhong-khyer :	Gye-ka :	window.
Yul-ts'o :	Mik-yang :	generosity.
P'ur-nyi :	T'a-má-khá :	tobacco.

The derivation of some of these, and other compound words is very quaint. Such are mé-lok "fire-button" (flower), khang-mik "eye of the house" (room), mik-yang "broad eye" (generosity), sá-lep "flat earth" (brick), ts'o-lak "lake's hand" (a creek), nyi-ker "nail of the sun" (sun-beam), sem-chen "possessed of mind" (an animal), p'ák-suk "secret push" (bribery).

Deliberate compounds are of course very numerous, and no instances need be specified; however, as a general rule, it may be accepted that every syllable of a compound word in Tibetan has a distinct meaning. This rule may be even extended to proper names and the names of places. Thus Pemiong-chi monastery in Sikkim is really Pema Yangtse "the offering-bowl of lotos-flowers."

4.—GENDER. A large number of nouns possess both a masculine and a feminine form. The discrimination of gender is generally indicated by the variation in the servile particle; although at the same time it must not be forgotten that the mere presence of an affix, significant usually of male or female sex respectively, does not in Tibetan invariably convey the notion of any particular gender. Many substantives terminate with the feminine particle mo which have none save a common gender:—

Mi :	a man.	Mo :	woman (general term bhū'me').
Khyo-po :	husband. (or Khyo-ghá.)	Khyo-mo :	wife (usual term kyer-mén).
Pu-tsa :	boy.	Pu-mo :	girl.
Jhá-pa :	cock.	Jhá-mo :	hen.
Lang-to :	bull.	Bhá-mo :	cow.
A-p'á :	father.	A-má :	mother.
Yáb :	father.	Yum :	mother (honorific terms).
Ná-wo :	host.	Ná-mo :	hostess.
Gü'po :	father-in-law.	Gü'mo :	mother-in-law.
P'o-yak :	male yak.	Dimo :	female yak.
Gyal-po :	king.	Gyal-mo :	queen.
Yi-pa :	male lad, offspring.	Mo-yi :	female child, girl.
Réi-po :	an old man.	Réi-mo :	an old woman.
Gur-po ;	a crooked man.	Gur-mo :	a crooked woman.
Tá-po :	horse.	Tá gō'ma :	mare (also gō'-ma alone).
Chyil-pa :	} male dweller in a } thatched hut.	Chyil-ma :	female ditto.
Bhe-to :	bull-calf.	Bhe-mo :	cow-calf.
Pál-po-pá :	man of Nipal.	Pál-po-ma :	woman of Nipal.
Bhō'pa or Bhō'mi :	Tibetan man.	Bhō'mo :	Tibetan woman.
Ming-po :	brother of a girl.	Sing-mo :	sister of a man.
Shur-pa :	young men.	Shar-ma :	young women.
P'ord :	male kid.	Mo-re :	female kid.

P'á-pe' (པ་པོ་) father and his offspring. Má-me' (མ་མོ་) mother and her offspring.

B.—DECLENSION OF NOUNS.

1. In the Tibetan tongue the relationship of the noun to other words or, in grammatical phraseology, the different cases of the noun, must be expressed by means of short syllables styled Postpositions, placed immediately after the word to be declined. A Noun Substantive may be thus arranged in the form of a Declension:—

Kyermén chí : A wife.

Nom :	Kyermén chí :	A wife.
Gen :	Kyermén kyí :	Of a wife.
Dat :	Kyermén la :	To a wife.
Accus :	Kyermén or Kyermén la :	A wife.
Locative :	Kyermén na (or tsána) :	On or at a wife.
Ablat :	Kyermén ne (or le) :	From a wife.
Agentive :	Kyermén kyí :	By a wife.

(N. B.—This common word is often heard sounded as if it were Kimmen.)

A slight variation is made in the affixes attached in the Genitive and Agentive cases when the word declined ends in the letter k or ng. Thus ghyok chí : “a cannon :” becomes ghyok-ghi : “of a cannon,” ghyok-ghí : “by a cannon.” So also chháng : “beer ;” chháng-ghi : “of beer ;” chháng-ghí : “by beer.” Where the substantive terminates with a vowel, the same two cases are also affected, as in the subjoined example :—

Mábjhá íhi : A peacock.

Nom :	Mábjhá íhi :	A peacock.
Gen :	Mábjhá yi or Mábjhé :	Of a peacock.
Dat :	Mábjhá la :	To a peacock.
Accus :	Mábjhá or Mábjhá la :	A peacock.
Locat :	Mábjhá na (or tsána) :	On or At a peacock.
Ablat :	Mábjhá ne :	From a peacock.
Agentive :	Mábjhá yi :	By a peacock.

To the cases made use of above, Jaeschke adds what he terms the Terminative case, implying “into,” “unto ;” but we have not met with it in colloquial idiom.

In those words in which the final vowel is o, we have the Genitive oi, as jo-mo : “a milch-yak,” jo-moi : “of a milch-yak.” If the word end in i, the Genitive usually takes yi, but in words of two syllables ending in i, we often hear kyi : e. g., khyi : “a dog,” khyi-yi : “of a dog ;” gyá-í'i : “a chair,” gyá-í'i-kyi : “of a chair.” With a final e the Genitive requires yi, while the vowel u takes i alone, as m̄e : "the fire," m̄é-yi : "of the fire;" p'u-gu : "a child," p'u-gu-i : "of a child."

The Article di when it follows the noun makes a Genitive in either yi or kyi. We frequently hear di-kyi : "of the."

The Vocative case differs from the other cases, in that it is preceded by an exclamatory syllable and requires no post-position—Kye lámá : "O lama!" Ho-kye kyapgön : "O protector! Wé tok-po : "O friend;" "Well, friend!" Accent or stress is usually laid on the last syllable of the noun in the Vocative. Often the prefixed syllable is dropped in quiet address: Lhachám, t'u'je chhe : "Thank-you, lady!"

2. THE PLURAL NUMBER is not always formally expressed in Tibetan. Whenever the substantive is accompanied by any numeral or by such adjectives as "some," "all," "many," the use of which naturally implies a plural signification, then the singular is invariably heard. Otherwise the Plural affix may be added to the word either as ts'o or as chá (chák) and sometimes as nam :—

P'i-ling-ts'o : "Englishmen."

Gen:	P'i-ling-t'soi :	Of the Englishmen.
Dat:	P'i-ling-ts'o'la :	To the Englishmen.
Accus:	P'i-ling-ts'o la :	The Englishmen.
Locat:	P'i-ling-ts'o na :	In the Englishmen.
Vocat:	Wé P'i-ling-ts'o :	O Englishmen!
Ablat:	P'i-ling-ts'o nai or ne :	From the Englishmen.
Agentive:	P'i-ling-ts'o :	By the Englishmen.

As to the alternative affix chá, it is added mostly to inanimate nouns—toktse : "table," toktse-chá : "tables."

3. USE OF THE CASES.—a. The Genitive is employed to signify both possession and quality, and when it is in any way a part of the subject of a sentence the word in the Genitive stands first in the order of words in the sentence. As expressive of Possession we find the usual construction,

i. e., "the boy's dog" is "the dog of the boy," and yet the Tibetan rendering is in form closely like the English order; Putsá-yi (or Putsá) khyi di: "of boy the dog."

β. Where the Genitive is a Genitive of quality it assumes the character of an adjective. This Genitive also invariably precedes the noun which it describes. Ex: ngul-kyi kuten: "a silver image;" shing-ghi khyim: "a wooden house;" Bhö'kyi lha: "a Tibetan god." In these cases, it frequently happens that the Genitive affix is dispensed with; and thus we hear such forms as ngul kuten: "silver image;" ts'ar sam for ts'ar-kyi sam: "cane-bridge;" nyuk khyim for nguk-ghi khyim: "bamboo house;" ser t'eng for ser-kyi t'engwa: "golden chain;" ser-dok for ser-kyi dog: "gold-colour."

These phrases can also be expressed by means of adjectives formed from the respective substantives (Chap. XI, 4 a).

γ. The Genitive seems, furthermore, to be resorted to in order to indicate a less obvious relationship than that of mere possession. Thus "an ear-ring" is ná-kor, contracted from ná-yi kor; a "water-tub" or tub for water is chhu-som; a "day's wage," is nyin-lá from nyin-kyi lá; num-kong from num kyi kong = "an oil basin;" nák-bhum from nák-ghi bhumpa ("flask of ink") = "inkstand;" and so forth. In this manner in fact a large number of compound terms are constructed.

δ. The Dative with la is found after verbs of giving, shewing, and speaking. Thus we hear:—

Khyi-la chhu ter :	Give the dog water.
Mi-la lam di teng-nang :	Shew the man the way.
Kho-la jámpo lap :	Speak to him gently.
Kusho-la khyörang-ghi ming lap :	Tell the Sahib your name.

In the foregoing examples we must note khyi-la "to the dog," mi-la (or mi-po-la) "to the man," kho-la to him, kusho-la "to the Sahib."

Motion towards is seldom expressed colloquially by the Dative. The ordinary style is with some compound post-position (the Tibetan preposition) such as t'ukpa "unto," "up to," or tsá-ne meaning "near;" the use of the latter being precisely analogous to the use of pas in Hindustani and being linked like pas to the noun by the Genitive affix. (See Chap. VIII, 3. Examples). However in such phrases as these la is frequently heard:—

Gompa-la song : Go to the temple.

Khyim-la song : Go home, (vulg., "Nang-la song.")

Further remarks upon the use of la, as a Locative rather than a Dative affix, will be found in Chapter VIII, 2.

c. The Accusative requires no affix in sentences having a remote as well as a proximate object; e. g.—

Ngárang-la wóma nang : Give me the milk.

(Woma is here the proximate object placed in the Accusative. ngárang-la = to me.)

Again where the remoter object is unexpressed:—

shing khur shok : Fetch the wood.

tá-po di t'i : Lead the horse.

However the Accusative, when it is the object of any direct action, takes the affix la : e. g.—

(1) Kho-yi tá-la dung-ki-du' : He is beating the horse.
(Lit: Kho-yi by him, tá-la the horse, dung-ki-du' is beating).

(2) Dhe-la lákpa ma t'uk : Don't touch it, (Dhe-la = "it")

Or where it is the object of any passive feeling:—

(3) The mother loves the son: Amá-yi pu-la tse-dung jhe.'
(tse-dung jhe'pa = "to love").

(4) Remember me: Ngá-la sem-la ngei!
(Lit: Ngei be sure, sem-la in mind, ngá-la, as to me).

But we hear

(5) Go di gyák : Shut the door.

z. The Agentive case ought to be used instead of the Nominative with all transitive verbs whether the verb be in the Present, Past or Future tense. This important rule (see (1) and (3) of the last four examples above) is fully explained in a later chapter.

CHAPTER IV.

A D J E C T I V E S.

1. The adjective almost invariably follows its noun in the common speech of the people. Very frequently in literary Tibetan, however, we find it placed before the noun it qualifies and, when in that position, instead of agreeing with the noun as to Case, it invariably takes the Genitive Case. To place the adjective immediately preceding the noun is also perfectly allowable in colloquial Tibetan, but such order of the words is only occasionally resorted to, though when it is practised the adjective must then be heard in the Genitive.

2. When the adjective—as indeed it nearly always does—follows the substantive, it receives the inflexions which would, otherwise, belong to the substantive. In other words, the case-signs are then attached to the adjective instead of to the noun-substantive which it is qualifying. Thus :—

Nám mün-po chí : A dark night.
Putsa tsok-pa-i ák di : The hand of a dirty boy.

(Note: The order of the words in these sentences is exactly the reverse of the English orders: e. g. "Boy dirty of hand the.")

Dho'-mó chhempo di-yi mik serpo di : The yellow eye of the large bear.

(Here the adjectives used are chhempo and serpo. The definite article di being used with the adjective chhempo "large," the article and not the adjective receives the Genitive affix. As in Tibetan composition the Genitive-words generally stand first in the sentence, we have here also in the Tibetan an exact reversal of the English order of the words:—"Bear great the of eye yellow the." This reverse order does not obtain in all or even many instances.)

Di lo-ma lenchen-kyi sá-la shü'-dhu di : The leaf down on the wet ground.

(Here lenchen "wet," the adjective qualifying sá "the ground," is placed before its noun and therefore stands with the Genitive affix. Note, also, the article belonging to lo-ma is repeated so as to lock in with it all direct enlargement or expansion of the subject.)

3. When it is necessary that the plural number should be expressed otherwise than by implication, the plural particle is attached to the substantive and not to the adjective : Mikcha serpo "yellow eyes;" Mi-ts'o hampachen : "greedy men;" ta-po-ts'o ñakpo karpó "black-and-white horses;" tá-po ñak tá-po kar : "black horses and white horses."

4. Nearly all adjectives in the colloquial which are not derived from substantives are found with the particle po attached. Sometimes this termination may be dropped as in the last-quoted example; but this elision is more frequent in the written than in the spoken language. In certain particular adjectives the affix po is varied to mo when used with a feminine noun; but frequently no notice of the gender is taken and the adjective in po is coupled with a feminine substantive. On the other hand, a number of adjectives used indiscriminately with either masculine or feminine nouns carry the affix mo which then bears no sexual signification.

The following adjectives are known to vary the affix according to the gender of the noun to be qualified:—

Marpo-mo : red.	Chhorpo-mo : handsome.
Nákpó-mo : black.	T'o-o T'omo : angry.
Karpó-mo : white.	Ringpo-mo : tall, long.

Chhyukpo-mo : rich.	Dhungpo-mo : cautious, retiring.
Sarpo-mo : young, fresh, un-polluted.	Chholpo-mo : licentious.
Rilpo-mo : round.	Sharwa-mo : blind.
Shdwo-mo : lame.	Ulpo-mo : poor.

But these adjectives, terminating in mo, are common in gender :—

Gá-mo : middling.	Sem-kyo-po : disappointed.
Le-mo : good.	Ship-mo : thorough, minute.
Sho'mo : strong.	Ngo-yangmo : gay, sportive.
Yangmo : light (not heavy).	Sab-mo : smart, spruce.
Démo : well, happy.	Den-mo : naked (also jem-pa).
Ts'emmo : hot.	Dhak-mo : clean (also dhakwa).
Dhōmmo : warm.	Silmo : cool.
Dhongmó : cold (also dhongwa).	Kyurmo : sour.
Dhalmo : calm, quiet, still.	Ngarmo : sweet. fluids.)
Lámo : easy (of a task, &c.)	Gharmo : thick, dense (of
Bolmo : soft, yielding.	Tamo : thin (also "pow-
Sra-mo : hard, solid.	dery," "finely divided.")

5. There are many adjectives which do not take the affixes po or mo. All derivative adjectives are simple roots with such paraphrastic syllables as chen : "possessed of," chhok, "fit for," annexed. (See Chap. XI, 4 α and β .) Those formed from substantives by annexing chen make a lengthy list; and if the opposite qualification has need to be expressed the syllable chen is replaced by me', which signifies "without," "free from" :—

Shengchen : broad.	Khoi-chen : important.
Shengme' : narrow.	Khoi-me' : unimportant.
Si-chen : brilliant.	Gyákchen or gyákshá : fat, stout.
Si-me' : dull, obscured.	Gyákme' : thin, meagre.
Nyō'chen : durable, well-made.	Ts'ulchen : just.
Nyō'me' : fragile, flimsy.	Ts'ulme' : unjust.
Rin-chen : precious.	Ts'erchen : uneasy, anxious.
Rin-me' : worthless.	Ts'erme' : not anxious, easy.

6. Another series of adjectives, colloquially much favoured, are re-duplicated forms, which generally express continuous or flowing action, or qualities of that easy or undulating nature:—

Lhap-lhup :	loose, unconfined.	Seng-seng :	weak (of tea, &c.)
Ril-ril :	oval.	Leb-leb :	flat.
Kor-kor :	round.	Ts'im-ts'im :	dazzled.
Hrab-hrip :	dim, glimmering.	Yor-yor :	aslant.
Jám-jám :	smooth.	Gop-gop :	stiff, powerless.
Sam-sum :	low (in sound).	Wále-wále :	clear, distinct.
Shong-ihong :	hollow, excavated.	Gur-gur :	crooked.

7. When the adjective is used as an attribute, the affix po is occasionally omitted:—

The pomegranates are fresh :	Senđu di sar yin (sar , not sarpa).
The flower is red and yellow :	Me-tok di már dhang ser yin .
The dog is large :	Khyi di chhe yin or khyi di chhempo yin .
The price is small :	Gong di chhung yin ("price" is also rin).

8. The adjective can be rendered more intense by various words or syllables placed before it: háchang, much, very, too; rab-tu very, especially; tsá-wa-ne, quite:—

The path is very narrow :	Lamkhá di háchang f'á-po re' .
The horse is too fat :	Tá-po di rab-tu gyakpá yin .
The bridge is very slanting :	Sampa di háchang yorpo yin .
The knife is perfectly blunt :	Ti di tsá-wa-ne no-me' du' .

Sometimes the word há-chang like tsá-wa assumes the ablative affix nai or né:—Khorang há-chang-ne chhor yin:—
He is very handsome.

Other intensives to the adjective are ril (meaning "round") and chhe (meaning "much," "great"). These, however, follow the adjective:—

A horse quite white :	Tá-po kar ril .
Very muddy water :	Chhu nyokpo chhe .
The pass-top is very indistinct :	Laptse dhe hrab-hrip chhe du' .
A perfectly flat plain :	T'ang leb-leb ril chí' .

I am quite lame and vory tired : Ngárang la khong ril dhárung háchang-ne t'ang-chhe-po jhung.

Note.—The last sentence runs literally : “to me has arisen (jhung) to be quite lame and very tired.”

9.—COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES.

a. The expedient for making comparison of the quality of things is akin to the method of the Hindi language to the south of Tibet, and to that of the Mongolian language to the north of Tibet. It is brought about by means of a certain arrangement of the words of the sentence and by the introduction of the postposition le, meaning “thau.” To give an example :—

Tibet is larger than Sikkim : Dái-jong le Pö'yul chhem-po du'.

Examining the Tibetan we find it runs : Dái-jong le “than Sikkim,” Pö'yul “Tibet,” chhempo “large,” du’ “is.”

This order of words must be strictly observed, otherwise the comparative intention will not be evident. Another example :—

The sun is more brilliant Dá-wa le nyima di ši-chen du'.
than the moon :

Again, the order runs : Than moon, the sun, brilliant is.

This stirrup-strap is longer Zhem-ma le yop-t'ák di ring (or than the other : ring-po) du'.

He is honester than you : Khyörunq le lho sháma du'.

To-day is finer than yesterday : Dang-le dhering le'-pa du'.

When the comparative degree occurs apart from any compared object, the words Dhe-la, “than that,” may be introduced for the sake of perspicuity :—

A firmer ice-ridge : Khyak-sam dhe-le tempo chik.

A more honest priest : Lama shá-ma lhak chí'.

β. The superlative degree is usually paraphrased into an universal comparative. So in the sentence: "He is the tallest," we should hear, "Than all he tall is." But "than" would be now rendered by nang-ne instead of by le.

This peak is high; that peak is higher; that other peak is the highest: Di zoktse di t'o-a du'; dhe-le di zoktse di t'o-wa du'; ts'ungma nang-ne zoktse shem-ma di t'o-shō du'.

N. B.—Di means "this," or "that" according to Tibetan phraseology, if it represents the present object of reference. Any past object of reference is denoted by dhe, whether we in our English colloquial style it "this" or "that." ts'ungma nang-ne means "than all."

Another popular mode of indicating the superlative degree is compassed by adding the syllable shoi or shō to the adjective. And this is often used without introducing "than all." Thus:—

That temple is the most famous in Tibet:	Di gompa di Pö-kyi-yul kyī rāk-chen-shoi du' .
This animal is the smallest:	Dhüd-ḍo di chhung-shō du' .
Lhāsa is the greatest city:	Lhāsā dhong-khyer chhe-shoi du' .
That sheep is the whitest:	Luk dhe kār-shō du' .

Note.—When shoi is appended, the affix po of the adjective is always omitted. Also, the arrangement of the words in the sentence is not of importance when shoi is employed. Akin to shoi is the word chhok, often confounded with it, which means "the best." Chhok is also added to adjectives to form an emphatic superlative. In comparing, however, yakpo = "good" and yāk-shō or tāk-shō = "best."

γ. For such comparisons as involve the connexion "so— as," e. g., "so great as," "so good as," "as far as," see post, Chap. VII, 4, iv. γ.

ADJECTIVES WITH SUBSTANTIVES.

Ohhu-pa lōnpa :	a wet coat.

Jhá karbo :	strong tea.
Tukpa chutchen :	strong soup.
Woma rul :	putrid milk.
Tá yipchen :	fine (shapely) horse.
Ti shimpo :	a sweet smell.
Gyá-o ringpo :	a long beard.

CHAPTER V. CARDINAL AND ORDINAL NUMERALS.

1. In Tibetan the numbers, both cardinal and ordinal can be used either as adjectives or as substantives. Used in the adjectival sense, the numeral invariably follows the noun which it qualifies; and, if there happens to be any ordinary adjective likewise attached to the noun, then the numeral is placed after such adjective:—

A-yu kyong-po sum : Three expensive puppies.

Wá-pák-kyi shámo ngá : Five fox-skin hats.

[Here wá pák is a substantive placed in the genitive; the literal meaning being "five hats of fox-skin."]

Lama shi-gyá-ship-chu lep chung : 440 lamas are present.

Ang-ki di té-ts'o-sum dhang tong-t'a gyo' dhang re-sum yó' :

The number is 38, 063.

[Here ang-ki di means "the number;" while 38, 063 is thus expressed: Three ten thousands and eight thousand and sixty-three. Yó' is the auxiliary.]

2. Such forms as "the four," "the two," "or both," &c., may be expressed by adding ka or po to the number: shi-ka, nyi-ka. Fractions by annexing chhá, as dün-chhá "the seventh." Multiplies by prefixing len, as len-nyi "twice," len-ngá "five times."

3. The ordinals annex pa to the cardinal, except "the first" which is dhang-po, as sum-pa "third." However, "thirty-first" is sum-chu chikpa, &c., not sum-chu dhangpo.

In conversation it is usual not to employ the bare ordinal alone, but to prefix the word ang-ki to each. Thus "the eighth" is expressed as ang-ki gye-pa :—

Mi dhe khang-pa ang-ki dhang-po la dö' gi-yö' : That man lives in the first house.

Su ang-ki dhang-po lep t'up yong ; toi-dhang : See ! who can get first.

It is even prefixed to juk-shö' or shuk-ma "the last" :—

Mi them-ma dhe khangpa ang-ki juk-shö' la dö'-gi-yö' : That other man lives in the last house.

4. GENERAL REMARKS — a. When two, three or more persons or things have been mentioned, it is a common custom to add the exact number of individuals or things thus enumerated. For example we might have such a sentence as: "The father, mother, with two sons and a daughter arrived at the town;" and, most probably if such were spoken in Tibetan, after the last person mentioned the numeral "five" would be introduced as indicating the total number of persons referred to: Pu nyi pumo dhang yab yum ngá dhang-kyer la p'ep chung (lit: "Father, mother, with two sons daughter five arrived at the town"). Again, when the number would be otherwise obscure: "The woman and her husbands (four) were turned out." This, the exact rendering of the Tibetan would indicate, not that the woman had four husbands, but that she and her three husbands, making together four, were ejected. So, also, if a woman and her two children were to be mentioned: in Tibetan, we should say kyermen dhang p'ugu sum = "Woman and her children three," meaning that together the whole numbered three. This habit of speech causes Tibetan enumerations to be not always obvious. Another instance: śáng-bhu chhem-po chung nyi: "large small degchies, two," i. e., "two degchies, a large and a small."

β. When alternative estimates of numbers are made, the conjunctions are omitted: e. g. Sum shi khur shok "Bring three or four."

γ. It is a frequent practice to add the numeral chik "one" to any specified statement of numbers.

Thus we might hear: Dhu-khá Chák-sam-la Tang-tong Gye-poi chhorten gyá-tsá-gye chik tsik-pa ro' meaning "At the Cháksam ferry Tang-tong Gyalpo built one hundred and eight chhortens," but literally "built one (or "a") one hundred and eight chhortens." Again: Láma sok-nyi chik p'ep jhung "One (or "a") thirty-two lamas have come." The conclusion is that the best rendering of this superfluous chik is by our indefinite pronoun "some." However chik indicates a definite and not an indefinite number; accordingly when any doubt as to the exact number exists, the word tsam follows the numeral with the meaning of "about" or "almost;" e. g., luk sumchu tsam "about thirty sheep."

CHAPTER VI. THE VERB.

SECTION A.—FORMATION.

1. In the language of the books we find the different modifications or tenses of the Verb expressed in two ways. Sometimes the structure of the verbal root itself is altered in order to produce these modifications, the spelling being changed according to the tense exhibited. At other times the required shade of meaning is brought out by means of additional syllables—one or more—appended to the simple root. Such affixes are either mere particles or else the various parts of some auxiliary verb. In the colloquial, this treatment with syllables affixed to the root seems to be almost the sole way of dealing with the various phases of the verb. The practice in the literary language of forming the tenses by changing the spelling of the simple root is in a few instances, however, resorted to in the colloquial.

The simplest form of the verb is, naturally, the bare root unattended by any affix. However if we are to resort to the ordinary European practice of presenting the Infinitive as the primary shape, we must in Tibetan set forth each root with a particle already adjusted.

The particle thus added to the verbal root for the production of the Present Infinitive is invariably either pa or wa, the former being affixed where the final letter of the root is any consonant save r or l, while wa is used after those consonants and after a final vowel. So many of the final letters being dropped in the colloquial, the application of this rule will therefore be not always observable in these pages, our present scheme being the representation of the words not as written but only as they are sounded. Thus we have :—

Jhye'pa : to do; Lū-pa : to be left, to remain.

These are words which in the written forms have d and s respectively as final letter of the root, and not as here a vowel, and which therefore take pa instead of wa. The specified rule, nevertheless, is easily traceable in the examples subjoined :—

Yong-wa : to come.	Lok-pa : to read.
Do-wa : to go.	Lap-pa : to speak.
Nyo-wa : to buy.	P'ab-pa : to take down.
Sher-wa : to measure, appraise.	Nyen-pa : to hear.
Jál-wa : to measure (length, &c).	Chhin-pa : to arrive.
Sá-wa : to eat.	Dzing-pa : to fight.
P'ul-wa : to give (hon.)	P'ep-pa : honorific term for either "to come" or "to go."

2. To view the elements of the formation of the verb in the regular course of its development and elaboration we shall properly deal next with the SUBSTANTIVE VERBS.

Of these there are several forms in use, namely :—

YINPA (sounded Yimpa) : "to be"—the mere auxiliary.

RE'PA : "to be"—another auxiliary.

YÖ'PA : "to be," "to exist," "to be present" (in a place.)

DU'PA (really Dukpa) : "to be," "to exist,"—most common in Western Tibet.

CHHI-PA : (མཚོས་པ་) "to be," "to exist"—polite form.

LÁGS-PA (generally sounded Lā-pa) "to be"—auxiliary employed instead of Yinpa addressing superiors.

ME'PA: "to be not"—negative form of Yō'pa.

MŌ'PA: "to be indeed"—intensive variety of Yō'pa.

MIN-PA: "not to be"—the negative copula.

a. The Present tense, Indicative, of all these verbs is the respective root of each standing alone; and this root is employed for all persons and both numbers:—

Thus: yin = am, art, is, are.

And so with Yō, Re, Du, Lā.

Yin, however, is restricted in use to the connection of the noun with an attribute whether adjective, noun or pronoun, and to its duties as auxiliary affix to ordinary transitive and intransitive verbs:—

Khyak-pa dhe tempo yin: That (or The) ice is firm.

Ming di Donḍup yin: The name is Donḍub.

Ngārang Pō'kyi mi yin: I am a Tibetan.

However, when yin is conjoined, as it often is, with Du'pa, we frequently hear such combination used to express existence in a place, but chiefly in negative and interrogative sentences:—

Pe-chhá di dhe-pa min-du': The book is not there.

The auxiliary Re is very popular and heard commonly, but not exclusively, in negative sentences. Its general use is as a copulative, like yin:—

Khyi di ngarchen ma re': The dog is not fierce.

Di ngai ma re': This is not mine.

Di-ni Pō'kyi pe-chhá re': This is a Tibetan book.

Nevertheless we have

Ghande re': How are you?

N. B.—Yin is more commonly used with the 1st person, re' with the 2nd and 3rd persons.

In positive sentences we find re as a pleonastic addition to the verb yō'pa:—

Khorang má-gi-la yō'pa re': He is down there.

Su yō'pa re' : who is here ? Kho-pa ghāru yō'pa re' ? Where are they ?

We can employ Yō'pa more frequently than any other of this series, and both Yō'pa and Du'pa (though primarily verbs of existence) may always take the place of Yin-pa in attributive sentences, though Yin-pa cannot be substituted for them :—

Khopa Gyang-tse-la yō' :	They are at Gyangtse.
Ngā-la dhe-pa tokpo shi' yō' :	I have a friend there (i. e. To me there a friend is).
Di shimpo du' :	This is nice.
Hā-lai-pa yō' :	It is astonishing.
Yam-ts'empo du' : kho ge'po min-du' :	It is wonderful : he is not an old man.
Dzā-ra di-la shu-gu mi yō' :	The shrew has no tail.

N. B.—Yō' is more commonly used with the 1st person, du' with the 2nd and 3rd persons.

β. INTERROGATIVELY, the use of the Substantive Verbs is as follows :—

Yimpe or Yinnā :	} Is it, is he, are you ?
Du'ká or Yindu' or E du' :
Yō'pe or Yō'dhá or E yō' :
Di-la ghande é yō' :	Why are you here ?
Mi-ts'o su yimpe :	Who are the men ?
Di-pa khyi ḍa du'ká :	Are there any dogs here ?
Nyi'la lukts'o kháshe yō'dhá :	Have you some sheep ?

If re' is the verb chosen (as it is often), then the interrogative tone of voice is sufficiently significant :—

Khyi di Yang-khyi re' :	Is the dog a real mastiff ?
Torma-yi kargyen di ghā re' :	Where are the torma butter-ornaments ?
Khyō' la há-lai-pa re' :	Are you surprised ?

The negative question forms are mindu', ma re', me'pe. Alternative interrogatives are frequent ; and the most common of these are the phrases du'ka mindu' and yin-du' mindu' (usually 'indu' mindu'') meaning "is it or not?" Also yinnam mannam and re'tang ma re', the latter attributively:—

Pe-chha di choktse wokla du'ka mindu' ? Is the book under the table or not ?

Khyi qa du'ka mindu' ; toi shok : Are there any dogs or not ; see !

Di-pa 'indu' mindu' : Is (he) here or not ?

Sap-sap re'tang ma re' : Is it deep or not ?

Di-ni ngái re'tang ma re' : Is this mine or not ?

Emphatically re' is annexed to yö'pa, as in:—

Di lá di tengla khau-a yö'pa re', me'pa re' : Is there snow on the pass or not ?

Khyörang-la di-ka yö'pa re', me'pa re' : Have you it or not ?

Also re' ma re' and yö'pe me' are other forms, the former being only used with attributes:—

Dhenda re' ma re' : Is it so or not ?

Gümpe nangla pechha-ts'o yö'pe me' : Are there any books in the gumpa or not ?

γ. The Past tense of all these auxiliary forms can be represented by either yö'pa yin or chhi du':—

Khyi-yi dok di nák-po yö'pa yin : The colour of the dog was black.

Ngárang mi ngempo shik song : I have been a bad man.

Kho dhe-tü shön-shön yö'pa yin : He was young then.

Pé-chha shik diru chhi du' : There was a book here.

Ngá-la khá-tsang á-lich yö'pa yin : I had a little yesterday.

Na-ning Dok-ghur dá sá-chhá la yö'pa yimpe : Were there any nomads' tents in this place last year ?

Naturally for our "has been," "have been," the past tense of "to go" is employed, which is either chhinpa yin or song:—

Khyörang gháru song : Where have you been ?

But of events yö'pa yin is rightly employed, and "was" in the assertive sense is rendered by that or by chhi du' or chhi yö'; as in di chhi yö' kyang, tanda ma yö': "though it was, now it is not," &c. Again, yin lä is another perfect auxiliary as in Dák-la kap yin lä "I have had the opportunity." (Lit. "To self opportunity was.")

However the Tibetan idiom seems to avoid as much as possible the resort to preterite tenses in the substantive verb when the latter would stand alone. Nevertheless, although the past tense of the verb "to be" when unsupported is very infrequent; yet, in combination with other verbs, as auxiliaries such forms are common and indispensable.

8. Where the Future tense of the verb "to be" is called for, do-wa "to go" and yong-wa "to come" are used as bearing the additional meaning "to become;" also jhung-wa "to arise":—

Dharing ts'd-po yong :	It will be hot to-day.
Khyörang yákpo yong-gyu-yin :	You will be good.
Ngárang dher jhung-yong :	I shall be there.

"Will be" is also rendered by yong lä (lágs).

Such constructions can often be put as the ordinary future of an impersonal verb. Thus in the sentence "I shall be sick" we resort to the future of the verb "to suffer by sickness" (ne'kyi širwa) using the dative of the personal pronoun. So also "I shall be hot" can be transformed into "Heat will come to me": ngárang-la ts'd-wa yong-gyu-yin.

SECTION B.—THE VERB ACTIVE.

I. PRESENT TENSE.—a. This tense is expressed in its simplest form by just the root of the verb deprived of all particles, saving of course in compound or connected sentences when there is annexed—as explained hereafter—some continuative particle (Infra. XIII, § 3.)

Ex: Gyuk-pa : to run : PRES. TENSE : gyuk : runs.

The modern colloquial has in most cases adopted for use, both as infinitive and as indicative present, the perfect root of the verb as it occurs in the written language. Thus sdod-pa and sdod are the literary forms of the verb “to stay, to remain,” in the infinitive and present; but the colloquial has taken the past tense bsdad for these purposes, and has dadpa and dad for “to stay” and “he stays,” pronouncing them however in accordance with the modern rule de’pa and de’. (See: Chap. I, Note.)

β. But when we come to place before the present tense (or other tenses) of a transitive verb some pronoun or any other noun, we find there is in Tibetan no such thing as a nominative case governing a verb and no such construction as a nominative being used with a transitive verb. In fact our conception of an ordinary simple sentence with subject, predicate, and object, has properly no place in the Tibetan mode of speech.

That which in European languages would be regarded as the subject and which would be placed in the nominative case is regarded in Tibetan as the agent by which a certain action or condition is brought about and is placed in the Agentive or Instrumental case, whilst the verb assumes almost the signification of a participle or a verbal noun to which, in the tenses other than the simple present, some auxiliary verb is added. The object is put as with us in the accusative. Thus the sentence: He wears a cap would in Tibetan be turned in this way: By him a cap a wearing is.

However, as Tibetan grammarians regard "a wearing is" as the present tense of the verb "to wear" and would not render the verbal noun "a wearing" always in this same manner, our theory of construction may be a mere speculative nicety, nevertheless we should translate our sentence into Tibetan Khorang-gī śhám̄bhu ghōn; and from thence merely deduce the practical rule that with a Tibetan transitive verb the nominative must be rendered by the agentive case.

Moreover—as if to render our remarks still less important—it must be admitted that in loose easy speech the agentive affix is frequently dropped and the noun or pronoun appears as though it were the ordinary nominative. Where the pronoun is not important to be expressed, it is altogether omitted: Śhám̄bu ghōn: "he wears a cap." Furthermore, with verbs of coming going or thinking the agentive case is not used.

γ. Another form of the Present tense and one perhaps in more common employment than the mere verbal root is produced by the addition of the syllables ghi yō' or ghi du' to the root. This is a sort of narrative present which, with a view to distinguish it from the simple indefinite present, we term Definite Present tense. It is as common with us as with Tibetans, under the form: "I am—ing."

Ex: Sá-wa: to eat: śá-ghi-du': he is eating.

The similar forms ghi yin' or ghi re' are nearly as frequent; and in Eastern Tibet the use with re' supersedes that of du' completely. Framing sentences with these appendices, we say:—

Ngárang Norbhu-gang máru do-ghi-yin': I am going down to Norbhu-gang.
A-ghung-ghi dhe-po tol-ghi-du': The sa'is (horse boy) is unfastening the mule.

Of this tense we may subjoin a specimen in orthodox form, using the pronouns in the Agentive, as the verb "to beat" is a transitive one.

INDICATIVE MOOD.

Definite Present Tense.

Singular.

Plural.

Ngárang-ghi dung-ghi-yō (or yin): Ngáts'o-ghi dung-ghi-yō (or yin):
I am beating. We are beating.

Khyōrang-ghi dung-ghi-du' (or re'): Khyōts'o-ghi dung-ghi-du':
Thou art beating. You are beating.

Khorang-ghi dung-ghi-du': (or re'): Khopdi dung-ghi-du':
He is beating. They are beating.

8. A third kind of Present Tense is likewise in vogue. It appears to be resorted to in order to indicate that an action is just on the very point of being carried into operation. It seems appropriate to class this notion as a Present rather than as a Future action; the idea being that it is too imminent to be considered in any sense as what is "about to be"—the motion and its announcement, as it were, starting simultaneously. We style the expression of this idea the Present Imminent Tense. Perhaps it signifies "I am just doing so-and-so," quite as frequently as it means: "I am on the point of doing so-and-so." The Tibetan equivalent is expressed in two ways:—

(1) By the addition of the word kap to the root of the verb and annexing thereafter yin or yō for the first person and re' or du' for the other persons.

(2) By affixing the syllable gāng (really གཤམ་) to the genitive of the Infinitive of the verb, annexing also auxiliaries similarly as in (1).

In Lhása (2) has superseded in the colloquial the first method which, however, continues to be followed in epistolary composition. Kap (really skabs) = "chance," "means," "opportunity."

PRESENT IMMINENT TENSE.

Singular.

Ngá ðo-wai gǎng yin : I am just going.

Khyö' ðo-wai gǎng re' : Thou art just going.

Kho ðo-wai gǎng re' : He is just going.

Plural.

Ngá-ts'o ðo-wai gǎng yin : We are just going.

Khyö'ts'o ðo-wai gǎng re' : Ye are just going.

Kho-pa ðo-wai gǎng re' : They are just going.

The precise meaning of Ngá ðo-wai gǎng yin or Nga ðo kap yin would therefore be "I am starting" :—

Bring the horse up to the door : Tá di gya-go t'uk f'i shok !

I am just bringing it : Di f'i kap yö.

The sun is setting : Nyima gai-pai gǎng re'.

Make tea : The water is about to boil : Soljha sü chik : Chhu di khol kap du'.

I am just doing some work : Ngá le-ka jhye'pai gǎng yin.

Are they starting now or not : Khopa tanda ðo-wai gǎng re' ma re'.

(N. B.—The ai in ðo-wai, gai-pai, &c., is sounded nearly like ay in our "way.")

PAST TENSES.

(1) There appear to be several ways of expressing the more or less perfected form of any action and the exact shade of meaning indicated by the different methods employed is not ascertainable from native informants. The more frequent shape which the past tense assumes is the root of the verb with either jhung (sounded chung) or song annexed as an affix. Certain verbs prefer jhung; others song ; and no rule seems to determine the affix chosen, custom deciding the usage with each particular verb :—

Shi-wa : to die ;	shi song : died.
Ts'ar-wa : to finish ;	ts'ar song : finished.
T'ong-wa : to see ;	t'ong jhung : saw.
T'ob-pa : to receive, obtain ;	t'ob jhung : received, got.

(2) The more emphatic sense, or perhaps what the French would style the Past Indefinite, is best rendered by another form, namely, the participle with yin annexed for the first person, and du' or re' for the second and third : e. g., chhyin-pa-yin : I did go ; chhyin-pa-re' : he has departed ; dzang-pa-re' ; has sent ; t'ob-pa-du' : did get. Choice of past forms often depends on the person involved. Thus neither jhung nor song seem used with a 1st person ; so, " I arrived " is Ngá lep-pa-yin and never Ngá lep jhung ; but " he arrived " might be Kho lep jhung.

(3) Other forms seem to indicate rather a Passive meaning, though often used for more emphatic expression of the perfect tense active :—

α. The root with yō' or du' added : dzang du' : was sent, has been sent ; to sai yō' (ཐོ་སེམས་ཡོད་) has been eaten.

β. Sometimes du' is annexed in addition to song : shi song du' : has died, is dead :—

Loma t'amché shing-ne bok song du' The leaves have all dropped from the tree.

γ. To the gerund in nai (ne), yō' is added. This appears to require a rendering approaching our Imperfect Tense : Dul-ne-yō' : I was walking, have been walking.

δ. Final completion of any operation is expressed where necessary by the addition of ts'ar du' or sin du' to the root of any verb :—

Pumo di le-zhu khor kyap zin du' : The girl has done spinning.

Khopa to sái ts'ar du' : They have finished eating.

Dhá-rung kho to sái t'sar mi du' : He has not yet finished eating.

Ts'ar-pa-yin (1st person); ts'ar-pa-re' (2nd and 3rd) are occasionally heard here instead of ts'ar du' ; also, negatively, ts'ar-pa-me'.

(4) There exists in Tibetan a regular form of Imperfect Tense, but which is not resorted to on all occasions when we should use that tense. It is a curious circumlocution, but is, I am assured, in common use in Lhasa. It is formed by adding to the verbal root the expression go-sám-jhung or go-sam song meaning literally "did think must." Ex: Khorang shing la dzak go-sam song-te mar šak song : As he was climbing the tree, he fell down.

A lengthier form is go-sam-nai chhyin-pa : e. g. Tumling la do go-sam-nai chhyin-pai nge pui-mo dap jhung : In going to Tumlong, my knee was hurt.

(5) Sometimes a perfect inflection of the verbal root is current; it is then generally conjoined to pa yin : e. g. sai-pa-yin has eaten; nyoi-pa-yin has bought.

FUTURE TENSE.

There are two particular forms for this tense both in common use; either yong or gyu yō' (yin or du') may be added to the root of the verb: nyo yong "will buy;" ňang-la do-gyu yin : "I will go home;" khyö di-la ts'ong-gyu-du' ka mindu' : "will you sell it or not?" kho tanda gyel-gyu-yō' : "now he will slip."

Sometimes the Infinitive alone is employed, as in:—

Ngá-ts'o la chhá-ghang nyo-wa : What shall we buy?

Khyō'la ghang jhye'-pa : What will you do?

But, it will be seen, the nominative changes to the dative case.

Very commonly we notice the Present Narrative taking the place of the Future, e. g. Do-ghi-du' used for Do-gyu-du, as is the English practice also.

The negative form takes me' as the final syllable; occasionally we have min:—

Má-gi-la tō ma dhang; dhenḍa Don't look down; then you khyō'rang gyel-gyu-me' will not fall.

With the affix yong the negative particle is mi:—

Kyappōn di dhárang ge-long-ts'o la jalkhá nang mi yong: The Protector (i. e., Grand Lama) will not give audience to the ge-longs this morning.

N. B.—The rule, generally so rigid in Oriental speech, that if the dependent clause of a conditional sentence have the future construction so also shall the antecedent clause, is not commonly observed in Tibetan colloquial. Take such a sentence as this: "If you always read at night, you will certainly injure your eyes." In Hindustani every native would turn the first part of the sentence "If you always shall read, &c." Contrariwise, the Tibetan would express the future only in the second clause as we do in English, thus:—

Ke-si khyō' ts'en-la takpa-reshi ḡige dok na, nenten m̄ik-la šuk gyak-gyu-re'.

IMPERATIVE MOOD.

α. The simplest form is the mere root, which in some cases has the central vowel altered. Occasionally we find a special word is in vogue. To the root, whether altered or not, may be always appended chik or shik, sounded quickly. This is the more imperative style of demand. However the traveller will do well to remember that Tibetans are not so amenable to curt commands as are the natives of India. A real order, nevertheless, requires chik.

β. Several politer forms are used among equals and these are by aggregation rendered still more precative when addressing superiors. Thus the following alternative appendices may be added to the root in lieu of chik :—

(1) Ro; (2) Ro chik—often contracted into Roch; (3) Ro nang; (4) Ro dzö; (5) Nang chi; (6) Ro jhyi-shik!

These all imply the sense of our word “please.”

In Western districts, instead of chik, the word tong is used, and instead of the polite forms a second word zhu is appended, Ro zhu is also heard in lieu of the Ro nang of Central Tibet.

Examples :—

Wash the horse :	Tá-po di tui shik.
Lay the child down on the cushion :	P'ugn ch'u'ten-la nya'ne shok!
Give me two rupees for the dog :	Ngá-la khyi-i chhyirtu gyá-tam nyi nang ro nang!
When your work is done, come to me :	Rang-ghi le-ka ts'ar-ne nge tsar p'ep ro chi!
Please shew me the way :	Lam di ten ro dzö!
Please send three rupees without delay :	Gyá-tam sum tanda lamsang tang roch.
Come with me the whole way :	Ngá dhang nyampo lam kang-gá la p'ep nang chi!

Ro alone added to the verbal root is generally enough; or zhu in the West and in Ladak. The causative verb jhye'pa is frequently added to the Imperative to give emphasis: Shing luk jhyi': put on wood.

γ. With certain verbs we find the Imperative formed by annexing tang or dhang (really “and”) to the verbal root or the Imperative word; e. g. Di to so dhang: Eat this; Tö tang: See! Look!

With other verbs, shok (“come”) makes the Imperative.

δ. As already stated, a number of verbs retain in the colloquial the special inflected forms which are to be found in the literary language. The principal are these:—

Do-wa :	to go	imperative :	Song !
Yong-wa :	to come	„	Shok !
Shákpa :	to place	„	Sho ! (guttural) !
Kkyakpa :	to carry	„	Khyok !
Tí-wa :	to see	„	Tò dhang or Tò shok !
Jhye'pa :	to do, to make	„	Jhyi (pr. chyi) !
Kyelwa :	to convey	„	Kyal ! (or kyò shik) !
Khur yong-wa :	to bring	„	Khur shok !
Khur ðo-wa :	to take away	„	Khur song !
T'i-wa :	to lead	„	T'i shok !
To id-wa :	to eat	„	To ìo or ìo dhang !
Dze'pa :	to do, make (honorific), „		Dzò !
Chhák-pa :	to break	„	Chhok chik !
Tung-wa :	to let go, send	„	Tong !
Dzek-pa :	to climb	„	Zok !
Táb-wa :	to strike	„	Top !
Túk-pa :	to tie	„	Tok !
P'áp-pa :	to put down, adjust „		P'op !
Yar lung-wa :	to rise up	„	Yar long ! (“Get up”)

It will be observed that in the majority of the above, the Imperative is merely the verbal root with the central vowel altered into “o.”

PARTICIPLES.

a. There are two forms used to represent the participial mood; but there seems to be no distinction made between the present and past participle, either form being employed whatever the time of action. The more correct form is identical with the Infinitive, being expressed by the root of the verb with the affix pa annexed, or after vowels and final r or l the kindred affix wa:—

Ngárang gyel-wa la t'd-nye-po I was nearly falling (lit: was yõ'pa yin: near to falling).

often, however, the colloquial adopts the affix khen of pa or wa.

These participles are employed in composition pre- after the fashion of adjectives; being used in the native case when placed after the noun to which they related, or in the genitive when preceding the noun:—

- m kang-gá hab-khen kyi khyi di*: The dog barking all night.
i-wai lang-to t'ong jhung: I observed the ox dying.
li-po ngá-la dung-khen dhe sam- The man who struck me ran pai t'e'-lam la gyuk song: over the bridge.
Ngádrang gyel-ne di pui-mo ngön- I fell down and bruised the knee ts'e dung-khen dhe-la dap song: which was formerly struck.

The di is introduced in order to mark off the participial clause more clearly; but this usage is optional.

Where the conjunction "that" would be resorted to in English, a participial construction is often found in Tibetan:—

I did not see that the water Chhu di khyak-pa t'ong-pa-me.
 was frozen:

I knew that he was coming: Nga-i kho yong-pa she jhung.

From the foregoing examples it will now be evident that the whole participial clause can be handled and moved about bodily as if it were a single adjective qualifying the substantive. Thence we are brought to the most important function of the participial construction in Tibetan.

γ. All relative clauses are expressed without the use of relative pronouns by the substitution of the participial for the relative construction. In these cases the verb is made to take the form of a participle and the whole clause becomes one gigantic adjective qualifying the antecedent of the relative clause. As before the whole clause being terminated by the participle it may be handled and shifted as any other adjective, the participle being inflected according to its position with respect to the antecedent and the sense to be conveyed.

Thus such a sentence as—

“The butcher who brought the sheep to the door of this house stole my boots.”

Must be rendered somewhat in the style of—

“The bringing-the-sheep-to-the-door-of-this-house butcher stole my boots.”

“Bringing-the-sheep-to-the-door-of-this-house” is, as it were, the gigantic adjective qualifying the noun “butcher;” and the whole sentence in Tibetan stands thus:—

Khyim di-yi go t'uk luk khyer-wa di shempa di ngdrang-ghi lham kwi-ne khur song.

As the verb in every clause or sentence invariably occurs as the final word, the participle in these cases alone receives inflection. In the foregoing example, the relative clause might just as readily be placed after the antecedent shempa, the participle taking the nominative in lieu of the genitive case. The article in this arrangement often occurs twice, standing both before the noun and after the gigantic adjective or relative clause, thus:—

Di shempa khyim di-yi go t'uk luk khyer-wa di, &c.

Let another example be taken:—

“The boy to whom I gave the dog was clad in a yellow coat.” Before attempting to translate this sentence, it may be conveniently transposed as follows—

“The boy who by me was given a dog was clad in a yellow coat.” We can now shape our gigantic adjective as “The by-me-given-a-dog” and place it before or after the antecedent noun “boy,” rendering the sentence thus:—

Ngdrang-ghi khyi shik ter-khen kyi potso dhe-yi ko-lok serpe ghyön-pá-dw.

Analysing our example, we have the relative clause with its terminative word the participle ter-khen appearing in the genitive case because of the position of the clause before the qualified noun potso. Then we have potso di appearing in the agentive case as the subject of the main clause (Ch. VI, § B. I. β), and the verb ghyön-pa-du' the nearest approach to an imperfect tense which would seem the most appropriate to the general meaning of the sentence. Ko-lok serpo "yellow coat" might be also dukpo ser.

Another example :—

I praise the girl who did this : Ngdrang-ghi menshar di-ni jhye'-khen dhe-la tö'-ra tang-ghi yö'.

N. B.—Here di-ni jhye'khen is the quasi adjective following its noun menshar a girl, and interposed between the noun and its article dhe.

But such a sentence as the following is correlative rather than relative and requires the relative pronoun :—

I praise whichever girl did this : Ngdrang-ghi su yang di-la jhye'-khen-kyi menshar lá tö'-rá nang.

Or perhaps less cumbrous would be the alternative form—

Ngdrang-ghi menshar su yang jhye'khen la, &c.

8. Other participial forms will fall more conveniently under subsequent illustrations of gerundial construction.

6.—GERUNDS AND SUBORDINATE CLAUSES.

a. Gerunds of Occurrence.—Short dependent clauses indicating the time or occasion of some general or particular statement in a principal sentence are ruled by a subordinate verb which in English takes the form of a gerund, or else is a simple verb introduced by the pronoun "when." In Tibetan such dependent clauses are terminated by the simplest form of the verb to which the affix la or sa is annexed. Sometimes the Infinitive with the same affix is resorted to in these cases.

Several examples will exhibit the usage with gerunds of this kind:—

- On approaching the horse, it kicked violently: Túpo dhang t'd-nyépo do la, dhákpo dok-t'o p'ul jhung.
- On hearing the voice, he looked back: Drá di nyen-pa la, kho chiú-lok tai jhung; or kho drá di nyen-pa la, chhi-lok, &c.
- When he stepped on the bridge, it broke: Sampa-i tangla dok bor-la, chhák jhung. (dok bor-wa = to place foot).
- When you fire the rifle, I will run towards you: Mendá gyak la, khyōrang-ghá t'ekya shor yong.

(N. B.—The pronouns are frequently omitted, as ngarang “I” is omitted here).

ii. A less obvious use with la is in short copulative sentences where in Hindustani we should employ the past conjunctive participle; e. g. Go and pick it up: Song la ruk shik! Go and fetch the girl: Song la menshar di khur shok! Wake up and light the fire: nyi' sō'la mé bhar nang chs'!

This is evidently only a derived use, as the la is annexed to the verb in its imperative form, and therefore is hardly analogous to the Hindustani idiom: Jakar dekho; kadam uthake jao, &c.

iii. Frequently in accessory clauses commencing with “when,” instead of the gerund in la, we hear used the verbal root with the adverb tú or tui “at the time of” annexed. Sometimes also in those cases the participle in khen in the genitive with ts'e-na added serves the same purpose: e. g. Leb-khen-kyi ts'ena, ke tang jhung “When he arrived, he shouted out;” or kho leb tui, ke tang jhung.

β. Gerunds of Mode or the verbal use in accessory participial clauses. Properly the Gerund is mainly an expanded adverb explaining the accessory circumstances accompanying any action; and thus we do right to class as gerundial all those clauses which are an enlargement or explanation of the principal predicate. These clauses are in English interposed in sentences with the aid of the participles in "ing" or "having—ed." Such clauses in colloquial Tibetan are rendered by using a gerund consisting of the verbal root and the particle nái (sounded almost as ne). Examples:—

- | | |
|--|---|
| He remained all day thrashing the corn: | Kho, du yur-le jhe'ne, nyin-kang gor song. |
| Putting out his tongue, the Tibetan ge-nyen saluted me: | Ché jung-ne (or tön-ne), Pö-kyi ge-nyen di ngá-la chham-bül shu jhung. |
| Having abandoned father, mother, and his younger brother, this man dwells alone in the cave: | Mi-po di yab yum no-o pang-ne, chik-pu tak-p'uk nangla dé. |

ii. Many sentences composed of co-ordinate clauses may be reduced into forms akin to the foregoing gerundial construction and are usually rendered by the aid of the gerund in ne. Thus such a sentence as "I will climb up the tree and fasten the rope," being adapted for translation into the form "Climbing up the tree I will fasten the rope," is easily rendered: Shing-la dzag-ne, t'ák-pa di dam-gyu yin.

In fact it should be borne in mind that THIS IS THE ONLY CORRECT WAY OF RENDERING ALL SUCH SENTENCES:—

- | | |
|--|--|
| He took up the gun, crossed over the bridge, and has not yet returned: | Khorang mendá len-ne, śampa la galne, tanda par lokne leb ma jhung. |
| I will hold the bridge and then you can easily pass over: | Ngórang-ghi śampa-la sin-ne, khyórang le-lá-po-la gal chok. |

iii. The passive form of these gerundial clauses is equally to be translated by the gerund in ne, e. g. :—

- | | |
|--|--|
| Having been found stealing, I dismiss you: | Ngé khyó'rang ku-ma ku-khen la nye-ne, gong-pa ter-ghi-yin; or Ngórang khyó'rang ku-ma ku-pa dhang t'e' jhung-ne, khyó'rang-lu fol ter. |
|--|--|

iv. In copulative sentences, akin to those in a, ii, ne is likewise employed:—

Go and see; is it so or not: Khyō' song-ne dhenda yinnam mannam; tō' shok!

γ. Minor interpositions in gerundial clauses often take a gerund of another form. This is composed of the root, to which the particle ching or shing is annexed, e. g.:—

The Chinaman having departed uttering vain abuse, the Tibetans laughed loudly: Gyá-mi di lap-she dhön-me' la gyak-ching song-ne, Pö-pa-ts'oi há-chha gyak song.

The argali, as it ran away bleeding, fell down into the gorge: Nyen di f'ák nang-ching (or f'ák lar-ching) shor-ne dokpo-i t'engla díl jhung.

δ. Gerunds of Sequence. The clauses governed by gerunds of this class imply some result directly proceeding from and dependent upon their statements, and we often find such clauses introduced in English by the preposition “by.” The particle pai or pe annexed to the verbal root is in Tibetan the form for this kind of gerund, and it may be employed in all clauses which allege a reason for something which is asserted immediately as a result therefrom. Thus “by doing so-and-so,” “because he did this,” &c., all require the gerund in pe. As before, the usage may be best indicated by examples:—

By leaving the milk on the fire, it has boiled over: Woma di me-la lái-pe, lü'song.

You left this stick, so I have brought it now: Khyórang-ghí di yuk-pá di bor-pe, tanda nge di-la khyok jhung.

Send the oxen first, they will trample down the snow: Ngáma lang-ts'o dsang-pé, dhe-ts'oi khau-a dzi yong (or dok dung yong).

He ran away to Dongtse, because he was afraid: Khorang shé'-pé, Dongtse t'ukpa la shor-jhung.

Having lost my baggage in Ohhu-wo gal-ching, rang-ghi crossing the river, I have chhá-lák ghó'-la song-pe, ngá- neither tent nor bedding: rang-la ghur malchhá me'.

ii. As will have been noted in the foregoing sections, the use of the ordinary copulative "and" is in Tibetan generally avoided. Where in English two sentences, not necessarily subordinate to one another, are linked together by the conjunction, in transferring them into the Tibetan tongue we must resort to the gerundial or participial construction. The same practice obtains in those compound sentences when the second clause is in any way to be interpreted as a consequence of the first; and, although such conjunctions as "because," "therefore," "but," &c., have their equivalents in Tibetan, they are only seldom heard. Pe denotes always the consequential construction and is used even when the conjunction is expressed as well. For disjunctive clauses with "but," see the chapter relating to conjunctions in general. A few more examples are added:—

The father pursued them and A-p'á di kho-ts'o-la nyak-pe, regained his daughter: rang-ghi bhumo yang lokne nye jhung.

Meeting the Chinaman in the Hrak-la Gyá-mi dhang f'e'-pe, ravine, the brave Tibetan Pö'pa pá-o di menda gyap- fired his gun and the China- pe, Gyá-mi qoi song.
man fled:

I beat the dog for biting the Ngdrang-ghi khi-la, bhé'pa di so traveller: t'ap-pai lén-la, dung song.

I engaged the man because he Dhángpoyimpeá-suk mi-podhang is honest: dzin shuk jhung.

Being intent on reading, the Dik-pa mang-po-la ten-pe, qhe'- appearance of the bear fright- mo jhung-ne, nyá-la qhe'pa ened me: jhye' du'.

Literally: "By being held in much reading, the bear appearing (or 'there being an appearing by the bear') to me a frightening was made."

7. SUPINES.—This part of the verb, properly speaking, is always an appendix to some other verb, being in truth nothing else than an “extension of the predicate.” It is chiefly annexed to verbs of seeing, coming, going, and wishing. In Tibetan colloquial we find various methods of expressing a supine.

a. Sometimes in offhand speech the mere Infinitive or even the bare root:—

The rain has ceased to fall : Chharpa di bap chhé song.
 I want to go : Ngarang-la do goi-pa-yö'.

Literally: “To me there is a wanting to go,”—do tallying with the supine “to go.”

β. More frequently we meet with la annexed to the root or infinitive, especially after verbs of motion:—

I go to make ready the victu- Ngá to-chha f'al-dik jhe'pa-la als : do.
 I came to see the monastery : Di gompa t'ong-la yong jhung.

Supines here are f'al-dik jhe'pa-la and t'ong-la.

The beggar is coming to beg : Pang-go di long-la yong-ghi-da'.

γ. Most correctly with gyu or else by means of dhöndhu and the genitive participle:—

Marpa, having heard it said } Marpa-yi Dolma yong-ghi-da' that Dolma was coming, } ser-gyu t'oi-nai, dong t'uk-pai went to meet her : } dhön-dhu song.

N. B.—Here we have two supines “said” or “to be said” expressed by ser-gyu, and dong t'ukpai dhöndhu meaning “to meet,” dong t'ukpai being the genitive of the participle. Literally we may translate the Tibetan: “Marpa (in agentive case) having heard to be said ‘Dolma is coming,’ went in order for meeting (her).” Pronouns where obvious are omitted.

He gave it me to eat : Khö ngá-la di sä-gyu ter-pa-re'.
 As the sun is sinking, you will } Nyi-ma nup nup la, khyä-kyi see me approaching from } ngá-la ri-kyi teng-nai jön-gyn over the mountain : } tá-gyu yin.

N. B.—“As” “while” are expressed by la with the repeated verbal root.

In place of dhöndku, we frequently hear dhönla (tön-la) and dhön dhák-la (tön-ták-la):—

I shall stay at home to read Ngá pechhá dok-pai dhön-dhák- books: la nang-la gor-gyu-yin.

δ. Frequently, in expressing the supine, la is attached to gyu; and in fact that is the commoner usage with gyu:—

I am longing to eat these puffs: Ngárang mo-mo di-t's'o iá-gyu la íhem-ki-yin.

I promised to thresh the corn Ngárang sang-nyin du-la ge'
to-morrow: gyap-gyu la kha lempa yō'.

But, equally, we hear

I wish to go home: Ngá nang-la do-gyu dō'-ghi-yō'.

Have you learned to write: Khyō' yi-ge di-gyu shei jhung- nga?

ε. The practice with the Inchoative Verb is to place gyu in the genitive:—

He began to build the new Kho khá-sang tsik-pa sarpa di wall yesterday: gyap-gyu-i go-dzuk song.

I am beginning to speak Tibe- Ngárang Pō'-ke' tik-tse chí' lap- tan a little: gyu-i go-tsuk-ghi-yō'.

Always begin to work at once: Dhū-gyün lo-ka jhye'gyu-i go- dzuk t'el-t'el-la.

N. B.—"At once" is sometimes for convenience placed after the verb; see also this construction in other cases where two adverbs might occasion confusion.

Sometimes, however, the usage with gyu-la is observed with an inchoative; e. g.:—

He began to eat an hour ago: Kho to iá-gyu-la go-tsuk-ne chhu-ts'ō' chik song.

(Literally: "From he beginning to eat, one hour has gone.")

N. B.—Go-dzuk-pa and go-tsuk-pa "to begin" are both in use.

ς. In such expressions as "Tell him to go," "Order him to send it," &c., the supine would never be employed; but instead two Imperatives—"Tell him-go!" &c.

8. NEGATIVE FORMS.—i. There are two negative auxiliary verbs correspondent to yō'pa and yim-pa, namely mə'pa "to be without," "not to exist," and min-pa "to be not," the simple connective of the attribute. The former may also be used as the negative connective.

I am without food : Ngá-la to-chhá mə' ("To me there is not food.")

The dog is not savage : Khyi di ngarpo min.

Sometimes du' is annexed in the latter case:—

The girl is not pretty : Menshar di chhormo min du'.

Here is an example of the negative in a participial or relative clause:—

Chinese are men without pity Gyámi-ts'o di nying-je mə'pa-yi (lit: "Chinese are men who mi-ts'o yə' are without pity:")

ii. Two negative particles are in use with ordinary verbs either in the case of the simple root of a verb or with the compound forms:—

Mi is employed with the Present Tense and Future Tense.

Ma with the Past Tenses and the Imperative Mood.

These negative particles in the case of compound verbs should be introduced just next preceding the last syllable of the compound:—

I shall not eat meat to-day : Dhe-ring shá íd mi yong.

The men have not perished : Mi-ts'o lák ma jhung.

I do not see him : Ngá kho-la n̄ik mi tá.

Where one member of the compound is yin or yō', we may substitute in negative forms mén or mə':—

It will not be necessary : Goi-gyu-men.

He will not do the work well : Le-ka yákpō jhyá-gyu-mə'.

He is not running now : Dhá-de kho gyuk-ki-mén.

iii. Important. In the negative Imperative, the Present Indicative form of a verb, and not the ordinary Imperative is used. Thus, "Don't come" is ma yong, not ma shok; "Don't eat" is to ma sâd, not to ma sô!

9. INTERROGATIVES.—a. The simple interrogative form of the verb is the same as that in literary use; i. e., the final letter is re-duplicated and the syllable am affixed thereto: but the final m is usually silent:—

Lep jhung-ngá :	Has he arrived ?
Yong-gyu-yinná :	Will he come ?
Dhárung khyö' to sai ts'ár-rá :	Have you finished eating yet ?

β. Where an interrogative pronoun is introduced, the additional syllable is unnecessary (though sometimes used), and the pronoun is then generally placed immediately before the verb:—

Khyö'kyi singmo ghá-ru do-ghi-yö' :	Where is your sister going ?
Di su yin :	Who is this ?
Di-pa su yö' :	Who is here ?

γ. In a sentence of past signification, in which an interrogative pronoun occurs, the verb is always used as in the Infinitive Mood Present Tense:—

P'orpa di su-la ter-pa ?	To whom did you give the cup ?
Khyö' nam leb-pa yim-pa ?	When did you come (arrive) ?

A curious construction is resorted to in sentences of present and future signification the gerundial affix pas (sounded pai or pe) being appended to the auxiliary terminants of those tenses:—

Khyö'-kyi singmo ghá-na do-ghi-yö'pai ?	Where is your sister going ?
Khyö' yi-ge fi-gyu shin-ghi-yö'pe :	Are you learning to write ?
Dhering do-gyu-yimpe :	Shall we go to-day ?
Khyö' la ghang jhung-wai :	What is the matter with you ?
Khorang-ghi kháshe go-yö' pe :	Does he want some ?
Kho-la so šuk gyak-ghi-yö'-pai :	Has he got toothache ?

δ. Quite a different method of expressing the interrogative is also to be met with. No syllable is appended to the verb; but, instead, a short abrupt interjectional particle sounded ah or é, is interposed before the utterance of the final verb:—

Yul-ngen é jhung ?	Is a tempest arising ?
Di dong-pa la ná-ts'ang é yó' :	Are there lodgings in this village ?
Dák-la lamkhen chi yó'pa é yó' :	Am I to have a guide ?
Dhá-p'en é ma ts'ar :	Is it not finished by now ?

c. A curious expletive, sounded o-go, is often heard added on to interrogative sentences, chiefly negative ones, evidently intended to impart a persuasive turn to the question. In common talk it may be said to answer to our “won't you,” “will you,” at the end of any hortative injunction:—

Mándro, o-go :	Don't go, will you ?
Yong-gyu-yimpa, o-go :	You will come, won't you ?
Khyi-la ma táng, o-go :	Don't let go of the dog, will you ?
Ling-po jhs'-la chhing, o-go :	You'll tie it up securely, won't you ?
Mángu, o-go :	Don't cry, will you ?

Remark: The practice of re-iterating the verb in negative imperatives is common. Thus do mándro is as frequent as mándro.

10. USE OF “NYONG.”—The employment of this verb is peculiar. Nyong-wa means primarily “to taste” and hence comes to signify “to experience—undergo:” whence it seems to have been gradually utilised as an auxiliary in cases where a sense of perpetuity was to be imparted. Accordingly nyong is now used as a suffix when the general meaning of “never” or “ever” is to be indicated; but its use is confined to sentences employed in the past sense and more commonly in the negative:—

Ngárang dhéru song ma nyong :	I have never been there.
Ngen-la ngá pechha mángpo yige	I have never read so many
dok ma nyong dhendai :	books before.
Ngárang-ghi nyá íá ma nyong :	I never did eat fish.

Khyō'kyi dzo chhempo dhenḍai Did you ever see so big a dzo ṣhik t'ong é ma nyong : (yak) as that ?

Khyō'kyi ts'ur-la nam-yáng yong Have you ever been here ma nyong-ngḍ (m) : before ?

11. POTENTIAL MOOD.—The ability or possibility of carrying out an action, or of compassing anything, is expressed in literary Tibetan by adding the verb Nus-pa, "to be able," to the root of the active verb affected. The verb Nus-pa is thus added inflected in any required tense. In the colloquial this verb, sounded nü-pa, is still heard, but other potential auxiliaries are oftener resorted to; e. g. Chok-pa, and Tub-pa (sounded T'u-pa). Anyone of these may be affixed either to the verbal root or (less commonly) to the gerund:—

Ngḍ tānda ḍo chok :	I can go now.
Khyō-kyi P'iling ké lap chok :	You are able to speak English.
Ngḍ-rang dhū-gyün jhye' nū :	I can always do it.
Khorang khā-sang ṅyo chok ma song :	He could not buy it yesterday.
Nge ṭák-la dzák t'u-ghi-me' :	I cannot climb the rock.
Khyō' nyin-sang laptse t'ong t'u yong :	You will be able to see the pass to-morrow.

β. When the potential assumes an interrogative form, the potential auxiliary nearly always takes the future tense:—

Khyō' p'd-ghi-ru gyukshá lō' t'u Can you run there ?
yong-nga :

(N. B.—In Lhasa, gyukshá lō'-pa "to run" is often said instead of gyuk-pa.)

ḍo chok yong-nga :	Can you go ?
Dhe dzak t'u mi yong-nga :	Cannot we climb up it ?
Su ang-ki dhangpo lep t'u yong :	Who can get first ?

But the future is not used in such as these:—

Khyō'-rang-ghi Pō-yi(k) lo t'u- ghi yō'dhang me' :	Can you read Tibetan or not ? (lo-pa or lok-pa "to read.")
Kho khā-sang ḍá chok song-nga :	Could he eat yesterday ?

γ. Such expressions as "what you can" and "as—as you are able," can be rendered by the form ghang chok-pa :—

Ghang chokpa nang ro dse :	Give as much as you can.
Ngá ghang chokpa gyokpo chhyin- pa-yin :	I went as quickly as I could.
Khyö' ghá-ru chokpa dzok ìhi' :	Climb up as far as you are able.
Khyö'-rang ts'a-po ghang t'u-pa t'ung :	Drink it as hot as you can.
Ngá m'angpo ghang chokpa t'op yong :	I will get as many as I can.
Khyö'-rang ghá-dhü chokpa do ren du' :	As soon as you can, it is time to go.

Another verbal form equivalent to chok-pa is found in TS'UK-PA, to be able :—

Can he see us ?	Khorang-ghi ngá-chá-la t'ong ts'uk-ká ?
-----------------	--

As the traveller journeys west of Shigatse, he will find both these potential auxiliaries entirely replaced by T'ub-pa, which word is also often heard at Lhásá.

12. THE POSSESSIVE VERB "TO HAVE."—As in most of the Oriental idioms, this form requires to be expressed by a circumlocution. The construction is either the common one of "To me, him, &c., there is;" or that in vogue in Hindustani: "Near me, him, &c., there is." With pronouns, the former is the ordinary usage:—I have a horse: Ngárang-la tá chik yö'. With a noun-substantive the latter construction is more general:—The child has a pretty face: Di p'ugu-la dong ts'arpo yö' or Di p'ugu tsánai dong &c. when tsánai is used, it would be more correct to place the preceding noun in the genitive: Lámá-yi tsánai ngul ts'angma du': "Near the Lama all the money is" = "The Lama has all the money."

The Past construction requires as auxiliary jhung du', e. g. ná-ning ngá-la ìhámo sum jhung du': "Last year I had three hats." Again: "Because I had a little business, therefore I could not come: ngá-la le-ka tiktse jhung-po, dhe-re yong t'ub ma song.

13. OPTATIVE FORMS.—The sense of "must," "ought to," &c., is expressed in a manner akin to the French il faut with the dative of the agent. The verb used is go-pa "to be necessary" which is always employed in the impersonal form preceded by the root of the verb affected, the agent being placed in the dative; thus "I must go" is ngárang-la do go; and "I must go home" would be ngárang-la khyim-la do go (lit: "To me to home to go is necessary.") Go-pa also means "to wish," "to want;" and "I want," &c. must likewise be rendered with the dative as just stated. Thus "I want a guide" would be ngárang-la lamkhen chik go; "The merchandise he wants is apricots" = khorang-la go-pai ts'ong-zok chu-li yō' (lit: Merchandise to him which is necessary is apricots" N. B. go-pai ts'ong-zok is participial construction).

Another verb, not unlike go-pa in sound, namely kho-wa is frequently preferred in the above phrases. Often this word takes the expanded form kho-jhe' yō'pa "to be in want of" or "to want," or "to be needful to"; and still requiring the dative:—

If you want the dog, please send 13 rupees: Nyi'-la khyi di kho-jhe' yō' na gyá-tam chusum tang ro shu (or tang ro dze').

I don't want it: Ngárang-la kho-wa me'.

The kinds which you wanted cannot be bought here: Khyō'la kho-jhe' yō'pai rik di dir nyo ma chok.

Sometimes the future is heard:—

I shall not want to travel at present: Ngá-la ting-sang dul kho-gyu me' (or goi-gyu-me').

SECTION C.—THE VERB PASSIVE.

1. In the Tibetan idiom little provision seems to have been made for expressing the verb in a distinctive Passive sense. Such grammatical niceties as occur in European languages—whereby, for example, we should be able to say “The corn has been eaten by the horse” as discriminated from “The horse has eaten the corn”—are not attended to in this Eastern speech. Nevertheless, as we have noticed, the whole Tibetan verbal scheme is moulded on what might be termed the Passive construction, and that even in sentences of most active transitive significance. Accordingly in the sentence just instanced, the form would be literally akin to our Passive phrasing, i. e., “By the horse, as to corn, an eating was.” But, for all practical purposes it is evident that—as already indicated—we should treat these forms as if they were pervaded by Active verbs.

2. In Tibetan, however, when neglect of a special distinguishing form for the Passive would allow the exact meaning to be conveyed to remain ambiguous, even then the Active construction is often resorted to. Thus the sentence, “The girl’s heart is unpolluted with sin” is heard rendered kyōn-kyi menshar-kyi sem-la ma go “Sin does not taint the girl’s heart.”

3. Nevertheless when no agent is introduced into a sentence, we cannot avoid making use of a Passive form in English. Thus we must say: “The corn has been eaten,” no other turn being possible for such expressions. And so likewise in Tibetan. Whenever assertions of that class are required to be made, we shall find the Tibetan verb frequently assuming a particular shape by the annexation of the auxiliary du’ both in present and perfect tenses. Lā (really lags), an elegant synonym for du’, is also employed. For the perfect tenses however du’ is preceded by the root of the verb ts'ar wa "to complete, finish" and sometimes the root of a synonymous verb sin-pa. Thus Du di sái ts'ar du' = "the corn has been eaten," though we have heard it turned loosely Du di sa song. To the use with the above auxiliaries we may, we think, apply the term Passive Voice.

The Present of this Voice is rarely required; but such phrases as "I am injured," "I am beaten," when used in the sense of "being injured," "being beaten," implying present time, can be best rendered by the gerund in nai with du' or lá appended. Thus "I am being beaten" would be ngárang dung-nai du'.

The Perfect tense of this Voice may be contrived in two ways.

- (1) By annexing ts'ar du' or ts'ár yō' to the verbal root
 (2) By adding song to the gerund in nai :—

Pé chhá di ts'ong ts'ar du' : The book has been sold.
Khorang dung ts'ar du' : He has been beaten (struck).

The gerund with song has more the pluperfect signification :—

Ngáts'o lepnaí, du di sái-nai song : When we arrived, the corn had been eaten.

Frequently expressions passive in form in our language take the impersonal form in Tibetan. Here are a few phrases of the kind :—

Ngárang-la dhelwa yō' : I am busy.
Nyí'rang-la dhelwa yō'pa yimpe : Have you been busy?
Ngá-la mákhá ihik jhung : I have been wounded (lit. "a wound has arisen to me").
Ngá-la šuk gyak-ghi re' : I am ill.
Mar-la ser-ru gyak jhung : The butter has been turned rancid.

A Future Passive occurs; and it generally seems to be formed by adding the ordinary future tense of yongwa or jhungwa to the Infinitive present, or to the bare root, of the required verb :—

Ghur di t'aldik ihak yong-gyu-	The tent shall be placed ready.
yin :
Kdsal di je' jhung-gyu-men :	The order shall not be forgotten.
Nyi'la sdichhá tanda t'aldhu p'ul yong-gyu-yö' :	Particulars shall be immediately sent to you.

Another method of expressing this tense is met with; namely, by appending yong-lā or gyu-yin-lā to the verbal root :—

Dhe'yi dhöndhu tanda t'aldhu ts'ol yong lā :	Search shall be immediately made for it.
Dhe kor yik-len chi' p'ul-gyu-yin-lā :	A reply about it shall be sent.

N. B.—Dhe alone might be used instead of dhe-yi dhöndhu “for it,” because the verbs ts'ol-wa itself means “to make search for.”

SECTION D.—IDIOMATIC AND COMPOUND VERBS.

In general, a compound form is preferred for verbal expressions. The mere bald root of a verb denoting any action is rarely used if the meaning can be more vigorously paraphrased. Thus a large number of compound verbs have been manufactured by annexing to the nouns of kindred signification certain favourite verbs of wide and general sense which in a measure may be regarded as auxiliaries.

a. A numerous class arises by the help of the ordinary causative verb JHYE'PA to do, make—as is the case in many languages.

Thus the simple form gá-wa "to rejoice," "be glad," is generally avoided; and, taking the substantive gá-ts'or "joyousness," "gladness," we find ga-ts'or jhye'pa "to be glad." Again, gán-de jhye'pa "to be kind."

Again, instead of the simple form ku-wa "to steal," we usually hear kün-ma jhye'pa, literally, "to do the thief;" instead of gying-wa "to despise," we hear gying-pág jhye'-pa, literally "to make disdain;" for te'pa "to believe in," the compound te'pa jhye'pa is preferred; and instead of gyö'pa "to repent," the compound gyö'pa jhye'pa "to make repentance." Many instances occur in our Vocabulary. We have seen that to emphasize the imperative form of verbs, jhye'pa is frequently added as an intensive, though quite pleonastic (ante V. B. 4).

Then, also, there is the idiomatic use in certain phrases. Nang-dhák = the inner Ego, the inner self; from which we draw the idiom nang-dhák jhye'pa "to perceive," "to take heed of." Kham-chhu = the lips; from which we draw the idiom kham-chhu jhye'pa "to bicker," "to quarrel." Nyé-mo = near; whence is derived the phrase nyémo jhye'pa "to love, be attached to." There are many similar forms.

COMPOUNDS WITH JHYE'PA.

P'áknyen jhye'pa :	to play the eaves-dropper.
Düm-ma jhye'pa :	to take counsel with.
Káb-kyön jhye'pa :	to upbraid.
Yur-ḷe jhye'pa :	to thrash (corn, &c.)
Zün jhye'pa :	to tell a lie.
Ke-chhá jhye'pa :	to have a talk.
Ná-len jhye'pa :	to give shelter to, to lodge.
Kurim jhye'pa :	to worship, make "pujah."
Le jhye'pa :	to work, labour.
Khá-yá jhye'pa :	to co-operate with.
Khákpo jhye'pa :	to be in difficulties.
Khok-t'uk jhye'pa :	to be anxious.

Ohhák-chhák jhye'pa :	to scatter.
Dir-dir jhye'pa :	to thunder.
Soi jhye'pa :	to cure.
Nya m-len jhye'pa :	to learn by heart.
Sháp-shop jhye'pa :	to trick, defraud.
Shal-îhe jhye'pa :	to promise.
Káduk jhye'pa :	to take pains.
Gyáp-lok jhye'pa :	to retreat.
Gye-pa jhye'pa :	to state fully.
Do-gyu jhye'pa :	to prepare to start.
Shu-long jhye'pa :	to supplicate.
Yom-yom jhye'pa :	to oscilate, swing.
Yapmo jhye'pa :	to beckon, signal to.
Shuk jhye'pa :	to knock out of the way.
Mi-pang jhye'pa :	to argue in favour of (object placed in Gen.)

β. A less extensive series of compounds depend upon another common verb Do-wa to go.

Thus in preference to the primitive verb p'ampa "to be defeated," the modern custom makes use of p'am do-wa, literally "to go to be defeated." Again, in lieu of p'ung-wa "to sink under" "to perish," we hear p'ung do-wa.

This auxiliary joined to the gerund of another verb implies reason to expect that any action or event will come to pass. Thus in the example: "The Pass most likely is blocked," we add do to the gerund of kák-pa "to be hindered," saying Lá di kák-ne do. We even append it to itself in such a sentence as: "I think I shall go"—Ngárang do-ne do.

γ. Another auxiliary of this class is chuk-pa, which, however, partakes more of the nature of a causative. It is likewise heard in the sense of "to permit," "to let":—

Boil the potatoes: Sho-ko di khol chuk !

(or: Get the potatoes boiled.)

Allow me to walk in front: Ngárang-la ngen-la dul chuk.

δ. A common appendix occurs in the use of šir-wa "to undergo," which is used in a variety of phrases indicating what is felt or passively experienced. Thus, instead of na-wa "to be ill," we generally hear na'kyi šir-wa lit. "to suffer by sickness;" again, qhang-ghi šir-wa "to be cold."

ε. Perhaps the most characteristic of these formative verbs, and one of very varied application, is to be met with in the emphatic word GYA'KPA which when standing alone bears the signification "to throw." In several districts of Tibet the word assumes the form GYABPA or Gyáp-pa; and west of Táshi-lhümpo the latter form is the one most commonly heard. This auxiliary is conjoined to substantives only; and has so extensive a range that in combination it affords quite a remarkable series of expressive and vigorous compound verbs. In composition the verbal portion alone is inflected, the preceding noun to which it is attached remaining unaltered.

The following are the combinations more frequently occurring; gyakpa or gyap-pa being interchangeable according to the custom of any district:—

Lu gyakpa :	to sing a song.
Hdi gyakpa :	to exaggerate.
Hára gyakpa :	to throw dice.
Du-la ge' gyap-pa :	to thrash corn.
Híre gyakpa :	to pile up a corn-stack.
Mendá gyakpa :	to fire a gun.
Zong gyakpa :	to traffic.
Doi gyakpa :	to consider one's plans.
Burko gyakpa :	to sculpture or emboss on walls.
Shop gyakpa :	to singe (e. g., a horse).
Boira gyakpa :	to shout.
O-sho gyakpa :	to jeer at.
Um gyakpa :	to kiss.
Wur gyakpa :	to make a noise.

Lo gyakpa :	to cough.
Yikik gyakpa :	to hiccough.
Par gyakpa :	to print.
Hlempa gyakpa :	to sew a patch.
Shū-dá gyakpa :	to whistle.
Arbá gyakpa :	to cast lots.
Sá-bön gyakpa :	to sow seed.
Dháká gyakpa :	to shoe a horse.
Suk gyakpa :	to hurt, injure.
Tsi gyakpa :	to paint.
Lap gyakpa :	to chatter.
Higká gyakpa :	to sob.
Yukpa gyakpa :	to flog.
Ghur gyakpa :	to pitch a tent.
Lá gyakpa :	to surmount a pass.
Nyi-chhol gyakpa :	to walk in one's sleep.
Ták gyakpa :	to achieve fame.
Dhángka gyakpa :	to count.
Lé'mo gyakpa :	to imitate.
Ding gyakpa :	to suspect.
Khá-kün gyakpa :	to pretend to have lost.
Pi-tsuk gyakpa :	to kneel.
Mönlam gyakpa :	to pray.
Zün gyakpa :	to make pretence.
Dhong gyá gyappa :	to seal.
Tá-shák gyakpa :	to give a kick.
Ják gyakpa :	to rob (violently).
Go-la iuk gyakpa :	to have a headache.
Salpo gyakpa :	to make bright.
Gomba shik gyakpa :	to found a monastery.

CHAPTER VII. PRONOUNS.

1.—PERSONAL PRONOUNS.

a. We find a variety of personal pronouns of synonymous meaning in use in Tibet; some of these, however, being current in certain provinces only.

Nominative.	Genitive or Possessive.	Accusative.	Agentive.

β. GENDER AND NUMBER. In the application of the foregoing pronouns there is not much attention paid to the gender of the persons or things represented. There is, nevertheless, a feminine form for kho-wo "I," where the speaker is of the female sex, namely kho-mo. There is usually no distinction made between "he" and "she;" but the latter pronoun occasionally is differentiated by substituting for the ordinary kho, the feminine monosyllable mo "she." The neuter "it" can be expressed by dhe.

The discrimination of number, moreover, is avoided except where any ambiguity would arise. It will be observed that chák and ts'o are the plural affixes, either of which may be added to the singular pronouns of the 1st and 3rd persons. Where feasible we find ngá or ngárang used equally to express "we" as well as "I"; and kho, khong, &c., frequently signify "they." However ngáchák, khochák, &c., are in common use also, and must be chosen whenever stress is laid upon the number of persons indicated.

γ. FIRST PERSON. The most popular word for "I" is ngárang which is used in common converse much more frequently than ngá. The possessive form "mine" is generally ngáchén; whilst "my" and "of me" are usually rendered by ngárang-ghi or ngái (ngé). Jaeschke says that kho-wo is often used by a superior personage in easy conversation with his subordinates:—

That meadow is mine :	Ne-ma dhe ngáchén yó'.
My fox-skin hat is new :	Ngárang-ghi wá-shá dí sarpa du'.
Let us pitch our tent near the rock :	Trák-ki fámdu rang-ghi ghu gyak-yong.
God will give us help :	Konchhoa-kyi ngáchák la ram- da nang-gyu du'.
I loved the child when I saw him on his birthday feast :	} Khoi ming-tóm-mo la p'ugu t'ong-la ngárang-ghi kho dzá- wo jhá yó'.
Give me a receipt :

Dák means really "self" and is a common word for the first personal pronoun both in speaking and in letter-writing, being mostly employed in the objective case for "me." Another term for "me" used chiefly in correspondence but also in talk, is one of assumed humility. This is the term f'en or f'en-rang (པོ་ལོ་པོ་ p'ran or པོ་ལོ་རང་ p'ran-rang) meaning "insignificant one." Thus in a letter :

"I send you my good wishes" would be rendered T'en-rang-ne rang-ghi semkarpo p'ul jhung, i. e. "From your humble one his goodwishes are sent."

T'en-chhung and t'em-bhu are likewise in vogue.

2. As to the use of rang-ghi a word must be here interposed. It answers precisely to the apna of Hindustani speech and stands for "my" "your" "his" whenever these possessives refer to the nominative or acting subject of the sentence:—

I will bring my gun :	Ngdrang rang-ghi menlá khyer yong.
-----------------------	---

He will bring my gun :	Khorang ngái mendá khyer yong.
He will bring his gun :	Khorang rang-ghi mendá khyer yong.
He will bring the gun with him :	Khorang mendá di rang dhang nyampo khyer yong.
Begin your work at once :	Rang-ghi le-ka tanda f'eltu go dzuk :

δ. SECOND PERSON. The common word among equals for "you" is khyö'rang, which frequently sounds to the ear as if it were spelt t'yö'rang (Chap. I, page 13). In the dative, khyö'-la seems to be more usual than khyö'rang-la; thus:—

Ts'ong-wai dhön-dhu khyö'-la Have you any eggs to sell?
gong-gá yö'pe :

Possessively this term is the common word also:—

Khyö'rang-ghi ming ghang ser- What is your name?
ghin-re' :

Di p'ugu di khyö'-kyi yö'pe : Is this child yours?

ε. However, in formal conversation with strangers, and in addressing anybody with politeness, the words nyi' and nyi'rang are generally employed:—

Nyi' ghäne yong : Whence have you come?

Nyi'-la dhön shik yö'pe : What is your business with me?

(Have you any business?)

Nyi'rang-ghi khyim (or nang) Where is your house?
ghá-re' :

Kusho, nyi'rang ngá-la sem-la Sir, do you remember me?
nge pa' :

Another honorific term is said to be khye'. It is not so often heard as the plural form khye'-ts'o, used in addressing a deputation or company of people. Also khye'chák.

ε. THIRD PERSON. The usual term is khorang, and both

“he” and “she” are expressed by the word. In certain districts we have heard mo employed for “she,” but never kho-mo. The possessive feminine is sometimes moi, whilst the masculine is rarely khoi, the form “his” being generally kho-rang-ghi. Kho-wa is said by Jaeschke to be a special term for “they;” though kho ts'o is the word brought to our notice as the usual plural: but we have also heard kho-pa:—

Kho-pa nyi p'irlok jhung du': Both of them were outside.
Kho-la song lap: I told him to go. (Lit: “I told him ‘go’”)

The neuter “it” as a nominative is never expressed; and when occurring in the objective case, resort is made to the demonstrative pronouns, e. g. “He shot it” would be “shot this” or “shot that.”

All the personal pronouns are frequently unexpressed when the sense is apparent, the verb alone being spoken.

2.—DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS.

a. The simplest forms are di this, dhe that. When reference is made to anything just mentioned dhe is invariably used, never di; and so, likewise, when what is to follow is referred to without using a noun, di is always the pronoun selected. Thus a person, referring to what he has just said, would in Tibetan never say: “I mention this” but “I mention that.” So, too, with respect to place, “this” and “that” are not used so loosely as they are in English speech. The demonstrative pronouns follow the noun they qualify, and are declinable. Thus:—

Throw a stone at that tree: Shing dhe-la do gyop!

β. In the province of Tsang and in Sikkim, we have wuli or andi and p'idi in use for “this” and “that” respectively; moreover these pronouns then precede the noun:—

Who is this girl?

Audi pumo ghang yō'pe?

7. When the pronouns stand unattached to nouns, they often take the affix ka or ga: di-ka = this, this one; dhe-ga that, that one. In Tsang the affix ni is added in the same way.

Which do you want, this or that?

Di-ka dhe-ga, nyi'la ghang goi gyu?

8. Tibetans make use of forms of the demonstrative pronouns which enable them to discriminate with considerable nicety the exact position of any object they wish to indicate. Thus, di = this, close by; há-gi = that, just yonder; p'á-gi = that, much further off, that far away; yá-gi = that, up there; má-gi = this down below. When used with any nouns, these compounds generally precede it.

That (over there) is mine: P'á-gi ngai yin.

Sometimes in these cases di or dhe is likewise used for perspicuity:—

Run to that house (right over there):

P'á-gi nang dhe-la gyukshá lō' tung (or lō' dhang).

Turn down that path (just yonder):

Há-gi lamkha di kyok song.

2. The plural affix is attached to the demonstrative pronoun and not to the substantive, nam and ts'o (sounded ts'u) being the common affixes; chá(k) is not often heard in Ui:—

Take off those dogs:

Khyi dhe-ts'o f'i song!

These men are a little late to-day.

Dhe-ring mi di-nam tiktsé gor song.

Where we have "these," "those," apart from any noun we hear di-nam, and dhe-dák or dhe-ts'o.

3.—INDEFINITE PRONOUNS.

These are used as adjectives and in the modern colloquial differ considerably from the older forms. Little more than enumeration is needed: Dá: "any;" khá-she (𑌕𑌗𑌕): "some;" ghangmo: "the whole;" t'amché (never kün) or ts'angma "all:" kün "every;" re and re-re each; shü ma: others; shem-ma another.

These can be employed alone or with nouns:—

Toktse-i tang-la ngai pe-chhá ða Are any of my books upon the du'ka mindu': table or not ?

Tanda f'eltu khá-she nang-la Some had gone home at once ;
chhyin-pa-re'; ünkyang t'am- but all those living near sat ché tsá-ne nai-pa dhe sá-la on the ground.
de yó':

4—INTERROGATIVE PRONOUNS.

(i) In asking questions, the interrogative pronoun must stand in the sentence immediately next before the verb, and therefore nearly at the end of such sentence. Those in common use are the following:—

Ghang: which, what; Su: who; Kápá or Ghá-pá and Ghá-ru: where; Ghánðe (sounds Kándé): how; Ghá-dhui (sounds ká-tü) when; Ghá-ts'ö: how much, how many ?

All these are capable of declension, and thus we obtain the further forms:—

Ghang-la: why, for what; Su-yi (vulgarly so-kyi) whose; Ghang-ne: from what, from which; Su-la: to whom; Ghá-ne: whence; Ghá-la: whither; also a special form in Ghá re': where is ?

a. In this connection, the difference between the use of yin and yö' may be illustrated yin being the more copulative auxiliary, such a phrase as Su yin could not be taken to mean "who is there," which requires the use of the verb yö'-pa meaning "to be present," "to exist," as well as "to be" accordingly Su yin means "who is he" and Su yö' means "who is there;" again, Su re'pa yinna: "whoever is it." β . The interrogative affix to the concluding verb is seldom necessary where the interrogative pronoun is used. When yö' concludes the sentence, the affix is often added, which is likewise the case with yin, the interrogative forms of which are yö ps and yimpe.

Sometimes a plural form of the pronoun su occurs, namely su-su, e. g. Khye-pa di su-su yimpa: Who are those traders?

ii. When the pronoun gháng has to be made use of in an adjectival sense, it stands in the sentence immediately after the noun and next before the verb, e. g. ngá-chá lam gháng do ghi-du' "which way are we going?"

A variation of the position occurs in a few special instances, as in the phrases: Kho ghang yul-pa leb-bhá: From what district does he come? Khyö ghang ts'e-la do: At what time do you go? Gha-ts'ö is used adjectivally in such sentences as: Tashi-lhümpo-ne Lhásá la t'á ring t'ung gha-ts'o yö'dhá what distance is it (how far is it) from Tashilhümpo to Lhásá?

5.—RELATIVE PRONOUNS.

i. The most common method of expressing relative clauses, namely by means of continuative and gerundial particles, has been already fully explained and illustrated (ante Chap. VI, B. 5, γ .)

ii. There remains to be indicated the rare form of construction where our European method is resorted to. Moreover, in many instances relative pronouns are used in combination with the gerundial construction. Lastly, there is a correlative use of the pronouns, of frequent occurrence.

Ghang, su, nam, are the relatives and correlatives in use:

iii. The ordinary relative construction may be chosen in such a sentence as the following :—

“Bring me the coolie who arrived just now.”

Such a sentence may be expressed in two ways—First, with the relative pronoun, thus :—

Ngá-la khurpa ghang tanda “Which coolie arriving just rang lep-ne f'i shok : now bring to me.”

Or else, we might hear the sentence turned somewhat in this style :—

Tanda rang lep-pai khurpa The coolie arriving just now dhe ngá-la f'i shok : bring to me.

Another sentence more precisely analogous in Tibetan dress to our relative construction would be this :—

“The dog, which shewed its teeth savagely, was fastened to the tent pole.”

Here we might have the rendering :—

Khyi ghang rang-ghi so ngárma ten-pa dhe ghur-ber la dam-ne yō.

It will be noted, however, that the relative clause is inserted between the antecedent to which it refers and the article of such antecedent, the verb of the clause occurring as a participle. Thus, save for this introduction of the relative pronoun ghang, the sentence resembles the participial forms already explained. Another example will suffice :—

The guns which belonged to Ménlá ghang mi-ts'o la yō pa
the men must be given up: di táng go-dú'.

iv. Those sentences known as correlative rather than relative always require the introduction of the relative pronoun.

They will be best recognised by means of several examples:—

Potsoi ámdá ghang yimpa dhe khá-sáng lep jhung : She who was the boy's mother arrived yesterday.

Di ghang-ghi t'obpa ngá-la khur shok : Whoever gets it bring it me.

Kkyō' ghang dok-ghi-du' dhe há-go ghi-du' : Do you understand what you are reading? (Lit: What you read, that do you understand?)

Su-la pe-chhá di yō' pa di-la dok yong ná, ye-shei māngpo lop-yong : If anybody who has this book will read it, he will learn much wisdom.

Khyō'rang-la t'song-wa ghang yō' pa dhe ngá-la ten-nang : Shew me what you have to sell. (Lit: What to sell there is to you, that shew to me.)

Su yang ngá dhang nyampo yong-wa dhe-la ngul-p'ok yák-po ter yong : Whoever will come with me, shall be given good wages. (Lit: Whoever will come with me, to that one good wages will be given.)

Khyō'rang-la to-chhá ghang yāng gō-yō'-pa, dhe ger-ne yō' : Whatever victuals you wanted have been provided. (Lit: To you whatever victuals were wanting, that has been provided.)

Khorang ghang jhye'-kyi-yō'-na yāng khye'mi du' : Never mind what he is doing.

Jhye'-kyi-yō' is the Narrative Present, kyi being used for ghi after the elided d of jhye'.)

β. Not only is the demonstrative pronoun inserted after the clause, but the article is also introduced after the relative pronoun in order to give a general or correlative sense to the latter. Thus ghang di "the what" signifies "whatever," and su di "the who" or "the whom" is equivalent to "whoever" or "whomever." This method is one of the commonest devices to express sentences of this kind in the colloquial; and we should recommend to the beginner recourse to it in the first place. Taking such a sentence as: "I shall wear whatever I like," we shall transmute it into the form: "To my thinking the what is, shall wear;" i. e., Ngáí shempa-la ghang di ghön yong.

γ. Lastly must be mentioned the usage where "as" occurs as a relative pronoun. We meet with the relative construction in a sentence of this kind: "Do as I tell you." In order to render this into Tibetan we must turn it "As I tell you, so do," or more literally, "According to what I tell, you according to that do!" Ngárang ghá nangtar ser, khyö'-rang dhe nangtar jhyi' chik. In Rudok and the West, ghá-suk and dhe-suk take the place of ghá nangtar, &c. In Central Tibet such a sentence is best rendered Ngárang ghánḍe ser, khyö'-rang dhendḍe jhyi' chik: "Like what I say, you like that do!" In fact this latter phrasing is the more generally heard. The expression "So far as you can" is turned: until what until that e. g., Khyö'-rang ghá-t'uk ḍo chok, dhe t'uk song.

Kho-la ghánḍe go yö', dhendḍe Give him what he needs.
ter chik:

CHAPTER VIII.

ADVERBS.

i. The Adverb can be formed from the Adjective by putting the latter in the Terminative Case. Very few Tibetans, however, make any distinction, in this class of Adverbs, between the Adverb and the Adjective. Thus we hear gyo'po in use for both "quick" and "quickly;" gorpo for "slow" and "slowly;" sūm-po for "quiet" and "quietly." Properly the adverbial forms of these words should be gyo'por or gyo'bar, gor-por, and sūm-por.

When the Adverb is formed from a Participle or from an Adjective of participial mould, the particle ne is employed, as in tál-bu-chen-ne "lingeringly."

ii. Custom has singled out certain words for adverbial use which are never employed as adjectives but which decidedly are not Primitive Adverbs. Thus ghá-lü "gently," "softly" (Hind : áhiste); ták-nyomla "evenly" "equally;" ma-parpar-la : "seldom."

iii. ADVERBS FROM NOUNS:—These are such as : kang-t'ang "on foot," khá-ne "orally" (lit : from mouth), t'á-ma-la "at the end," dong-la "in front," "first," gyáp-la "at the back," ts'á-dhák "hastily" "hurriedly," dám-la "close by, near" (lit : at the bank), dhüi-gyün (pr. tü-gyün) "always," shug-la "behind" (from shug-gu "the tail").

iv. ADVERBS OF TIME.—Nearly all these are Primitive; but in some instances the original form has been augmented in the Colloquial by the addition of various syllables. The chief temporal adverbs are:—

Tānda (or tanta):	now.
Tanda t'eltu :	immediately.
Tanda lamsang :	at once.
T'el t'el-la :	without delay.
Ting-sang :	at present (Hind: dj-kal). -
Ngá-má :	early.
Chhyimo (often P'imo):	late.
Ngen-chhé' :	previously, formerly.
Ting-la :	later, hereafter.
Dhé wona-le :	since then.
Lo-ne : }	afterwards.
Je-la : }
Angki jukma :	last.
Tákpa réshi :	always.
Kap-kap-su :	sometimes.
Re-shik :	a little while.
Chik-char-la : }	all together, simultaneously.
Hlengyai-la : }
Dhá-chi :	recently, lately.
Dhá-rung :	still, yet.
Dhá-p'en : }	as yet, until now.
Dhá-t'uk : }
Yang-kyar :	again.
Yang-kyar-yang :	often.

To these may be added a numerous list expressing specific times, but of which it will be sufficient to mention:—

Khá-sang : Yesterday.	Shé-la : Three days hence.
Dhé-ring : To-day.	Gui : Four days hence.
Dhá-rang : This morning.	Ohhui : Five days hence.
Ts'en-la : To-night.	Dhá-lo : This year.
Sang-nyin : To-morrow. [row.	Khásang-lo : Last year.
Nāng : Day-after-to-mor-	Sangpō' : Next year.

N. B.—The commoner term for "this morning" is dhá-rang sho-ge.

V. ADVERBS OF PLACE.—Some of these are Primitive roots:—

Di-pa :	} here.	Gyap-la :	behind.
Doi :		Dän-la :	before.
Dhe-pa :	} there.	Kün-la :	everywhere.
Dher :		P'är-tsam :	beyond.
Ts'ur-la :	} hither.	Shám-la :	lower down, further on.
Diru :		Gyang-la :	afar off.
P'áru :	thither.	Nang-na :	within.
P'á-gi-la :	yonder.	Bug-la :	inside.
Há-gi-la :	just there, over there.	Kyiltu :	in the middle.
Yá-gi-la :	up there.	P'i-la :	outside.
Má-gi-la :	down there.	Tung-tu :	} near, close by.
Kyen-la :	upwards.	Tsá-ne :
Shó'la :	downwards.	Rik-te :	close together.
Gong-la :	above.	Há-chhok :	opposite.
Me'-la :	below.	Di-ne :	hence.
Di yén-la :	at upper part.	Dhe-ne :	thence.
Di ñen-la :	at lower part.	Lok-ne :	back again.
Yar :	up.	P'är ts'ur la :	to and fro.
Mar :	down.	T'äl-le :	past, on.

VI. ADVERBS OF MANNER.—In addition to those directly derived from adjectives as shewn above, the following should be noted:—

Multar :	accordingly.	Ts'angma dom-	altogether.
Ohikpu :	alone.	ne :
Dhendá :	like that; a'piece.	Rimñhin :	by turns.
Mangpo :	much, mostly.	Shenma :	otherwise, another way.
Dindá :	thus, so.
Rang-ñhin :	of its own accord.	Há-chang :	too much, very.
Ohhá-lam :	rather.	Tá-gyán dápu :	as usual.
Kyang-pa :	only.	Nenten :	certainly, really.
Ye-ne :	quite.	Mu-ne :	exactly, precisely.
Chhyi-lök :	backwards.	Holte :	loose.
Gyün-la :	continually.

vii. NEGATIVE ADVERBS.—All negative particles used with verbs are naturally adverbs, and these have been already explained and illustrated (VI, B. 8, ii.) Two or three others require notice: yema (with verb) and la-re me' "not at all," re-ken "by no means;" also nyong which, when preceded by ma and annexed to a verb in the past tense, has the force of "never,"—but see VI, B. 10. However, with the present and future tenses nyong seems to be inadmissible, the expression tsá-wa-ne followed by the verb in the negative being then resorted to:—

- I shall never go again: Ngá yáng-kyar tsá-wa-ne ðo gyu me'.
- He never comes to see me now: Tanda kho ngá-la tá-gyu-la tsá-wa-ne lep-kyi-min.
- I shall never be afraid again: Ngá yáng-kyar tsá-wa-ne ðho'mi yong.

Námáng with a negative future or imperative also occurs:—

- The body of the abbott will never decay: Khempo-i p'ungpo námáng tor mi yong.
- When you come to a chhorten, never turn to the right: Chhörtén-la lep-ne, yái-ngó-la ná-máng ma kyok.

viii. A number of characteristic adverbs in common use are formed, as in the case of many adjectives, by re-duplicated syllables. Sometimes in the second syllable a vowel is varied. Thus: ts'er-ts'er: often, time after time, sol-sol anyhow, sop-sop: topsy-turvy, ráp-rip awry; also "dimly," tap-tip upside down, chhág-gha chhog-ghé all in a heap, tap-tap-te or tap-tap-por: suddenly, sam sum: quietly, hrik-hrik: all around, shrang-shrang: alone.

ix. Certain adverbial expressions qualify with a sense of indefiniteness proposed actions or past sensations. These introduce in reality indefinite relative pronouns. We refer to phrases of this sort: "so far as I can," "so far as I know." One mode of expression is to couple ghang or jhi to the requisite verb, and to introduce this clause immediately preceding the subject of the sentence:—

I will do the utmost (as much as possible): Jhi nye' ngárang-ghi jhyá-gyu yin.

So far as I know he set out yesterday: Ngárang ghang she-pa khorang khásang jhyōn song.

But see under Relative Pronouns (iv, γ.)

Again tsam-shik-la = "as soon as":—

As soon as the sun sets, blow up the fire: Nyima di gáí tsam-shik-la mē p'u dhang.

CHAPTER IX.

POSTPOSITIONS.

1. These, the Oriental substitutes for the prepositions of European languages, may in Tibetan as in other tongues be divided into two main classes, namely, Primitive Postpositions and Derivative Postpositions. The Primitives, which are all monosyllabic, comprise the case signs and a few others. The Derivatives, which are mostly words of two or three syllables, have been formed—often by an ingenious and interesting process of evolution—from adverbs, adjectives, substantives, and verbs. Many of the colloquial Derivatives are of modern development and are never to be seen in books.

2. The Primitive Postpositions are the following : Kyi, ghi “of ;” La “to ;” Na “in ;” Nai or na, “from ;” Lai or le “from among ;” Kyi, ghi “by” “by the agency of ;” Dhang “with ;” Dhu, ru, tu, or su, “into,” “unto,” “for.”

The usage of these will require some illustration.

LA, in the colloquial, is not only the sign of the accusative (contrary to the literary usage it is seldom the sign of the dative) but also possesses the locative significations of “at” and “on” :—

Look at him :	Kho-la toi shik !
I shall start at dawn :	Ngáráng kyáreng-la gyu yong.
Put wood on the fire :	Me-la shing chuk !
The bird is pale on the breast :	Jhyá di qhang-la kyákoré yó.
Hide-boats float safely on the surface of the Yeru River :	Ko-á Yai-ru Tsangpo-i khá-t'ok-lu ling-ghyi ding du.'

Sometimes la carries the meaning of “in” :—

Throw the small fish into the water : Chhu-la nyd chhung gyop!

I have headache (pain in the head) : Ngá-la go-la šuk gyak.

In assessments of price, &c., la corresponds with our preposition “for” :—

The book has been sold for 15 Golden tangkas : Pe-chhá di genden tangka chongá la, ts'ong ts'ar du'.

Occasionally “from” and “by” require this postposition :—

The finial fell from the chhor-ten : T'ok di chhorten-la bap song.

Hold the bird firmly by the wings : Dap-shok-la jhyá di ling-gnyi dzin!

La used in the sense of “to” is confined almost to its use before pronouns and after verbs of giving, saying, and sending.

NA is rarely heard in Tibet Proper as a locative postposition; and when it correctly enters into the composition of certain compound postpositions, la is often substituted.

NAI or NĒ has usually the pure ablative sense of “from;” but likewise is found in the sense of “out of” and “through” :—

He sprang out of the lotos : Kho pema-nai jhung.

From Darjiling to Pemionghi : Dorjeling-ne Pema-yangtse t'uk pa-la.

It is eight years' ago : Di-ne lo gye' jhung.

This postposition is discriminated from LAI or LE, which besides the special meaning “than” (vide IV, 9, a,) conveys the sense of “from out” “from among” :—

Choose me two sheep from the flock : Khyu-le luk nyi ngdrang-la p'e jhyi!

Out of nine only three were Gu-le sum mempa (or ma-tok) saved: ཅེ་མི་མཚན་པུ་

Saved from the Queer-heads Go-lok-le t'ar-ne yō'.
 (robbers):

DHANG is not ordinarily classed as a case sign, though it carries the meaning "with" in its most distinctive sense. It is attached in particular to certain verbs (such as qhalwa "to be separated" and qelwa "to meet") and is also joined with certain compound postpositions.

As a conjunction it has a distinctive use. (Vide: Ch. X, 1.)

3. Derivative or Compound Postpositions:—The first quality to be noted respecting these Postpositions is that the majority of them govern the Genitive case. Accordingly each of these must be linked to the noun, adjective, or participle, which it affects, by means of another postposition, to wit the Genitive case-sign. Much nicety is requisite in selecting the proper postposition to express the intended relationship with exactness and idiom. We have endeavoured in the lists which follow to give the precise shade of meaning attached to each in order to avoid, where possible, double significations; and, with this view we have sometimes omitted allowable renderings, assigning the sense more commonly understood in colloquial usage. Many of the postpositions are identical with, or have been derived from, the corresponding adverbs. Some of this class have been compounded by adding the simple case-sign to different adverbs. In ancient Tibetan such affixes would be those expressing the Terminative case; in modern times the Dative or Locative case-sign has replaced the Terminative; though some of the forms familiar to readers of classical Tibetan are still heard in modern conversation.

Nyampo :	with, together with.	Dá-ts :	like, equal to.
Chá-su :	containing, belong- ing to.	Mi dá-wa :	unlike, different from.

N. B.—In the colloquial da or de (really འདྲ་ལྷོད་) has quite taken the place of the literary word ལྷོད་ in the sense of “as,” “like,” &c., especially in compounds.

4. USE OF COMPOUND POSTPOSITIONS.—These can govern either substantives or adjectives or verbs. When governing the latter, the postposition is placed at the end of the sentence, converting it into a gerundial clause. Subjoined are a sufficient series of examples illustrating both methods of employment:—

You will find rain-shelter beneath that rock-boulder:	} Khyō'rang-ghi d'hák bhong di-i khá-wok chhar-kyib nye-yong.
The path passes between those chhortens up there:	} Yá-gi-la chhorten dho-i sep-la lamkhá di t'ál do.
Let us go up to the monastery:	Gompá-yi gam-la do-gyu nang.
Don't go beyond the tree down there:	} Má-gi-la shing di p'enchhe' ma do.
The road runs along the river-bank:	} Lam di chhu-dám sur-ne gyu.
Come after two days:	Nyinmo nyí-kyi ting-la shok!
This money is for your help:	{ Di ngul di khyōrang-ghi ro-rám kyi len-la du'.
I shall arrive in three days:	Nyin sum ts'ün lep yong.
There is nothing but snow up there:	} Yá-gi-la ghang-ghi mempe chang min du'.
All except two have been found:	{ Nyí-ká-i mempe kün di nye' ma jhung.
No one except you grumbles:	{ Khyō-kyi mempe su yang t'o-t'á ma jhye' kyí-du'.
Go outside the tent at once:	{ Di ghur-kyi p'i-la gyuk tanda t'ellu!
The shops are opposite the Chokhang:	} Sok-khang di Cho-khang-ghi t'o-nyá náí song (“are placed”).
I will go with you instead of him:	} Khoi ts'ap-la ngárang khyō dhang nyám-po do-gyu-yin.

It is different from that :	Di-ka dhe dhang mi-ḡa-wa du'
Come with me to Gyang-tse :	{ Ngárang dhang nyampo Gyang-tse t'uk-pa shok!
Hang it up above the window :	{ Gi-khung-gi tang-la yar dak shok!
On the occasion of the lama coming, prepare pastry :	{ Láma di yong-wái kap-su, khur-wa t'ál-dhik jhyi chik.
Instead of walking quickly home, you saunter along :	{ Khyōrang nyurdhu khyim-la ḡul-wá-yi ts'ap-la, kyáng-kyong jhye'.
After he had gone, the ring was not to be found :	{ Kho song-wai ting-la, sor-dub di nye'-chhok min du'.
Down there is placed a chhorten containing many bones :	{ Má-gi-la chhorten dung-rü m'áng dhang chá-su chik shak jhung.
The box containing books :	Di ḡom p'echhá dhang chá-su di
Regarding that, I will send word to you to-morrow :	{ Sang-nyin dhe kor khyōrang-la lön p'ul yong.
This is not for him :	Di-ka kho-i tön-la ma re'.
This is for your wife :	{ Di-ka nyirang-ghi kyermen-kyi chhirtu yō'.
Two rupees to buy the calf (for the purpose of buying) :	{ Gyá-tam nyi, pe-to nyo-wái dhōndá-la.
I will give this for that :	Ngá di ni dhe-yi len-la p'ul yong.
Prepare to set out :	{ Do-wai dhūndhu t'ál-dhik jhyi chik.
What is he talking about :	{ Khorang ghang kor-la she' kyin du' or šer-kyin-du' or ser-kyin-yō'pe?
They went in that direction (towards that) :	{ Kho-ts'o dhe chhok-la song or dhe ngo-la song.
It came out of yonder cave :	Há-gi p'uk p'i-ne jhung.
He sold it for three sho :	{ Khorang šho sum la ts'ong-ne du'.
Take aim among them :	Dhe-yi nang-na bem-la gyák.

CHAPTER X: CONJUNCTIONS.

1. Those Conjunctions, which in English connect short clauses to each other and likewise link together longer sentences, are generally expressed in Tibetan by means of the gerundial and continuative particles elsewhere fully explained. (See: Chap. VI, B. 6, 8, ii, and Chap. XIII, 3.)

However, our common copulative "and" finds its counterpart in the Tibetan dhang, which literally signifies "with." Thus, such an enumeration as "horses and cows and sheep and goats" would in the Tibetan idiom be rendered: "with horses, with cows, with sheep, goats" Tá-ts'o dhang, bhámo ts'o dhang, luk-ts'o dhang, ráma-ts'o; or, possibly, Tá-ts'o dhang bhámo-ts'o, luk-ts'o dhang ráma-ts'o: "cows with horses, goats with sheep."

Although dhang is usually translated "and," the point to keep clear in the mind is that it is really a postposition meaning "with," and therefore in such an example as the foregoing dhang belongs, not to bhámo-ts'o as if "and cows," but to tá-ts'o which precedes it.

2. In enumerations in the colloquial we mostly find this copulative omitted for the sake of terseness; and the sentence above would be spoken tá-ts'o bhámo-ts'o luk-ts'o rá-má-ts'o, or, more briefly still, tá bhá-mo luk ráma-ts'o or even tá bhá luk rá-ts'o, the one plural affix ts'o sufficing for the whole of the items:—

pepper:

- I have lost father and mother : Ngárang áp'd ánd ghá-la song.
 (Lit: "I have gone in loss.")
- Give me three mules and two Ngárang-la dheu sum dhang jhomo : jhomo nyi nang ro dze!
- I want to eat and drink : Ngá-la íá t'ung goi.
- I want both to eat and to Ngá-la ía-gyu dhang t'ung-gyu drink : goi.

When dhang is used in the copulative sense the accent is thrown on the preceding word and dhang spoken shortly and quickly.

Con conversationally, where the conjunction needs to be expressed, the form dhárung is frequently substituted for dhang. Dhárung, signifying "more yet," is used precisely as aur is employed in Hindustani, both as "and" and as "more":—

- The man and his wife came : Mi-po dí dhárung rang-ghi chhung-ro lep jhung.

Sometimes when "both"—"and" would be used by us, the Tibetan places the two nouns consecutively with nyí-ka "the two" appended, e. g. "The charges for both the men and the yaks" would be mi yák-ts'o nyí-kai p'ok.

3. The contrasting or disjunctive conjunction can be rendered by means of continuative particles. However two or three set terms are to be met with.

a. In short sentences where the sense of "although" is admissible the conjunction rung is employed. In such a sentence as: "I am permitted to eat mutton but not beef," we may turn it; "I am permitted to eat, though mutton, not beef," thus:—

- Ngárang-la lukshá rung bháshá* (Lit: To me, though mutton, ma íá chuk; or Ngárang-la beef it is not permitted to lukshá rung bháshá ía-wa ma eat).
chuk :

Another example elucidates the use more clearly :—

Sampá gál rung gul ma jhyt' : Cross the bridge but don't shake it :

(Lit: "Though crossing bridge, don't cause to shake.")

Kyang is equivalent to rung, and in Lhása more frequently heard.

These conjunctions may likewise be used to contrast two lengthy clauses :—

Khorang-ghi di lam-yik kur (or tang) gyu-la shal-gyá jhe' He promised to send the passport yesterday ; but the ser-rung, dhí-t'uk yok-po-yi khyer vant has not brought it yet :
ma jhung :

β. As rung means "although," if we require a more precise rendering of such conjunctions as "but," "notwithstanding," "however," we may resort to certain other forms which, instead of being annexed as rung to the preceding clauses, are placed as in English at the head of the clause to which they belong.

Two of these have come to our notice, yin-kyang and ák-ma :—

Khorang yang-kyar-yang ke tang He shouted again and again rung, su yang lep ma jhung ; but nobody came ; however, yin-kyang je-la drá shik t'oi- at last a voice was heard.
jhung :

4. The alternative conjunctions "either"—"or" may be rendered by "yang-na"—"yangna," and even by "yang"—"yang" :—

Ká-nangwa yang má nang-wa Whether permission or no yang lep-ne sang ngá-mo t'e- permission arrive, to-morrow kang-la do yong : morning I shall proceed straight ahead (shall advance on.)

Yang-na ngai á-p'd yang-na Either my father or my mother ngai á-ma leb-yong : will come.

When the alternative conjunction lies between two sentences, the conjunction won-te or õnte = "or else," may be employed:—

Khyõrang lokne ðo goi, won-te You must go back, or else jong-põn kyì dak-la nye-pa the jong-pon will punish us tang yong : (dak = self).

Song yang-na lui ñhik : Either go or stay!

5. The conditional conjunction "if" is arrived at by attaching na to the root of the verb concluding the clause:—

Khyõrang lamkhá di-la háchang If you walk too quickly on gyõpo ðul ná ñák yong (or the path, you will fall.
gyel yong) :

Nuk-te ham-pa-chen ñá-ne f'o-na, If you continue eating so khyõrang wolma dam yong : greedily, you will choke.

Nang-la do nang-na, ngá-la } Bring me word if I may go lõn khur shok : } inside.

Sometimes we hear "if" expressed more formally, by the use of ke-si (ཀེ་སི་) at the commencement, and na at the end of the clause:—

Ke-si pu ñhik kye-na, dhe-yi If a boy is born, please name ñing-la Pün-ts'o ták ro nang : him "Pün-ts'o."

Such sentences as: "He asked if he might come" are transposed for translation into Tibetan, thus: "He asked, may I come," or "May I come, thus he asked," (post: XII, 7.)

6. The contrast between a positive and a negative assertion, which in English is made by the introduction of the conjunction "or," is generally expressed in Tibetan without any formal link. Thus :—

Dhe-pa khyi ḡa du'ka mindu' : Are there any dogs there or not ?

Dhe t'okts wo'la du'ka mindu' : Is it under the table or not ?

Sometimes dhang (pr. tang) is used : e. g. :—

Di Pō'kyi pe-chha re' dhang ma re' : Is this a Tibetan book or not ?

Tā-di ngai re' dhang ma re' : Is this horse mine or not ?

CHAPTER XI.

DERIVATIVES AND FORMATIVES.

1. FORMATION OF SUBSTANTIVES FROM ADJECTIVES.—Little change is usually necessary for the utilisation of any adjective as an abstract noun; but those heard are few in number. The servile particle belonging to the adjective, when it is po or mo, is generally altered into pa or va. Thus ts'anmo (pronounced ts'em-mo) "hot," becomes ts'a-va "heat;" münpo "dark" becomes mün-pa darkness; dhák-po "pure," becomes dhákpa "purity;" &c.

Where we should add "ness" to an adjective, the Tibetan affix is lā or tang; e. g., chhen-lū "the greatness," chhyuk-lā "richness," kön-tang "scarceness, rarity," ghóng-tang "fulness."

In those cases where one idea is the direct converse of the other, the compound of the two words expressing these opposite ideas is used to specify the abstract quality of which their condition is an estimate. This is both curious and primitive. Thus, we have "the size" rendered chhe-chhung = "the great-small;" "the distance" is ring-t'ung = "the long-short;" "the temperature" dháng-ro (འཇམ་རྩི་) = "the cold-warm;" "the weight" yáng-chi = "the light-heavy;" "the thickness" bom-t'd = "the thick-thin;" "the height" t'ön-mén = "the high-low;" "one's means" chhyuk-ül = "the rich-poor;" and so forth.

Other similar substantives are derived from adjectives by the aid of the affix khye which itself signifies "difference."

These are akin to those just enumerated; e. g., thickness" = bom-khye; a habit or custom (lit: "the accustomedness") = ghom-khye.

2. VERBAL SUBSTANTIVES.—These may be formed by the addition of lā or tang to the verbal root; e. g., ḍok-tang the reading, ṣa-tang the eating, l'ung-tang the drinking, ḍo-lā the going, the departure, lāng-lā (literally "the being") the state, the condition, &c., &c.

3. The doer of an action is expressed by the syllable khen added on to the verbal root, and such forms are of very frequent occurrence. Thus: ṣṣ-khen a slaughterer, murderer; ḍok-khen a reader, jhyá-khen the maker, bák-khen a carrier, coolie. Sometimes po is added instead of khen, but to the Infinitive, not the root.

This syllable may be also appended to noun substantives, when it serves to indicate one who has specially and habitually to do with the thing to which it is attached. So we have shing-khen the carpenter, lam-khen the guide, ts'em-khen a tailor, tá-khen groom, horse keeper, &c., &c.

4. ADJECTIVES FORMED FROM SUBSTANTIVES AND VERBS. a. In the colloquial of Tibet the derivation of adjectives from nouns is accomplished invariably by the use of the affix chen. The process is very regular and of extensive application, even the formation of ordinary possessives falling mostly under the same rule. Thus we have: wang power, wangchen powerful; rák fame, rákchen famous; rin the price, rinchen expensive, valuable; sem the mind, semchen intelligent; nyák-nyik filth, nyák-nyik-chen filthy; lung wind, lungchen windy.

In the case of possessives we find the genitive of the noun, where it expresses the quality or substance of another thing, rendered in the same way: e. g., dorjé serchen a dorje of gold, or golden dorje; khyin shingchen a wooden house, or house of wood ; but at times we might hear ser dorje and shing-khyim used for brevity with the same meaning.

The construction with chen is, however, frequently carried still further, being used for all manner of possession and even with the personal pronouns. So we occasionally hear dukpo lámáchen instead of lámá-yi dukpo for "the lama's coat," and shambu Punts'o-chen instead of Punts'o-i shambu, for "Punts'o's cap." The pronouns "my," "his," &c., become ngáchen, khochen, &c., as indicated in the table of pronouns.

β. The affixes chhok and nyen are appended to verbal roots for the production of derivative adjectives, and indicate fitness, capability, &c. Thus from the verb gál-wa "to pass over," "cross," we obtain gál-chhok "passable" "fordable":

Dongtse-i wokné Nyang Chhu From below Dongtse the Nyang gál-chhok yō : River is fordable.

Yárka-la Ghang-lá-chhen Lá di In summer the Kanglechen jám-jám gál-chhok jhung : Pass becomes smooth and passable.

Di chhu di t'ung-nyen yimpe ? Is this water drinkable ?

West of Shigátse nyen is more commonly heard than chhok ; whilst further east chhok is always used and nyen quite disappears. Thus in Western Tibet we have ša-nyen, khyer-nyen, gál-nyen, &c. ; whilst in the province of Ui are said ša-chhok eatable, khur-chhok portable, do-chhok capable of traverse, &c., Rung also occurs in the latter district as an affix of similar import : e. g., ts'ong-rung saleable.

The negative formative in these cases is usually me' subjoined in place of chhok, &c. Or else mi is placed first and chhok attached as before. T'ung me', mi t'ung-chhok.

γ. The negative substitute for chen is also me'. Thus we hear shekchen strong, shekme' weak (lit: "possessed of strength," "without strength ;" shek or she' being a substantive = "strength") ; dhö'chen tasty, dhö'me' tasteless. Also go-me' headless, and such like.

3. The use with chen has already been shewn to be extensive. It is further available in more complex formations. Thus we find it combined with a double noun in such expressions as jhyá-yib-chen "having the shape of a bird" or "bird-shaped;" khyō'-rang-ghi yib-chen "having your shape" = "like you."

Indeed yib itself is almost a formative and occurs frequently with chen :—

That mountain is shaped like the head of a bull :	P'á-gi ri dhe lang-ghi go yib chen du'.
Yonder peak is like a Noi-jin king :	P'd-gi ri-tse di Noi-jin gyalpo yib chen yō'.
He resembles his sister :	Khorang singmoi yib-chen yō'.
It is like mine :	Di ngái yib-chen du'; or Di ngáchen yib-chen yong.

5. VERBAL EXPLETIVES.—The primary signification of the verb is capable of modification by means of certain syllables introduced or annexed. (i) Bhag is added to the verbal root and indicates inclination to do anything, disposition to feel anything. When used, the causative verb jhe'pa is generally employed in conjunction with it as an auxiliary to the primary verb; a few examples will at once shew the occasions where bhag can be resorted to :—

I am inclined to go on to another stage (of journey) :	Ngdrang-ghi dhang-sa shem-ma t'uk do-bhag jhe'.
He is going to fall :	Khorang gyel-bhag jhe'.
If you don't tread carefully, I shall be disposed to beat you :	Khyō'tenpo mi kyō'-pai, khyō'rang la dung-bhag jhe'-gyu-yin.
He is inclined to accompany you :	Kho khyō'rang dhang nyampo gyu-bhag jhe'.

(ii) Dhá-te attached to the root of any verb acts as an augmentative, signifying that the action is carried on to an excess or at least in a degree greater than usual : e. g. :—

He prays unremittingly :	Kho kurim jhe'-dhá-te.
--------------------------	-------------------------------

The snow is falling abundantly : Khau-a di bháp-đhá-te.

Women chatter incessantly : Bhu'me' lápchá gyák-đhá-te.

Thank-you much, I have eaten abundantly : Tukje-chhe, ngárang to íd-đhá-te.

Please drink plentifully : Tung-đhá-te jhyi ro chí!

(iii) A kindred augmentative exists in the particle ní, which is used however in a different way. For the sake of emphasis the verbal root is repeated and ní is inserted between the repeated syllables. We may render the particle by such English expletives as "indeed," "assuredly," &c. :—

They indeed said so : Dhenda íer ní íer-ne yó'.

You shall assuredly go : Khyórang đo ní đo-gyu-yin.

It seems to be more frequently employed when some contrasting statement is about to be put forward :—

Though he indeed went, he did no good : Khorang song ní song rung, de-mo chyó' ma jhung or Khorang song ní song-ne, ma le-mo chyó-ne yó'.

(iv) Leisure or time to do anything is very conveniently expressed by annexing the syllable long "vacant time" to the verbal root. Thus we obtain such a series as the following which might be indefinitely extended :—

Sá-long : time to eat. P'ep-long : time to come.

Sim-long : leisure to sleep. Kyo-sang-la jhe'-long : time to take re-

Đok-long : time to read. creation.

De'-long : time to stay.

Ngárang-la lap gyak-long me' : I have no time to chatter.

Gompa dhe-la tok íhik-long re' : Is there time to look through that monastery ?

(v) Opportunity in the sense of a chance or occasion offering may be expressed by adding t'áp as an affix to the verbal root; but though a favourite mode of speech with individuals, it is hardly a universal locution :—

Kyapgōn dhang jál-kha nye't'óp Is there any chance of gaining yō'pe : audience of (or "access to") the Protector?

P'ep-t'áp na, ngá-la lōn nang If there is an opportunity of ro chi : going, please give me notice (send me word).

CHAPTER XII.

IDIOMATIC PHRASES.

(1) A gerundial clause is grammatically speaking only an expanded adverb and an adverb is a contracted gerundial clause. Thus in Tibetan we often find the adverb expanded into a gerundial clause :—

He was beating the horse very severely : Khorang tak-po jhye'-ndi tá-po dung-gin-duk.

Pull the boat slowly to the shore : Kále jhye'-ndi ðam-tu ko-á di ðong tang.

The literal translation of these sentences is :—

He, doing it severe, the horse was beating.

Doing it gently, unto the shore the boat pull.

(2) This mode of turning the phrase occurs also in such expressions as “in such a manner,” “in the best way he could,” “according to the king’s command” :—

The girl climbed up the ridge in the best way she could : Pumo-i ghang ts'uk kyí jhye'-ndi gang teng la dzek song.

Note :—GHANG TS'UK KYI is a phrase in itself, meaning “by what one is able” = “to the best of one’s ability.”

The Regent is supposed to issue orders according to the Dalai Lama’s wishes. De-si di Gyá-wa Rimpo-chhe-i gong-pai nang-ñhin jhye' ndi kágyur nang-gyu nyam-pa-yin.

(3) Our very common expression “I think that” is rendered Ngái sampá la “to my thought ;” also “I know that” can be phrased Ngái shái-pa la or when uttered in a warning manner Ngái khyen la :—

- I think that it will snow to-day : Ngái sampa la tering khau-a di bab-gyu-yin.
- I think he will not stay here : Ngárang-ghi sampa-la kho dir dō'gyu ma re' (also Kho-woi sampa la, &c.)
- I know you will not come back : Ngárang-ghi khyen-la khyōrang lok yong-gyu-ma re'.
- I know that she went home : Ngái shái-pa la mo-yi khyim la song.
- The hermit considered his place was lonely : Gomchen-kyi sampa-la ngai sá-chha di empa du'.

Similar also is the construction in phrases beginning "I like" which are turned ngá-i shempa la or ngá-i dho-wa la ("to my taste"); and again this is akin to the method of rendering "I want" by goi and kho-wa. (See Ch. VI, B. 13).

(4) When it is desired to express the arrival of the time at which anything should happen or has happened, &c., the verb bábpá ("to descend") is invariably made use of. Thus, for the phrase "It is time," a Tibetan will say "It has come down to the time of." So, for "It is time to start," he would turn the phrase "It has come down to the time of going:" Gyu-pái dhui-la bábjhung; or, using another form of the participle: Gyu-khen-kyi gang-la bábpá song :—

When the day for paying you arrives, I will remember this:	}	Khyōrang-la lá p'inpái nyin la bábpá-ne, kap-kyen di ghen-dhu shuk yong (སྐབས་རྒྱུ་འདི་དུ་བྱ་བུ་ཡོང་།)
---	---	--

However, ren du' is a vulgarism for "It is time to."

(5) The verb "to be" and the pronoun in the dative is the mode of expressing "to have," "to possess," as already indicated; but the construction with the dative occurs in other phrases also, such as :—

- Dhá-ta ngárang-la qhelwa re'* : I am busy now. ("There is business to me now.")
Dhéring ngárang-la ne' yó' : I am unwell to-day.
Pumo dhe-la shek-chhung yó' : That girl is weak.
Dhe-la shek-kyi chhokpa yó'pe : Is that strong enough ?

(6) The Verbum loquendi takes the usual Oriental circumlocution. When a message is sent or any direction given what is to be said, the speaker projects himself into the position of his deputy, using in the direction the exact person in pronouns and verbs which he supposes will be spoken when his direction is carried out. Thus, "Tell him not to come" is in Tibetan phrased as "Tell him 'do not come;'" and "He told me he had seen you" would be turned "He told me 'I have seen him.'" These two sentences in Tibetan colloquial would be :—Kho-la ma yong lap and Khorang ngárang dhe-la t'ong jhung lap song. (N. B.—Probably in the last sentence dhe-la which we have used for "him"—really "that one"—would be expressed as kusho-la "the Saheb"). Sometimes, however, our European phrasing of such sentences is resorted to, and it is not unknown even in literary works where, usually, the expression of the verbum loquendi is still more formal.

(7) Not dissimilar is the usage where the solution of a doubtful state of things is requested, and where we should employ an interrogative "if" or "whether." Thus, "See if he is coming" becomes "See, is he coming?" Again "Try whether the bridge is firm" becomes "Try, is the bridge firm?" In Tibetan, therefore :—Toi shik! khorang yong-ghi-yó'pe? and Ts'ö' toi shik! šampa tempo é yó'? The last sentence might be varied into šampai ts'ö' toi shik! tempo é yó' : "Make trial of the bridge—is it firm?" Again :—

Khorang lep jhung-ngá shin-gi ma re' : "I do not know if he has come."

However, both the positive and negative alternatives are often expressed in injunctions of this kind : e. g. :—

Make strict enquiry whether Lá di khau-dí chur-wa-i kar-ták the pass is blocked with jhyi-chik!—Yó'pa re' me' pa snow, or not : re' ?

(8) It will not be out of place once again to direct attention to the predilection of the Modern Colloquial for expanded forms, especially in the case of verbs. This usage is adopted in certain instances solely for perspicuity, as :—

ñik tá-wa ; instead of tá-wa : to see.
to ñi-wa ; " " íd-wa : to eat.
ýi-ge ðok-pa ; " " ðok-pa : to read.
nyi' ñyal-wa ; " " ñyal-wa : to sleep.

But in many cases, apparently from mere love of expansion :—

ðho-wa ta-wa ; for ðho-wa : to taste.
sam-lo tang-wa ; for sem-pa : to think.
gyuk-shá ló'pa ; for gyuk-pa : to run.
ge'mo ghe'pa : for gó'pa : to laugh.
kü-ne khurwa : } for ku-wa : to steal.
ku-ma kü-pa ; }

Similar expansions are noticeable in such phrases as ká-le khákpo re' : "it is difficult" now used for the old form ká yó' ; dhárang sho-ge "this morning" used for dhárang ; tak-p'uk "a cavern" for p'ukpa ; chhu-t'o "lips" for chhu ; &c. Again be'pa : "to try, endeavour" is never heard now, the present expression being tsön-dü (བརྩོན་འགྲུས་) jhye'pa ; kyong-wa "to help" is supplanted by ro-rám jhye'pa ; whilst numerous other examples might be instanced.

HONORIFICS.

(1) The custom of employing special words in lieu of the ordinary expressions when addressing persons of superior position remains to be briefly noticed. This usage, which in the Corean language has reached the extreme of elaboration, is likewise in the Tibetan tongue governed by systematic principles. Not only are the names of things changed on these occasions but also the verbs and pronouns are affected, the adjectives alone retaining their common forms. Moreover, there are two departments of this respectful speech ; first, the series of terms to be used in actually speaking to, or of, a person of rank or sanctity ; secondly, a more limited set of words employed when talking of one self, or to others of ordinary position, in the presence of superiors. The first class are Honorifics, the second Elegancies.

(2) For practical purposes, a few of the more frequent terms will be sufficient to acquire. Especially should be noted the honorific forms of the pronouns ; khye' and nyi'rang being used for khyō'rang, and nge' as an Elegancy should be employed instead of ngdrang. However, in addressing superiors, the pronouns should not be used abruptly, but each sentence or question should commence with the word kusho, answering to our "Sir," or in the case of a great lama the better style is Jetsün or Jetsün Rimpochhe. When mentioning parts of the great man's body each term denoting these should have the syllable ku prefixed. The principle verbs to remember are the verbs p'ep-pa meaning both "to come" and "to go" and p'ulwa to express your "giving" to the superior while nang-wa denotes his "giving" to you. Also, instead of the common jhye'pa, we have dze'pa as the honorific and gyi'pa as the elegant synonym used in polite talk between equals. Other honorific verbs are the following, most of which in the original spelling have either ཨ or འ as the initial :—

shu-wa :	to address.	she'-pa }	to speak (of superior
shen-pa :	to desire.	sung-wa :	himself speaking).
she'-pa :	to laugh.	shi-wa :	to see (superior seeing).
shum-pa :	to weep.	sen-pa :	to hear (ditto).
shü-pa :	to sit, stay.	sim-pa :	to sleep (ditto).
sheng-pa :	to get up, rise.	de-war sheg-pa :	to die (ditto).
she'-pa :	to wish.	sol-wa shei-pa :	to eat.
shei-pa :	to receive, accept.	sul-wa :	to dress, put on.

So, also, with the honorific names of things which chiefly, we find, commence with the letter s :—

shák :	day.	u :	the head.
sháp :	foot.	shang :	the nose.
shál :	mouth, face.	chhýák :	hand.
ship :	flour.	pu :	hair.
shok :	the side.	t'uk :	heart, mind.
sang-ma :	food.	sol-jhá :	tea.

One often hears ku prefixed in the sense of "your," e. g., ku kham : "your health," ku sháp : "your foot." Before utensils and eatables sol is put : sol-shá "meat," sol-bing "tea-pot." As an elegance, shéi is prefixed to eatables and shal to articles used in connection with the face ; thus :—

shéi-pák "bread," shéi-kyem "drink" shál-sák "a pipe," shál-gyen "moustache."

When reference is made to personal articles belonging to the Grand Lama of Lhásá, or to his characteristics, the word ser, "golden," is prefixed. So his "tea" is styled ser-jhá, his "nose" ser-shang, &c. When he dies, moreover, they say shing-la p'ep song "he has gone to the field ;" while of a great man they would say de-war shég song, and of any ordinary person shi song "he has died."

CHAPTER XIII. COMPOSITION.

1. ORDER OF WORDS.—The usual order of words in a simple sentence is Subject, Object, Predicate. Of the words attached to the chief substantive of the Subject, we note that any Possessive or Genitive is placed before the chief substantive, any ordinary adjectives immediately follow the substantive, any numeral follows the adjectives, any demonstrative pronouns, indefinite pronouns, or article follow the adjective or the numeral if there be one. The same order is observed in the component parts of the Object in any sentence. All extensions of the Predicate precede the main verb. In any sentence whatever, including gerundial and participial clauses, the verb stands last.

In any sentence where the verb takes an impersonal form, the dative connected therewith stands at the head of the sentence, e. g. Woma-la serru gyak jhung : “The milk has become bad ;” or “To the milk badness has befallen.”

The interrogative pronoun is placed immediately before the verb : e. g., Luk-ghi kang pa chhak-pai shempa di ghána yō'pe : “Where is the butcher who broke the sheep’s leg ?”

Any expansion of the substantive, of the nature of a relative clause, may either precede or follow the substantive upon which it is dependent. In the former case the participle of the clause is placed in the genitive ; in the latter construction the participle remains in the case of the substantive which it follows, the article being placed after the clause. (See Ch. VI, 5, 7, N. B.)

2. GOVERNMENT BY VERBS.—Many of the verbs in use of transitive sense take as Object an uninflected Accusative. There are, nevertheless, a certain number which require the Object to be inflected by the addition of the affix la. The case thus formed may be sometimes the Dative, sometimes the Accusative, and at times even the Locative which rarely in Central Tibetan assumes the ordinary Locative affix na. Other verbs, moreover, necessitate the assumption by the Object of the Ablative Case in dhang.

a. Verbs of giving, shewing, speaking, teaching, take the Dative in la.

β. The following verbs, with others, must be followed by the Locative in la :—shák-pa to put, place, tá-wa to behold, look at, duk-pa to strike against, dhe'pa to dread, gar-wa to fasten.

γ. The Verbs requiring dhang are de-wa to meddle with, khá-t'ál-wa to separate from, jalwa to wait upon, pay one's respects to, l'e'-pa to meet, with a few others.

3. CONTINUATIVE PARTICLES.—In Tibetan composition the finite verb occurs much less frequently than in European idiom. The main clause or sentence is almost undiscoverable in any long statement or paragraph. The whole style of composition is a chain of gerundial and participial clauses; depending only technically upon one another. The chain of clauses or sentences proceeds continuously, each successive clause in form, though not in sense, a sequence from the other, until at length a final verb—by no means the most important or main one in meaning—brings a break in the connexion. In written compositions this style is more observable than in lengthy spoken sentences, but the better-educated resort to the participial or gerundial construction even in speaking. All the affixes forming the different gerunds enumerated in Chapter VI. Section B, might be denominated with equal accuracy Continuative Particles, for nearly any one from among those may be added to the concluding verb of each successive clause to carry on the chain of connexion. Of course where the construction, in signification as well as in external form, is really gerundial, the choice of particle annexed should be differentiated in accordance with the distinction of kinds of gerunds already set forth, and the sense may in fact be affected by such choice. In addition to the affixes already given, te and dhang may be mentioned as Continuative Particles; te being added to the root of any verb and dhang being appended to the infinitive; or, in other words, dhang requires to be connected with the verb to which taste or random selection may have attached it by the insertion of pa or wa after the root of such verb.

Example of use of Continuative Particles :—

“The soldiers arrived at the city and remained standing outside the gates. They were clad in yellow coats and felt boots, and wore on their heads Lit'ang-shaped hats. By means of those hats we knew they did not belong to the Lháśá Government; and were afraid.”

For translation, we arrange the wording thus :—

“The soldiers having arrived at the city, remained standing outside the gates. Being clad in yellow coats and felt boots, and wearing on their heads Lit'ang-shaped hats, because of those hats, we knew they did not belong to the Lháśá Government; and were afraid.”

Mákmi-ts'o qhong-khyer-la leb-nai gyalgo-i p'i-la lang-nai de'pa dhang chhupa serpo bhe-pák-la ghyön-la dhe-yi go-la Lit'ang-yibchen shámo ghyön-pai shámo dhe-yi chhyir-dhu kho-ts'o De-wa Jong-la ma t'i-wa ngo-shei-te ngáchák ts'er jhung.

In the foregoing there is no finite verb, nor any but gerundial construction, observable until the concluding verb ts'er jhung. However, in the English sense of the term, that is not correct; de'pa and ngo-shei-te are in reality both of them finite verbs which, after the Tibetan style, are conjoined, each to the sentence following, by dháng and te, respectively, which are thus Continuative Particles, pure and simple.

So seldom are these Particles needed in the Colloquial, that nothing further on the subject can be added here.

4. LETTERS AND CORRESPONDENCE. In modern letter-writing, especially in commercial and domestic correspondence, the Colloquial development of the language is clothed in the old literary style only so far as the spelling of the words is concerned. Thus if the rules for pronouncing the written forms are applied in inverse order to the details of grammar and vocabulary as given in this work, there can be no difficulty in epistolary correspondence, provided the characters, printed and cursive, are first mastered. The rules as to spelling and pronunciation are explained elsewhere, and if the printed characters, as there displayed, should be used by the traveller or student in letter-writing, any Tibetan will at least be able to read his effusions. To acquire the cursive alphabet may be taken as a work of supererogation for the majority of those interested in this tongue. However, in Csoma Korösi's Grammar the various types of handwriting are fully illustrated, and doubtless by practice fair proficiency in Tibetan calligraphy would be easily attainable,

As specimens of the modern epistolary style, we transcribe two letters received by the author, one from a Tibetan lama of moderate acquirements, the other from a man well-known as a Tibetan scholar. Naturally, we give these in the ordinary printed character, appending likewise a literal translation of each epistle.

To his Graciousness the Padre Saheb Lama—

Faithful and earnest wishes are presented from your humble one that you are well in bodily health. Very, very great thanks not only for preparing your former letter but also for sending a letter just now. Here am I a lama well also by the favour of God. Some eight or nine months ago, a man here had a book by the Reverend Milaraspa; but the book was sold by that man for fifteen rupees (gyá-tang). I am looking out for Milaraspa's book for you once more. If it is obtained particulars shall be immediately transmitted to you.
 At present a man here will sell a copy of "The Skēin of Golden Precepts and Biography of the Lotos Teacher" (i. e.
 The Padma Tang-yig), asking thirteen rupees. So if you require it, please to send at once in a Money Order (མ་ནི་ཨོར་གྲང་) thirteen rupees. When I have bought the book from him, it shall be sent as quickly as possible. Many salaams are offered from your humble Urygan Gyá-ts'o.

[It should be noted that the Tibetan of the foregoing letter is not in places strictly accurate. Thus, several times the Ablative is used instead of the Instrumental Case. The use of བཞུང་ with འབྲུང་ should be remarked in both letters. "Salaam," too, is not a Tibetan greeting.]

Down before the lotos-feet of the most precious lama the Reverend Gerham Sendbergas, the friend of virtue who lays hold on the 30,000 stainless observances of the chivalrous!

Respects be offered! Having to-day received your letter written from Katak, on the 8th day of the twelfth month—many thanks. Here am I continuing still well in health and profoundly anxious to render any services with the very utmost attention.¹ Please excuse what is omitted² (i. e., what may be omitted in my proffers of service)! You yourself³ and your wife, the partner of your seal, the goddess mem being well in bodily health and prosperously settled, it is indeed well. With regard to your work—the book of the Sikkim language, I have had occasion to examine it thoroughly. Your letter which you wrote on the 3rd instant has been sent here from Sir———. To-morrow a reply to it

 མཚོགས་ཚེན་པའི་

³ ལྷོ་ signifies really “body,” and is used as an honorific form for “yourself,” i. e., “Your own body.” The ordinary word for “body” is ལྷས་ shall be despatched.¹ As to the kind expressions of thought which, unwavering, come yet again from you to me, pray accept my repeated thanks. Sincere² wishes and compliments for happiness on the good date (i. e., Christmas)³ are offered.

¹ Mark here the future passive tense ལྷན་གྱི་ཡིན་པ་གསུངས་ "Shall have been sent," or "Shall be sent." ལྷན་ is honorific for ཇིངས་ as ཤེས་ is for ཤངས་

² དཀར་མོ་ means, of course, "white," and hence, in this phrase, may be rendered "pure" or "sincere."

³ The writer of the letter, though not a Christian, very appropriately and thoughtfully renders "Christmas Day," in this decorous expression.]

TECHNICAL LISTS.

CONVERSATIONAL EXERCISES

AND

NOTES ON CERTAIN LETTERS.

Wherever GH occurs in these pages it will be best understood (when spoken by Englishmen) if it is sounded merely as K. Thus ghang "what," may be conveniently pronounced kang; ghá-pa, "where," as ká-pa. So also DH, though correct, may be always sounded T, and indeed D is by natives frequently sounded as T. Thus dhön-la "for" (Hind: ke-waste) is heard often as tönla, dhátá "now" as tátá, (or vulgarly tandá) ghánḍe "how," may (though improperly) sound kánḍe; and the common word dhang should be pronounced tāng.

So, too, JH, though correct, had best be spoken as is CH. Thus jhá "tea," may be sounded chá; but where the Y sound follows jh as in jhyá "a bird," either jhyá or chyá may be used. The common verb jhye'pa "to do," often sounds chye'pa, and even vulgarly as chyi-pa. We advise chye'pa here; imperative: chyi "do!" Again; we print in these pages BH in words spelt in Tibetan orthography with initial B; but we advise the invariable use of P for BH. Thus Pö'pa "a Tibetan," for the more correct Bhö'pa.

We have printed LH throughout, but as the letter is somewhat guttural, the h should be sounded before the l; so, we say for Lhásá, always Hlásá, and lham "a boot," is Hlam

As to ui, ei, and ai, by which we have generally represented the elided final s in us, es, and as, these are not diphthongal sounds; but though the i is sounded separately, it must follow the u, e, and a so quickly and lightly as to be hardly audible as a distinct letter. In the case of ai, the sound of our diphthong ai in "rain," "stain," is approached, and for convenience we recommend that sound, or that of the open e. So yö'pai "is!" may be pronounced yö'pe.

Final o in short affixes sounds like u, as in yákpo "good," tákpo "hard," &c.

The vowel e in some words seems vulgarly to change to the vowel i. Thus ngá she-ghi-du' "I know," is heard as ngá shin-ghi-du' and jhye'-kin-du' "is doing," is vulgarly pronounced chyin-kin-du'.

In Colloquial Tibetan the final letter of a syllable is generally very indistinctly heard; and certain letters when occurring as finals are completely dropped. Final g takes the sound of k, and in many parts of Tibet is hardly audible, at least in most words. Thus t'ukje "thank-you," sounds t'u-je; yákpo generally yá'po. Final b is changed to p, as leb-jhung "arrived," which is pronounced lep-chung; but this final p is frequently unsounded, as in t'u(p)ÿong "shall be able," pá(k)-lé(p) "broad." Where ɒ is the last letter it is always inaudible, save for an abrupt almost imperceptible breathing. Accordingly, we have invariably omitted final d, at the same time indicating the elision by an apostrophe; e. g., jhye'pa "to do," for jhyed-pa. Final l, though often heard in the province of Ui, is frequently dropped, especially in Tsang; e. g., Pál-po, "a Nipalese man," sounds Pá'po, or Pe'bo. After u it modifies that vowel into ü, as yü' for yul "country." In Jaeschke's and Csoma's works, no distinction as to sound is made between the letters ch and chy, chh and chhy, and j and jy. As in listening to natives we have clearly detected the y sound, we have generally in these pages indicated the y-letter words where they occur. Thus jha (or cha) is "tea," but jhya (or chya) is "a bird;" chhe = "great" and "very," and chhye = "flour," chhung-wa = "small," but chhyung-wa, "to take out" "remove;" je' pa = "to forget," but jye'-pa = "to open."

[Where any difficulty is experienced in sounding the cerebrals t, t', d, dh,—and one is very apt to sound the ordinary dentals instead—it will be best to use tr, t'r, dr, and dhr, in their place. According to Mr. Rockhill this latter pronunciation is the Lhásá method. Sarat Chandra Das and others, who have actually visited Lhásá, contradict this assertion; but, although we are decidedly opposed to Mr. Rockhill's phonetic system in general, we are bound to admit that we have frequently heard the tr and dr used. Thus drá may be said for dá "the voice, wö-tro for wö'-to "light" mándro for ma do "don't go," t'rák for t'ák "blood," &c., nevertheless, the other is deemed the proper pronunciation by the educated.]

BRIEF ORDERS.

Don't come to-day : come to-morrow :	Dhe-ring ma yong : sang-nyin shok !
Don't come so close :	Dinda ts'ánai ma yong !
Go outside :	Chhyi-lok song !
Go away (Be off) !	Ha-la gyuk !
Go in front :	Ngen-la gyu (often Hen-la gyu) !
Go behind :	Shuk-la gyu !
Don't go so quickly :	Dinda gyo-po mándro !
Don't go far :	P'ár-tsam mándro !
Get up :	Kyére lang chik ! or Yar long !
Keep straight (Hind : Sidha karo) :	Khaddu chyi or Khaddu gyu !
Make haste :	Ts'á-ghák jhyi shik !
Run quickly :	Gyō-po gyuk !
Listen here (Attend) !	Tsur-la nyōn shik !
Give your mind to it :	Nang-dhák jhyi shi' (jhyi sounds chyi) !
Take care :	Rikpa jhyi ; or Rik ñim !
Don't trouble me (Hind : Dik mat karo) :	Ngá-la nyāp chū ma p'i !
Catch hold of it :	Di-la sim ; also Di-la she' !
Stop ! Stop :	Ghuk-ta : ghuk-ta !
Remain here :	Di-pa dō' shik ! or Dipa gu !
Stay waiting here (Hind : Hasir raho) :	Di-pa gu'ne dō' !
Sit down :	Sá-la dō' or (politely, with gesture) : Shu !

Is it there or not—See :	Dhēpa 'indu mindu—Tō shok !
It is time to go now :	Tanḍa do-ren ḍu' !
Send him here :	Diru kho tong !
Hold in your dog, please :	Rang-ghi khi-la sim roch (for ro chik) !
Throw it away :	Yuk ihok !
Blow up the fire :	Mé p'u !
Set it down ; put it up ; lift it up :	Sá-la iho' ; yār iho' ; yá-tē t'o !
Fetch the horse here :	Tē'ur tá-po dī f'i !
Bring me more water :	Chhu dhārunḡ khur shok !
Bring the Sahib some tea :	Kusho-la so'jhá khur shok !
Take away these things :	Chhá-khá dī-tē'ō khur song !
See where he goes :	Ghá-la ḡo-wai kho-la tō shok !
Look over there—up there— down there :	P'á-gi-la—yá-gi-la—má-gi-la tō dhang !
Give me that, please :	Ngá-la dho-ga nang roch (for ro chik) !
That's enough (Hind: Bas) !	Shang yong ; or yong nge !
Take off your cap :	Shámḡhu t'u !
Don't forget (Hind: Mat bhulo) !	Mánjō ! (last syllable abrupt) !
Keep in the middle :	Kiltu ihog ! or kiltu chyí !
Go inside the blankets :	Másen bug-la gyu !
Go and see :	Tá-la song !
Never mind what I said (Hind : Kuchh parwa ná) :	Ke-chha dī tōnla mi fo' !
It is time to wake up :	Nyē' sē'pai ren ḍu' !
Put it back again :	Dī lokne iho' !
Throw this thing away :	Chhá-khá dī yuk tong !
Don't make such a noise :	Wur dhenḡa ma gyap !
Go and see who it is :	Su yō'pe tá-la song !
Make ready to start :	Do-gyu t'ál-ḡik chyí !
Never mind the rest (what remains) :	Lhák-lēi la mi to' !
Don't let it fall :	Dī idk ma chuk !
Now you may go :	Khyō' tanda ḡo chok !

Go and call him : Gyu-ne kho-la ke tang sho' !
 Tell him to come here : Diru shok kho-la lap !

EVERY DAY QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

I shall begin the work now :	Tanda le-ka di go-druk yong.
Call him to come here im- mediately :	Kho-la ke tong dhang, diru tanda t'eltu shok !
Oh, never mind! (Hind : Kuchch parwa nahin):	Ke-chha te dhónla mito' !
Tell him not to come :	Kho-la lap, ma yong.
Why did you not come yester- day ?	Dang-la ghang-la yong-pa-me' (or lep-ma-song) !
I was ill yesterday :	Ngá dang-la ná jhung.
Where do you live ?	Khyó' nai-ts'ang ká-pa yó' or Khyó' ká-pa de-ghi yó' ?
I live in this place :	Nge nai-ts'ang di chhyok-la yó' ("my dwelling is in this place").

Run for my letters to the Post Office:	} Yik-khyim-la nge yi-ge chhyirtu gyuksha lō'tang!
What is your name?	Khyō-khyi ming-la ghang ser?
From what country do you come?	Khyōrang yu (l) ghā-ne yin?
I am from Gal-rong:	Ngá Ghal-rong-le yin (or lep jhung).
You must really come with me:	Khyō' nenten nge nyampo yong go yō'.
Be it as you command, Sir:	Kusho; ká p'ep rang nang!
Ask him if he got the letter:	Kho-la lap dhang; yige dhe t'op jhung-nga.
He says he received it:	Kho lap-ki-du'; dhe-la t'op jhung.
How much shall I give you?	Khyō'-la ter-wa ghā ts'ō?
Give me what you think right:	Nang ro nang ku-khyen kusho; khyen khyen.
You know best, Sir:	Kusho; khyen khyen!
May leave-of-absence be granted me:	Ngá-la gong-pa nang ro chí' (stress on ro).
Never mind what you have to do, come:	Khyōrang ghang jhye' gyu na yāng khye' mi du', shok!
Have you a substitute (Hind: badli)?	Khyōrang-la ts'áp yō'pe?
Please, give me an advance:	Ngá-la ngül ngá-chhyi nang ro nang.
I dismiss you:	Khyōrang-la gong-p'ok nang chí'.
Sahib, do not be angry with me:	Kusho; ngá-la gong-pa (འཇམ་ལོ་མཚོ་) ma t'sum; (instead of ngá-la often t'om-bhu-la "with the little humble one").

ASKING THE WAY.

- Whose house is that? Nang dhe so-kyi re' ?
- What is the name of this village? Dong-pa di ōing-la ghang yō'-pa ?
- It is a large town: it is called Tse-t'ang: Di fong-khyer chhe di ; Tse-t'ang ser yin.
- Is there a lodging here or not? Di-pa nai-ts'ang yō'pa re' me'-pa re' ?
- On the further side of the town, is there any road out or not: P'á-lok-la fong-khyer-ne lam chi yō' pa re' me' pa re' ?
- See those men building the new wall; the road begins there: Mi-t' so trik-pa sarpa gyap-khan dhe-la tō' tang! Lam di p'á-gi go-druk.
- What is yonder peak named? P'á-gi ri-tse-la ōing ghang ser-ki-yō' ?
- Shew me the way to Gyamda: Gyamdá-i lam di ngá-la ten rock ?
- Kindly shew me the way: Lam di ten rock !
- Where to?—To T'áshilhūmpo: Ghá-la !—T'áshi-lhūmpo la.
- Where is the bridge? Sampa di ghá re' ?
- Where are you going to? Khyō' ghá-ru fō-ghi-yimpe ?
- Is it an easy path? Lam-kha di jám-jám yō'dhá ?
- It is only a foot-track: Kang-lam chi man-na mi yong.
- The path is steep and narrow: Lamkhá di ghyen-ghyen tokpo du'.
- Is it a broad path? Dhe lamkhá yang-po chi yō'-pe ?
- It is a steep ascent to the Pass: Lá di-yi ghyen-la sarpo du'.
- Is the road to Samye level? Samye kyi lam nyom-nyom á du'.
- How far is it from here to Shá-lu? Di-ne Shá-lu-la t'á-ring-fung ghá ts'o' ?
- Where is the road? Lam há-pa yō' ?
- Don't go across that bridge: Há-gi sam-pai t'o' lam-la mandro!
- How far is it to the next halting stage? Nye-wai sim-dang-sá la t'á ghá ts'o' ?

Is it a long way to Chhábdó?	Chhámdo la t'a ring-po é yó' ?
Which is the way?	Lam ghang-ghi yin ?
Do you see that tree on the other side of the river?	Tsang-poi ihó' ihen-ngoila, khyó' shing dhe mik t'ong- ngá ?
Say that again; I don't under- stand:	Lok-ne lap nang; ngá há-gho mi yong.
Ah! I understand:	O-ho! ngá há gho jhung.
How can I find a way across the river?	Ngárang-ghi chhui t'e' lam di t'op t'u' yong-nga ?
Go the second path on the left side:	Yón-ngoila angki nyi-pai lam- khá gyu.
Come along! keep in the mid- dle:	Nyampo shok! kiltu shok:
Go straight on; afterwards slant-off to the left (lit: "slanting, go"):	Dong-po dong-po song: lar-ne yón. ngó'-la kyok-ne gyuk.
Keep straight:	Khádu chyí (i. e., jhyí').
The path turns to the right:	Lam di yái-ngó'-la do ghi-du'.
The right-hand path; left- hand path; a short cut:	Yái-lak lam; yón-lak lam; gyok- lam.

THE WEATHER.

The night is very dark:	Ts'en di la mün-nak song.
It is becoming almost dark:	Nám-shró' yol song.
It is now dark:	Tanda münpa nák-po re'.
It is now light:	Tanda t'ang karmo re'.
Rain is going to fall:	Chháarpa bap-yong.
The snow will not cease to-day:	Te-ring khau-a di chhé mi yong.
The snow is melting quickly:	Khau-a di gyokpo (sounds gyó'- po) ihu ghi-du'.
The rain has ceased now:	Chháarpa di tanda chhé song.
I see the mist rising:	Ngá mukpa (often mu'pa) lang- wa t'ong-ghi-yó'.
A snow-storm is at hand:	Khá-ts'up chí' t'a-nyesa-la yong- ghi-du'.

Thick mists are on the mountain side:	Mu'pa mongpo ri-lok-la du'.
It will be fine to-day:	Dhering nam f'ang yong.
Can you run quickly?	Khyō'rang gyokpo gyukshā lō'- t'up yong-nga (gyuk-shā lō'pa "to run.")
Don't go there; there is no shelter there:	Dhe-pa māndro; dhe-pa chhār-yap me' (or chhār-kyip me'.)
Pitch the tent at once: the rain will pour down this instant:	Ghur di ma-t'okts'e (or oftener tanda t'ellu) sho' tang: tanda lamsang chhārpa gyap yong.
Climb the rock: over there is rain-shelter—beneath that boulder:	Tak-la sok; hā-kiru chhār-yap du'—p'ā-bong-ghi wokla (or p'ong-ghi, &c.).
The Pass is filled with snow:	La di khau-a-yi kāk du'.
The mists will pass away when the rain ceases:	Ohhārpa chhē-ne, mu'pa di yel ḡo yong.
The sun is very hot:	Nyi-ma hā-chang ts'āpo du'.
The sun will cause pain in your head:	Nyi-ma-yi khyō' kyi go nai yong.
It snows: it is freezing:	Khau-a bay-ki-du': khyāk-ghi- du'.
Down there, there is rock-shelter; under that it will be warm:	Mākiru qhāk-kyip yō'; dhe-yi- wā'la qhōmmo yong.
The river is frozen hard:	Chhu di takpo khyāk jhung.
When does the moon rise:	Dāwa ghā-tui (or kā-tū) shar yong?
There is no moon to-night:	P'iro di dāwa mindu'.
The wind is rising; it is very cold*:	Lhākpa lang-ghi-re'; nam hā- chang qhangmo du'.
The air will be mild at Shikha:	Shi-kha la ngā-rā di jāmpo rak yong.
Shake the cloak well:	Ohhār-bhē di sop-sop jhyi nang.

* In such phrases as "it is cold," "it is warm," "it is fine," Tibetans always say: "the sky is cold, warm, fine, &c. Thus nam lōmpa du'; "it is wet;" but only, of course, when speaking of the weather or atmosphere.

When the mists are thick in a valley, snow is falling heavily on the mountains close by : Lung-pe nang-na mū-pa di mong po yong-pāi, nye-tsāne ri-la khau-a di tu'pa bap-kyi-re'.

It is not freezing now : Tanda khyāk-(or khyá-) ghi-min-du'.

AT AN INN, &c.

Where can we find lodgings ? Nái-ts'ang ghá-pá nye' chok-ka ?
In this house : inside the monastery : Nang di-la : gom-bai bug-la.

Knock at the door, please : Go-la ták-ták jhy' nang).

Where is the landlord ? Nái-bo ghá-pá yō'-pai ?

I am the landlady ; salutation, Sir ! Ngárang nái-mo di yin : Ku-sho, chhá-pe'.

I want lodgings this night, please : Ngárang-la nái-ts'ang p'iro di go nang ro nang.

Sir ; you are welcome : Kusho : chhá-pe' zhu nang.

I have two rooms above ; the horses will remain underneath. Ngárang-la yá-t'ok nang-mik nyi du' ; má-t'ok tá-ts'o di dö-tu nang yong.

I am tired : where is the bed ? Ngárang-la dup-kyo yin : nyá f'i é yō'.

Sir ; climb up the ladder and see : Kusho ! ken-zá-la dzek-te t'ong nang !

Here are bed and bedding : Di-lá sim-f'i mál-ting jhung.

What bedding have you ? Khyō-rang-la mál-ting ghang yim-pe'.

Fox-skins and a coverlet ; they are dry : Wá-pák, khebma chi : de-dák kem du'.

Thanks madam hostess, I do not require them : Ká-dhim, naimo jhomo, dák-la kho-jhe me'.

I have a hair-blanket myself : Ngárang-la rang-ghi chhálu du'.

All right, Sir : (Sir, it is) : Lá, lá yō (or Lá, lá-so).

Sahab, do you desire food ? Kusho, nyi-la solwa ihe'-pa-re' ?

I want a little washing-water ; nothing else : Ngárang-la f'ü-khu goi-pa yō' dhárunq chang ma re'.

Have you a wash-bowl; also water-for-washing-the-feet?	Khyō-rang-la f'ū-shong chi é yō'? sháb-sil yang é yō'?
I have no bowl: it is not neces- sary:	Ngá-rang-la shong chi mé'-pa: goi-gyu mén.
We Tibetans do not bathe:	Pō-p'o-pa ngá-zhá mi f'ū-pa.
Have you a large pot?	Khyō-rang-la k'og-chhen chi é yō'.
Bring me warm water I beg:	Ohhu ts'em-mo chi khyer shok ro nang!
Are there bugs in this room?	Dé-shik-ts'o nang-mik di-la yō' dhá.
Give me a light:	Ngá-la óng-gu chi nang ro nang!
What is the charge?	Nái-gHong ghá ts'ō?
Farewell! Many thanks:	O-ná ghá-le p'ep! T'uk-je chhe!

MOUNTAINEERING.

The weather is misty:	Nam di la ná-bün t'ib jhung.
As the rain is falling, the mist } will soon pass away: }	Ohhá-rpa bhap-ne, ná-bün gyō-po p'u-gyu-yin.
Yes! it will indeed pass away; } but not until evening: }	Yá-ya! p'u ni p'u-gyu-yin; yin- kyáng nub-mo t'uk mang.
It is time to strike camp:	Ghur lok tang-wáí ren du':
Fold up the tent:	Ghur di ril tong
Put some snow in the pan:	Dhok-le nang-la khau-á shok.
Melt snow and make tea:	Khau-á t'im-ne, soljha shom chí'.
Place the saddle on the pony:	Tá-la gá té' shak.
Be careful to draw the strap tight enough:	Ts'ō' toi dhang ko-t'á dik tangpo chhing!
Now we will start:	Dhá-ta shek-gyu-yin.
Be off! Tread firmly:	Há-la gyuk! tempo jhōn chí' (or tempo kyō' chí'.)
To which side does the path turn off?	Ohhyok ghang-la lamkhá sák- dhe-la gyu-wa?
Keep to the right; to the left:	Yái-chhyok-la song! yōn-la.
Don't loiter on the way:	Lam-la gor ma gor!

- Go straight ahead : T'e-kang-la gyu !
- Go obliquely by degrees : Rim-rim sek-ḡha-la song !
- After we have crossed the bridge, we shall ascend the ridge :
- On the other side the mountain-face is very steep and a mass of loose flints : } P'ár-kha-la ri-ngoí di gyen-ṣarpo chhe shálma-chen du'.
- There is no bridge ; how shall we cross ? } Sampa chí' me' ne, ḡhá-tsul-na ḡál-wa ?
- Blowing air into this yak-skin, we shall have a hide-raft. } Yák-ko-a di nang-la lung p'u-nai, ḡá-la ko-ḡhu shí' yong.
- The current is too violent ; it is not safe and is fearful : Ohhu-gyün di háchang ḡhakpo gyuknáí, mi tempo yong-nai, ḡhe-po du'.
- Let us go together : Ngáchák hlengyai-la ḡo-gyu-yin.
- We must climb up this torrent-bed : ḡhok-ṣar di la shó'ne dzek-pa goi.
- Being very steep, climb firmly : Sar ḡhá-te, tempo shó'ne dzok.
- I am feeling dizzy : Ngá-la khyóm-khyom ḡhung.
- Shall we descend the khud-slope : Kad-ṣar shó'dhu bhap-gyu-yim-pe.
- There is a ravine below : Men-la ḡhokpo shík yong.
- Walk gently along that ledge : Lam-f'ang dhe la dsemts ḡul song !
- Be careful : don't fall : Riko dim : zák ma chuk !
- Don't go further that way : Ngó dhe la dhárung mán ḡo !
- That chasm is unfathomable : Gyá-ser-ka di ting me lon du'.
- The path is very precipitous : Lamkhá ṣar-ṣar chhe shó'dhu bhap.
- The snow-bridges over ravines are all melted now : ḡháng-ṣam ḡhokpoi tengkha di líb tanda shu ḡhung.
- We call snow-bridges " God's bridges : " ḡháng-ṣam la ming dindra ser : kónchhoa-ḡhi ṣam ser.
- The hill-side has become wholly melted ice : } Ri-ngoí di ts'angma khyák-shu kokó ḡhung.

- As the fog is thick, it is difficult to see the edge of the precipice: Mü-pa mongpo yō-pe, kad-sar di mik tá-la ká-le khákpo rē'.
- Do we continue on this side of the river: (Lit: "Do we go, continuing," &c.). Tsang-poi ts'urkha f'o-ne do-wa ?
- No: the path climbs from below, and beyond that rock yonder there is another bridge of split-cane: Mindw' : lamkhá di shō'ne dsek-nai, p'á-gi dhak di-yi p'ártám ts'ár-ám íhem-ma yō'.
- Where is the bridge (split-cane bridge): Ts'ár-ám di ghá-re ?
- You will see it just now: Dhá-dhe dhárunq di-la t'ong yong; or Dhátá rang di-la t'ong-gyu-yin.
- I am not equal to this task: Ngárang di le-ká-i ya mi chok.
- Shall we pass under that overhanging rock: Dhe dhak-kib-kyi wok-la gál-gyu-yimpa ?
- A little more: and we shall see straight on: Dhárunq ts'abik-nai t'e-kang-la t'ong yong.
- The other side, remains of snow still continue: P'ár-khá khau-ái f'o lāi jhung.
- What is the name of that valley down there below: Há-gi lung-pa shō-la di-yi íing la ghang íer (N.B., há-gi signifies "yonder" but closer to the observer's feet than p'á-gi. Perhaps há-gi shō-la by which we have rendered "down there below" would be replaced by má-gi-la).
- (Má-gi-la lung-pa-i ming la ghang íer) ?
- Pitch the camp here: Di-pa ghur lang chí'.
- How far is the Pass from here: Ts'urne lá di t'ukpa t'ák-ring-t'ung ghá dzō yō'pe ?
- How far is Pal-dhe from here: Ts'ur-ne Pal-dhe t'uk-pa t'ák-ring-t'ung ghá dzō' yō'pe ?

- How far is that peak from the Pass-top: Laptse-ne dhe zoktse t'ukpa t'ák-ring-t'ung ghá dzó' yó'pe?
(dhe zoktse instead of zoktse dhe "that peak").
- It is a long distance from here to the Pass-top: Ts'ur-ne laptse t'ukpa t'ák ring-mo du'.
- If you descend quickly you will soon fall on your face: Khyōrang gyō-po shō-dhu bhab-pai, nyurdhu khá dap yong.
- The water trickles from the rock down along my back: Dhák-lai chhu dzak-nai, ngá-i gyap kyí tang-la bhap-ki-du'.
- Is this water good to drink: Di chhu di t'ung-wai dhōndhu, yakpo é yó'?

- A snow-slip is descending: Khá-ru chí' bhap-ki-du'.
- Ice, snow, boulders all from above: Yá-t'ok-ne khyak, khau-a, shálma lib!
- Is there any cave near: Tsá-nó fak-p'uk shi é yó'?
- Yonder, yonder; below: P'á-gi, p'ági; má-gi-la!
- Run for your life (i. e., "Running preserve your life.") Gyuk-nai sōn-te shrung!
- There is only rock-shelter—yonder under that boulder-mass: Mempe dhák-kyūb mi du'—p'ági p'ábong-ghi wok-la!
- Run into the cave over there: Hági fak-p'uk nang-la gyuk:
- This is not a cave; we call this "grotto-shelter:" Di-ka p'uk chí' ma re': ghyám-kyip dhenḍe šer.
- I am not at all hurt: Ngárang ye nyam-pa ma jhung.
- With spikes on your boots, you do not slip often: Rang-ghi lham-la kang-dzer dam-pe, māngpo shor-nai gyel-gyu-min.
- Fasten spikes on my boots please: Ngá-i lham-la kang-dzer dam ro jhyi!
- See the Pass-top now: Tandá laptse tō shok.
- Beware of the Pass-poison (poisonous air on passes). Lá-dhuk rikpa ḍim!

Here we are! Hail, hail, to Tr'ur lep jhung! Lhá solle, Lhá the mountain-gods! Victory, sol-lo; Lhá gyal-lo, Lhá gyal-lo!

PAYING AND RECEIVING VISITS.

[On receiving a guest in your own house the orthodox greeting to be uttered to him is: Chhák p'ep ñhü' nang or Chhak p'ep nang chik!—the meaning of the first form being “On arrival and departure salutation springeth forth,” and of the second “On arriving let salutation be given thee!” The correct reply for the visitor to make to this welcome is Lhá yö' (or lá yö') “Sir it is” or “Be it so, Sir.”

To an inferior comer the salutation is Tanda lep song: “Now you have arrived;” (akin to our “Well, so you have come!”) When the visit is a formal one, it is usual for the caller to present a visiting scarf styled jáldar or khátá (lit. khá btags “that which binds the mouth.”) This may be either accepted if the visitor be of average means; or, if he be poor, though the scarves carry the most trifling pecuniary value save in rare instances, it may be returned to him by tying it loosely about his neck; first, however, courteously and graciously receiving it] :—

Is the master at home :	Kusho di ñhu-ki-yö'pe?
He is at home—not at home :	Khong ñhu' yö'—ñhu' me'.
Will his Reverence give me an interview :	Je-tsün-kyi dö'dhu chug-ghá?
His Reverence does not receive to-day :	Dhe-ring Je-tsün-kyi dö'dhu mi chuk.
Announce me !	Lön kyur-pa nang!
Pray sit down :	Shü!
Take a seat on the cushion :	Shuten la ñhü!
Take some tea :	Soljhá ñhei nang.

Thank you, Sir :	Lhá t'ukje! (often heard as t'orje).
Bring the tea-pot here :	Ts'ur-la sō' bing dī khur shok!
Do you drink tea or beer :	Chhang soljhá khyōrang-ghī ghang t'ung-gyu-yimpe?
Place the broth on the stove :	T'ukpa dī jhālang-la śhók.
Is your sacredness quite well :	Je-tsiün Lhá-yi kham dé lā-sam?
I am quite well, are you well :	Dák yé-demo; nyi' demo é yō'?
Sir, I am :	Lhá, lā-so.
Take tea, Sir :	Kusho, soljha śhei!
Many thanks, Sir :	Lhá, t'uk-je chhé (pr. t'orje-chhe).
Take more tea :	Soljhá dhá-rung śhei ro.
I have enough :	Ngá-la tá-yong lā-so.
Have you come alone :	Nyi'rang shráng-shráng la é yong?
From where have you come :	Khyō' ghá-ne lep jhung!
I must go now :	Tanda ngárang ḡo-ren du'.
Now pray dismiss me :	Tanda gong-pa nang ro.
Farewell (lit. "Be happy!")	De-war śhu shik!
Grant me your protection!	Ku-yi kyab-tu ngembu-la nang ro! (ngembu depreciative title for "me.")
Please come again soon :	Yang gyō-po p'ep ro nang!
Many thanks, Sir :	Lhá, t'ukje chhe ("t'orje-chhe.")
Accept this scarf :	Khátak dī śhei ro nang!
Come again and again :	Yang-kyár-yang p'ep!
May we meet again next year : (on parting for indefinite period).	Sáng-pō' jdl-wa chhok!
Visitor: I wish you farewell :	Wona ghále ku śhu nang.
Host: Well; go gently :	Woná ghále p'ep!

N. B.—It is etiquette in Tibet, before leaving the room after a visit of ceremony, to empty any tea left in your tea-cup into the shá-luk or slop-basin standing on the low table.

COOKING AND DOMESTIC UTENSILS.

Sol-dong : a churn of hollow bamboo used for compounding tea with soda and butter previous to boiling. Instead sometimes the butter is put direct into each tea-cup afterwards.

Dong-mong or Do-mong : a large tea-churn, made of two half-logs hollowed out and coopered into a barrel-form with willow twigs.

Khok-chhen ; or Sol-sang : tea-kettle of copper, somewhat urn-shaped with handle on either side but no spout, in which the tea ingredients, after churning, are boiled.

Jhámbing, or Sol-bing : brass tea-pot with spout and lid, as with us, into which the tea is ladled from the urn for pouring into cups.

Khok-t'il : another name for a tea-pot.

Sing-ts'ál : tea-pot of another shape, in use in Tsang province ; often made of red or black pottery.

Tibril : round tea-pot, as styled in Lahul and Ladak.

Dzámbing : earthenware tea-pot.

Jhábtuk : stirring-stick for tea while boiling in sang-bhu.

Mé-kyok : fire or charcoal shovel.

Sol-t'um : ladle for transferring tea from urn to tea-pot.

Jhá-ts'ak ; or shi-ma : tea-strainer made of very fine split bamboo or cane.

P'orpa : cups or bowls of various kinds of wood, box-tree and vine-root, (but maple-knot the most valuable), used for tea, soup, and all food, generally carried in coat-pocket (p'orshuk).

Bü'pa : bellows. (In Tsang: Bi'pa.)

T'árbak : iron plate for food.

T'ertter : dish for meats.

Rák-t'um : large brass ladle.

Dhok-le : large open iron pot with handles, used for cooking victuals.

Chák-mak : tinder and steel.

Sang-bhu : general term for copper degchies, tinned inside.

Már-páru : round tin butter-box.

Ohhye-kyal : flour-bag.

Tsám-khuk : tsamba-bag.

Chhu-t'am : large metal ladle for getting water at springs.

Dzá-ma : ghara, or clay vessel for holding meal, water, &c.

Láng-gá : iron pan in which to parch barley for tsamba.

Sam : wooden cask or barrel.

Chhubšom : wooden pail with lid for conveying water on back up hills.

ARTICLES OF FOOD.

Tám-ba : barley-meal, prepared by first parching the grain and then grinding it into flour more or less coarse.

Pák : porridge made by soaking tsamba in hot-tea, and often as thick as dough.

Sam : the meal soaked in beer or hot-water instead of in tea, kneaded into large tough balls and eaten warm or cold.

Pá'-lep : this mass made very thick and with the addition of ginger and aconite as yeast, baked into flat-cakes.

Chur-ra : a sort of flat cheesy maccaroni, made by boiling down milk into a curdy mass and drying it; a little flour being often introduced. Often in granulated masses.

Khur-wa : cakes fried in fat, made of various meals.

Gyá-khur : Chinese cakes fried in oil.

Bá-chí : cake made of maize meal.

Mo-mo or mok-mo : pastry-puffs in which is enclosed minced meat and chopped vegetables, sometimes sugar also.

Khabse or Shé-to : flour and fat rolled into pastry of worm-like form, coiled into cakes of different shapes and baked.

Tr'e-tse : vermicelli made of millet.

T'uk-pa : general term for broth made either from meat or, like gruel, only from meal-stuffs.

Gyá-t'uk : "Chinese broth"—a more substantial soup, being chur-ra and onions cooked up in meat-broth.

Pá't'uk : broth thickened with barley.

T'uk-t'ál : barley-meal first boiled in meat-broth and, when strained out from the broth, then roasted on an iron-plate; hence styled "soup-dust."

Sá-t'uk : soup made from a pungent wild vegetable, nearly as hot as the chilli.

Dái-t'uk : rice and meat soup.

Dai-tám: rice parched and ground.

Yák-shá: yak-beef (usually boiled).

Luk-shá: mutton (usually boiled).

Rá-shá: goat-mutton.

P'ák-shá: pork.

Bo-ts'il: bacon.

Shá-chuk: meat cut in strips and dried.

Gyu-ma, or gyu-ma kárgyang: sausages, or even the intestines cooked, as every part of an animal is consumed in Tibet.

P'ákro and Lukro: carcasses of pigs and sheep roasted whole in their skins and sold thus for drying. The meat becomes hard and brittle and will keep for more than a year in the severe cold; the carcasses being gradually eaten.

P'ing-shá: curried meat, sold dried on small skewers of wood.

Kúm-chhin: liver.

Ts'ilku: fat.

Shá ts'ilms': lean meat.

Dámchá: duck.

Khyimchá: fowl.

Wo-ma: milk.

Már: butter. ("Some people have a supply of butter 50 years' old, laid by in their houses, sewn up in sacks and skins; this is produced with great pride on special occasions, as the oldest wine is brought out at European banquets:—"Moravian Mission Report).

Chyema kára: sugar (refined).

Bhu-ram: brown sugar sold in cakes.

Gong-ngá: eggs.

Chu-li: apricots dried and stoned; staple winter food in Western Tibet.

Ngári kham-bhu: name of these in East Tibet.

Chu-li t'uk: soup of dried apricots.

Chu-li tághir: boiled apricots mashed into pulp, made into cakes and then dried.

Dai chu-li: apricots with boiled rice.

Wosé tághir: mulberries, dried, pulverised, and made into cakes.

Lá-pu': the white radish; a popular vegetable in Tibet—baked, or finely-grated in soup.

Nyungma: turnip (greatly prized).

Sho-ko: ordinary Tibetan potato.

To-ma : very small red sweet potato.

P'iling kyiu : English potato.

Choma : creeping fern-like plant with self-rooting runners and extensive system of roots underground bearing small tubercles. These are dug up and much prized as food. See Huc. Potentilla anserina.

Tsöng : onions.

Petse : cabbage.

Kung-lápuk : carrot.

Te-ma : peas.

Mamoipe Loto : maize.

Khálo : spinnach.

Túrgha : walnuts.

Debu : apple.

Kyerpa : barbery.

PREPARING AND EATING FOOD.

Place the stove down here :

Jhá-lang dhe di-pa p'áb shik.

Place the pot on the stove :

Sáng di jhá-lang tang-la shok.

Make the fire burn brightly :

Me di f'ol-le f'ol-le par chuk.

Throw wood on the fire :

Shing me-la luk !

What have we to eat :

Ngá-la íá-wai chhir-tu ghang e yó' ?

Go and buy some fish :

Chhyin-nai nya nyo shok.

Here are minced-meat and bread :

Tanda mo'mo' pá'lep du'.

I have bought a whole dried carcass :

Ngá shá-khak ghang-gá nyo-pa-yin.

You have bought too much meat :

Khyó'-kyi shá háchang mangpo nyo du'.

Where is the saucepan :

Sang-bu dhe ká-pa yó'.

How many plates have we :

Ngá-la derma ghá-ts'ó yin ?

The copper-pot has become dented :

Sang di dip song.

Boil eight eggs :

Gong-nga gye' kol shik !

Is the tea-kettle full :

Sol-šang tem-tem (or ghang) yó' pai ?

Clean out the tea-pot and make fresh tea in the tea-kettle :

Khok-t'íl di tui-ne sol-šang-la jhá sarpa šó shí'.

Blow up the fire again :

Me dhe yáng-kyar p'u gyop !

- Fetch more fuel : Pū-shing yáng-kyar khur shok.
- I want milk and sugar : Ngárang-la woma chyéma kára gō yō.
- We Tibetans always mix butter in tea : Pō'pá ngá-íha dhui-gyēn jhá-la ſar ſe-gñi-yō.
- Make the tea in the usual way : Dhái-gyün nangtar jhá di jhyi (jhyi is pr. chí).
- Bring bowl and stirring-stick : P'orpa jhá-b-ſuk khur shok.
- Pray don't let the water boil over on the hearth : T'áb-la chhu di lü' ma chuk ro jhyi (pr. chí or chyí).
- The milk has boiled-over : Woma lü' song
- Then put butter on the hearth and say at once what I tell you : Dhe-ne t'ab-la kar-sur tong ; ngá khyō-la ſer-wa nangtar dhe tanda ſ'ellu lap chí (kar-sur = mar).
- Say like this : "O hearth-god, don't be angry; I didn't know!" Dinde lap : "T'ab-lha, gong-pa ma t'um ; ngai ma sha."
- Give me Chinese broth : Gyá-t'uk nang chik.
- Remove the saucepan lid : Sang-bhu-i khep sang chik.
- Skim off the dirty grease on the surface : Kha-tok-la numtsi tsok yap chik.
- Throw salt in the broth : Ts'á t'ukpa-la táb (or luk).
- Is the barley-meal broth ready : Pá't'uk ſ'al-ghik é jhung (pr. often t'alti é chung).
- It is spoiled : Dhe sáng jhung.
- Cut up the meat into bits : Shá di tsáp tsáp jhyi. (tsab-pa : to mince).
- Cut the mutton and put it in the pot : Luk-shá di t'upné, sang-na luk.
- Is it hot enough : Yong-su ts'á-po yō'pe ?
- There is not enough milk : Wo-ma ſhang ma song.
- Is it sweet or not : Dhe ſhimpo é-yō' w'é-yō'.
- Fill the tea-pot with water to the brim : Khok-t'i(l) nang-la chhu dhak-dhak ghang ghyong (or luk).
- What is there to eat : Ghang íá-wa ?

Please give me some :	Ngá-la ká-she nang roch.
Is it good to eat :	Di íá-na yá'po yó'-pai ?
The dried meat is old and brittle ; I can powder it :	Shá-chuk nying kok-chen re' : nga íhibmo jhe' t'up.
Powdering it, pour hot water on it :	Dhe íhibmo ío-ne, chhu ts'ápo luk tang.
This is old meat : it is not bad :	Di-ni shá nying-pa du' : ákpo mindu'.
Tibetans do not eat ducks :	Pó'pa yá-tse to íá-ghi mé'.
Englishmen are fond of fish-flesh and fowl-flesh : Tibetans not !	P'íling-pa nyá-shá jhyá-shá la gá-ghi-du' ; Pó'pa mindu'.
Soak the liver in water :	Chhinpa pang-ne ího' (ཞིལ་པ་)
This hard dry liver is very bitter :	Chhinpa kyong kem di klá-po re'.
No matter ! no matter !	(In Tsang) mi-to', mi-to' ! (In Lhasa) khye'mi yó', khye' mi yó' !
I can't eat it :	Ngá di-la íá ma chok.
Are you hungry : I am not hungry :	Khyó' tok-ghi re'-ta ? Dúk-la to-pa tok-ghi mindu'.
Eat more butter : it has not become rancid :	Dharung má'r ío : di-la hamdi gyap ma jhung.
In taste this is sweet :	Di dho-wa-la (བྱེ་བ་ལ་) ngar-mo du'.
Boil the fish and put salt with it into the water :	Nyá kol (or kü) ; chhu-i nang-na di nyampo ts'á luk-ne.
Always fry the eggs in good butter :	Gong-nga má'r sáng-la dhui-gyün sek jhyi.
We have no salt :	Ngá-la ts'á mé'.
Fill the pak into that skin :	Gyu-má-i bug-la pák gyang íhik.
The pak is like dough :	Pák di kyoma dhang da-te re'.
Is the Chinese broth savoury :	Gyá-t'uk dhe dho-wa íhimpo yó'pai ?

Peel the potatoes :	Sho-ko di pákpa shu íhi'.
Parch the barley-grain and then grind into flour and make tsampa :	Nai lam-ne chhyé-mar t'ak dhang tsamba ger chik.
I want fresh milk :	Ngá-la wómá sarpa goi yó'.
What is the price of milk :	Wómá-i rin ghá ts'ó ?
The soup is very weak :	T'ukpa háchang lá-po du'.
Put a piece of that butter in the leaf with a spoon :	Shompa-la mār di-yi dhumbu chi' t'urma-ne sho'.

OVER THE KANGLACHHEN PASS BETWEEN WALLUNG AND TIBET.

[The Kanglachhen and the Tipta Passes are the two principal mountainous gateways out of Eastern Nipal into Tibet. The former is much used by the colony of Tibetans and Limbus settled in the Wallung Valley; and it was over this Pass, which is 17,000 feet at its apex, that Sarat Chandra Dás gained access to Tibet in 1882. Sir J. D. Hooker approached but did not ascend the Pass] :—

The weather is clear : we will go up quickly toward the Pass :	Nam dhángpo du' : ngá-ts'ó La di t'e-kyá la gyokpo fo-gyu yin.
Where are my snow-shoes :	Ngarang-ghi kang-hlam di ghá- pa yó' ?
Help me to descend this decli- vity :	Tak-šarpo di t'engla fo-gyu ro- ram nang.
Take care ! It is very slippery :	Rik-pa ñim ! De'ták shor-ghi re'.
Don't fall !	Gyel ma chuk !
I was very nearly falling :	Ngá tiktse min-na gyel-šap-yin.
That gorge must be 2,000 or 3,000 f'uma deep : (1 f'uma = 18 inches) :	Gyá-ser di kyi ting ts'e la f'uma tong nyi tong sum jál-gyu yin.
This path runs along the face of the cliff ; you will not fall :	Lamkhá di dhák-šar kyi dong dong . la gyu-kin-du' ; khyó' iák mi yong.

- There! you can see the corner of the rock : Pa-gi! qhak-ghi khuk di t'ong chok.
- At that corner the path turns to the right and ascends : Khuk dhe la lamkha di ya-na kor-ne dzek yin.
- Where is the bridge across this ravine : I don't see it : Dhok-po-i bhar-nangla sampa di gha re' ngarang mik ta-wa mi chok.
- The bridge has broken : Sampa dhe chhak song.
- If you collect twigs and dung, we can light a fire : Khyo' kam-shing bang-kam du yong na, me dhu-pa chok yong.
- Look at that long plain of snow : Khau-a-i t'ang ring-po dhe la toi shok!
- It must be a glacier : Ghangchen chi' chung goi.
- What is the name of that river yonder? Do you know? P'a-gi chhu-wo dhe kyi ming gha ser? Khyo' she-sam?
- It is the Yungma; the great river of the Wallung Valley: Yungma ming di ser yo'; chhu chhempo di Walung-ghi lung-pa-yi du'.
- The upper part of the valley is full of snow : Di p'u di khau-a tem-tem chung.
- Don't tread there; the snow is quite soft : Te-la ma dul; khau-a di bol-bol du'.
- Ah, to be sure! It is a deep crevasse full of snow : Kye, te-ka yo'! Khau-a-ne tem-tem-khen ser-kha tang-ring chi' du'.
- Fresh snow has not fallen on the pass : La-i tang-la khau-a sarpa bap ma chung.
- This long ridge of snow is called Chang Chhup Gyalam : Kang-sam ring-po di Chang Ohhup Gya-lam ser chung.
- There is no path across the ridge : Kang-sam kyi bhar-nang-la lam-kha min du'.
- Never mind; mount on my back : Mitok! Nge gyap-la dzok.
- Can you bear my weight? Be careful! Don't slip : Khyo' nge jig-ta'e khyer chok-ka. Bik sim! Shor ma gyap!

Hark! what is that noise?	Nyen chi! ōur-ḡa di kang du'.
An avalanche is rolling down into the gorge below:	Kha-ru chi mǎ-ki-ru gya-ser kyī t'eng-la bap-ki du'.
We have now left Chang Ch-hup Gya-lam. This rock is named Dzáma Nákmó:	Tanda ngǎ-cha' Ohang Ohhup Gya-lam náí gyu song (or tang ghye song). Tak di la ōing di Dzáma Nákmó ōer yō'.
How far is it from here to P'ug-pa Karmo?	Di-ne P'ukpa Karmo-la t'dk ring-t'ung ghǎ ts'o du'?
Are you tired?	Khyō' t'ang-chhe song-nga?
We can take shelter there:	P'á-gi-la kyīb nyō' chok.
I am very tired:	Ngǎrang háchang t'ang-chhe-so.
You proceed to Kanglachhen from P'uk-pa Karmo in a due east direction:	P'ukpa Karmo-ne Kangla-chhen t'uk chhyō-shar-la ḡang ḡo.
It is two miles to the head of the pass from P'ug-pa Karmo.	P'ukpa Karmo-ne lap-tse la nyō-ring di pákts'e' nyī jǎl.
That is of no importance:	Di dho-kal min du'.

TIME—AGE—SEASONS.

It is necessary to set forth briefly the Tibetan method of reckoning time; though in all estimates of time past, age, and the date of events, the whole race shew the same inaptitude for which the natives of India are remarkable. There seem to be systems of counting the years from particular eras in the history of the country; but, for the purpose of distinguishing the years within the memory of those living, what is termed a ráb jhung, or cycle, has been invented, which affords distinct denominations for each year in a period of 60 years. As each cycle of 60 years elapses the same series of names are run through again. When, however, a Tibetan informs you such and such an event happened in such a year, naming the year, you can only judge from the context of his speech, or other auxiliary circumstances, whether—for example—he means you to understand a date which is 30, or one which is 90, years ago. The sexagenary cycle has been formed in imitation of the Chinese mode of reckoning; but the Chinese cycle does not exactly correspond with the Tibetan cycle, the latter being said to be 4 years in arrears of the former. In order to form distinctive titles for every year of the sixty composing the cycle, there has been first arranged a set of twelve names to represent a lesser cycle of 12 years, called lo-kor. These which always recur in the same order are the names of 12 different animals or, rather, creatures:—

|------------------------|-------------------------|-------------------------|
| 1. Jhi : Mouse. | 5. Duk : Dragon. | 9. Spre-u : Ape. |
| 2. Lang : Bull. | 6. Dul : Snake. | 10. Jhá : Fowl. |
| 3. Tak : Tiger. | 7. Tá : Horse. | 11. Khyi : Dog. |
| 4. Yos : Hare. | 8. Luk : Sheep. | 12. P'ák : Pig. |

As soon as the 12 years, each named after an animal in the above order, have elapsed, the series re-commences, following the same names, and so on, ad infinitum. However, in order to vary the names so as to produce 60 different titles, another cycle of 10 years is made to run concurrently with the duodenary series. The 10-year cycle is composed of the names of five elements, each repeated twice, once with the masculine affix po, and once with the feminine mo:—

- | | |
|----------------------------|-----------------------------|
| 1. Shing-po : Wood. | 6. Sá-mo : Earth. |
| 2. Shing-mo : Wood. | 7. Chák-po : Iron. |
| 3. Me-po : Fire. | 8. Chák-mo : Iron. |
| 4. Me-mo : Fire. | 9. Chhu-po : Water. |
| 5. Sá-po : Earth. | 10. Chhu-mo : Water. |

The po or mo is generally dropped; and these names are combined in the following manner with the duodenary series. The two cycles begin simultaneously, the first-named element being conjoined with the first-named animal to denominate the first year; the second element in the list (which, however, is the same as the first-named) being next conjoined with the second-named, a different, animal; and so on. Thus we have:—1. Wood-mouse year; 2. Wood-bull year; 3. Fire-tiger year; 4. Fire-hare year: and so forth.

It is obvious that the 10-name series will be exhausted before the 12-name series. It is, however, at once re-commenced, the first element being conjoined to the 11th animal, the same being also conjoined to the 12th animal, which as both series run on concurrently causes fresh combinations. Variations for 60 years are thus produced, when, the 10-year scale having run exactly six times, and the 12-year scale exactly five times, they both once again commence together, forming the same sets of combinations as in the sixty years just concluded. The ráb-jhung, or sexagenary cycle, now in progress in Tibet commenced in the year 1863; in which year the 10-year and 12-year series began together. Accordingly we have for the approaching years the following titles whereby they may be discriminated:—

1893:	Shing Tá Lo:	Wood-Horse Year.
1894:	Shing Luk Lo:	Wood-Sheep Year.
1895:	Me Téu Lo:	Fire-Monkey Year.
1896:	Me Jhyá Lo:	Fire-Fowl Year.
1897:	Sá Khyi Lo:	Earth-Dog Year.
1898:	Sá P'ák Lo:	Earth-Pig Year.
1899:	Chák Jhi-wa Lo:	Iron-Mouse Year.
1900:	Chák Lang Lo:	Iron-Bull Year.
1901:	Chhu Tá k Lo:	Water-Tiger Year.
1902:	Chhu Yos Lo:	Water-Hare Year.
1903:	Shing Duk Lo:	Wood-Dragon Year.
1904:	Shing Dul Lo:	Wood-Snake Year.
1905:	Me Tá Lo:	Fire-Horse Year.
1906:	Me Luk Lo:	Fire-Sheep Year.

Another system of nomenclature, slightly different from the foregoing, is occasionally employed, wherein the 10-year cycle is composed not of the elements twice repeated, but of the five primary colours: karpo (white), nákpo (black), marpo (red) serpo (yellow), and ngömpo (blue), together with the names of five secondary colours which are considered shades of the first. These are combined in the same way with the twelve names of animals to form as in the other case a 60-year's cycle. Mention is also sometimes heard of a lengthy cycle of 252 years, supposed to be used in the chief monasteries for chronological records. The Lo-t'o, or kalendar, is a very abstruse affair in Tibet, little understood even by men of ordinary learning.

Tibetans apportion the year into lunar months (dá-wa), corresponding with the re-appearances of the moon, and reckoning ordinarily only twelve months to the year. This system would cause the commencement of each new year to occur some ten or eleven days earlier than its predecessor. However, in order to obviate the continuous travelling back of the opening day of the year, every third year an intercalary month, styled dá-t'eb, is inserted, which serves to bring the lunar year into some settled correspondence with the solar year. New Year's Day, or the first day of the first month, is made to occur some time in our month of February according to the date when the new moon is first visible to the naked eye. In 1891, the Tibetan New Year opened on February 11th, which was the first day of the first month and the beginning of the Great Festival of Logzo. Taking the kalendar for 1891, therefore, the months of the Tibetan year may be thus set forth, with the customary names and day of commencement of each month during 1891-92 :—

1891 :

(1)	Feb.	11th	{ Dá-wa dhangpo ; Tá-pa dá-wa :	First Month. Horseman Month.
(2)	March	12th	{ Dá-wa nyi-pa ; Bo dá-wa :	Second Month. Blossoming Month.

[When the native explorer A.—K.— visited, in the year 1880-81, the northern parts of Tibet, he brought back word of the marvellous profusion of game of the larger kinds to be found roaming over the steppes of the Jángt'ang. Mr. Hennessey in the official report thus summarises the explorer's information:—"The Jángt'ang is a vast and marvellous expanse of high undulating land only some 100 miles broad to the west near Skardo; it is widest on the meridian of 86° where it is some 500 miles across, and to the east it ends in an inclined width of some 350 miles, from whence it slopes further eastwards, rapidly losing its characteristics and merging into the cultivated lands of China. Its length is about 1,500 miles, and in area it is some 480,000 sq. miles This enormous tract of high table-land is believed to be generally some 15 or 16 thousand feet above sea-level... The whole Jángt'ang is coated by a short succulent grass, which from May to August, covers the undulations with the softest of green carpets, extending far away and visible for even 50 or 60 miles in the clear crisp atmosphere prevailing. But beyond the abundant grass, nothing else will grow on this high land; there is no wood or scrub of any kind for fuel; and, in a word, the products of the earth are solely suited for graminivorous animals, which run wild in enormous numbers, as the yák, goat, sheep, deer, &c; and the weaker of these provide food for the wolf, jackal, and yi (lynx). It is said the grass does seed, and most probably is propagated chiefly by that means; but other seeds, as of wheat or barley, though they germinate and produce fodder for cattle, yield mainly seedless ears, and hence no food for man The vast number of wild animals of the Jángt'ang sufferer diminution from one cause only—the occasional extreme severity of winter, when, deprived of grass, they die by thousands, as their skeletons testify."]

The gun is not loaded :	Me-dá di dse-me re'.

Lukpa! where are you :	Wá Lukpa! Khyörang ghá re'?
Here? what is it, Sir :	Diru! lá lá-sám?

- Be ready with the cartridges : Médsé shup dhe f'álti shák?
 If I miss it, there will be a struggle for life : Ngárang-ghi di-la mí khó-ná
 ("if I don't hit it"), sok dhang tondá jhung gyu re'.
- Sir; I hold my life cheap (lit: "do not see my life"): Kusho; nge sok-la mik tá-ghi-mé'.
 Bears live on that slope : Dhe-mo-ts'o dher gang-khá-la dō-ghi yō'.
- What is the name of that bird? I don't know; I forget : Jhyá di-la míng ghang ser?
Shen-ghi ma re'; ngárang jo'-ghi re'.
- Pick that up; I want it : Dhe ruk chik! ngá-la kho-jhe yō'.
- We must climb up the torrent-bed : Ngácha dhoksar-la shō'ne dsek go.
 Hold on to the tree! take care : Shing di dzin : rikpa qim?
 I am slipping down : Shō'dhu qe'ták shor-ghi-yō'.
 Throw down the powder-flask : Dze-khu' dhe t'engla yuk chik.
 Let it fall gently : Di jám-jám gyér nang.
 I want help: give me your hand : Boram goi-pa : ngá-la lák sing tong.
- There is no grass: the plain is quite bare : Tá mé' : t'áng di t'er t'er du'.
- Do you ever see wild yáks on this plain : T'áng di la dū re shi' dong qa t'ong ki du' ka?
 I have never seen yáks here : Ngáráng-gi di-ru dong t'ong ma nyong.
- Many wild yáks are found beyond that lake yonder : P'á-gi ts'o dhe p'en-chhe dong máng-po nye chung.
 Do you see those trees on the opposite side of the valley : Khyō' shing-ts'o dhe lung-pá-i p'ar-khá t'ong-ká?
 Look further on: you will see three go-wa deer : P'ar-taam toi shok : khyō-kyi go-wa sum t'ong yong.
 Beyond the three go-wa are six nyen : Go-wa sum di p'enchhe nyen tuk yō'.
 I see them: until now I did not notice them. Ngá dhe-la mik t'ong : dhá-ta p'en dhe-la jhá-ra ma jhe'.

Look again: take heed:	Lok-te tō shok: nyōn chik!
Look out! where are you going:	Rik dim! kapa ḡo-ghi yin!
Drag the body to the river-side:	Chhu-yi ḡam-tu ro di t'en song.
Can you skin it:	Pakpa di shu ts'uk-ká?
Work carefully:	Ohágha láika jhyi' chik!
Collect dry dung and burtse, and light a fire:	Bang-kám burtse t'u-ne me ḡhuk shi'.
Where is the tinder-case.	Mé-chák-khuk di ḡhá re'?

SHOPPING IN LHA'SA'.

Where can I buy books:	Pe-chhá-ts'o ḡhá-pa nyo t'up yong-ngá?
Book-vendors remain standing near the western gate of Chokhang:	Pe-chhá-ts'ongpa Oho-khang-ghi nup-gyá-go tsá-nái táng-te de'.
Do they sell printed books:	Pár-ma ts'ong-ghi-re'?
They sell both printed books and Manuscripts:	Pár-ma yik-chha nyi-pa ts'ong-ghi re'.
I want to buy the Pe'ma Tang Yik of Pe'ma Jungnái and the Pönpo book Lu Bum Karpo:	Pe'ma Jungnái-kyi Pe'ma Tang Yik di dhang Pön-kyi pe-chhá Lu Bum Karpo nyo kho-wa yō'.
I have the first book; the second is not sold publicly in Lhasá:	Ngá-la pe-chhá dhangpo di yō'; nyi-pa di Lhasá-la á-sál-la ts'ong ghi ma re'.
What price do you ask for Gyal-rabs Sal-wai Me-long:	Gyá-ráp Salwa Mělong-ghi rin ḡhá ts'ō lap-ki yō'.
I want twenty Gáldan ṭangka:	Ngárang-la Gúnden ṭangka nyi-shu ḡōi-pa.
Will you please abate the price:	Khyō'rang khe-ru song ro dze'.
Sir, I have fixed (lit: "cut") the price; I cannot abate:	Kusho; rin di chō pa yin; khe-ru ḡo mi ts'uk.
You are outwitting me:	Khyō'rang-ghi ngá-la ḡok long.

- I never cheat; we do not throw abuse like that in Lháśá: Ngárang lui ma nyong; Lháśá- la khá-ts'ok dhenđe ma gyák.
- You fix the price too high: Di gong háchangne chō-ki-yō.
- I will lessen the price one tangka: Ngárang tangka chí' kho-ru dō-

- Taking the price, give me the book, please: Gong dhe len-te, ngárang-lá pe-chha nang ro nang.
- Where are the tea-shops; kindly show me: Jhá-i ts'ong-khang ghá re'; ten ro nang.
- Tea is sold in the market: T'om-la jhá ts'ong-wa.
- What kinds of tea have you: Jhá rik ghang yō'pe?
- Various kinds; all that are necessary: Ná-so-so; t'amche kho-jhe yō.
- What sort is this tea: Jhá di rik ghang é yō'?
- What is the weight of the brick: Párká-yi dek-khá ghá ts'ō'?
- The full weight of this kind: Di rik-kyi dek-khá ts'angma yō.
- What do you call that tea: Dhe sol-jhá-i ming-la ghang ser?
- This tea, Sir, is the best; it is named Du-t'ang No. 1: Kusho, soljha dhe angki t'eb-bo yō (lit: "that tea, it is the thumb," i.e., best); ming di Du-t'ang angki dhangpo ser jhung.
- The price is one shrang and two tangka each brick: Párka re-re-lá shrang chí' dha- rung tangka nyí di rin di re'.
- That other tea is Du-t'ang No.
2; that is the second class: Jhá shemma Du-t'ang angki nyí-pa re'; dhe rik nyí-pa re'.
- The third kind is called Gyepa; and the worst is Goka: Bik sumpa di Gye'pa ser yō'; dhang t'á-ma di Goka re'.
- Show me, please, the way to the Nipalese merchants: Pá'po-i ts'ong-mi-la lam ten ro nang.
- They live in T'om-si-ghang near Wangdu chhörten: Dhe-ts'o T'om-si-ghang-la wang dhu chhörten tsónai dō-ki-re'.
- What merchandize do they sell: Dhe-ts'o ts'ong-zok ghang ts'ong wa?
- They sell vases, ornaments and bells; they are the goldsmiths and iron mongers of Lhá-sá; they are skilled artificers and make the large gilt-copper domes and gya-p'ik for temples:

Turn to the left; now see the Palpo workshops!

Over each door is a round red mark and under the red circle is a white crescent: you enter thus—beneath those low narrow door-ways, down three or four steps:

Some of these Nipalese are chemists and some are dyers:

This is a gold-worker's shop; enter and see what he sells:

Sir, salaam; what can this humble one do for your worship:

I want a golden charm-box with turquoise and pearls:

Here is what you want: See upon it what kind of turquoises there are! six "yu-p'uk" the most precious sort, and many of the good kinds of turquoise "t'ukmar" and "t'uk-kar." Here also are coral beads. All these are the thumb. No bad ones at all:

- Excellency: fourteen sho: Will you dye this pulo red: Kusho; sho chubshi. Kyó'kyi t'erma di marpo ts'oi gyak-gyu-re'.
- Only Tibetan cloth is legally permitted to be dyed: T'im-la Pó'kyi t'ruk kar-kyang ts'oi gyak chhok.
- Where do the Kashmiri merchants live? Khá-chhe ts'ong-pa di gháru de' pa?
- Their shops are very fine; there is nothing that is not collected together there: Dhe-yi ts'ong-khang dze-bo chhe re'; dher dzompa me'pa chik kyang me'.
- You can buy poultry, eggs, fruit, and tsampa at the Wangdu-siga market: T'om Wang-dhu-siga la khyim-jhya gong-do, shing-t'ok, tsampa, nyo ts'uk.
- This sheep is plump: Luk di ts'ómpo re'.
- Your servant will buy mutton at the Gya-gyo-wak-sha market: Nys'kyi yokpo Gya-gyo-wak-shá f'om-la lukshá nyo yong.

VISIT TO KIN-KHOR-DING.

[This is one of the appellations of the principal temple in Lhá-sá; but the place is also known familiarly as Cho-khang or the "Lord's House." Sarat Chandra Dás describes it fully under this name in his secret Report (unpublished as yet); whilst the Survey explorer A. K. alludes to it thus: "In the centre of the city stands a very high square temple called Jhio, the roof of which is covered with golden plates. The images in it are numerous, but the most important of these are of Jhio Sáksia Muni and of Palden Lhámo. The idols are richly inlaid with gold and precious stones, and have various ornaments round their necks"]:—

- To-day the Nirvana month begins: Dhe-ring Sá-gá-dáwa di jhung ("arises").
- To-day the Lord Buddha became Bhagawan: Dhe-ring-la Jho-wo Sáng-gyai di Chomendai ñub jhung.
- All persons will go to the Cho-khang to do homage to the precious lord: Kye-wo kün Cho-khang-la ño-nai, Jho-wo Rim-pochhe-yi ñháb-la ku-rim dze-yong. Or: Kün Jho-wo Rim-pochhe-yi ñháb-la ku-rim dze'pai dhön-dhu Cho-khang-la ño-gu-yin.
- Let us go early: Ngá-sar ño-gyu-yin.
- There will be a great crowd: Tom chhem-po chí' ts'o yong.
- What shall we take with us: Ngáchá-la chhá ghang khyer-wá;
- Everybody is taking incense-sticks: Kün-kyi poi-rengbhu len-gñi-du'.
- Anything else: Dhárung yó'dham?
- They are carrying bowls of butter for the sacred lamps; also scarves of various kinds: Már-me-yi dhön-dhu márchén-kyi p'orpa dhárung khá-tá ná-ts'o-ts'o khyer-gñi re'.

We will withdraw from the throng and go up this lane :

Mi-ts'ok dhang ghye-nai lamshrang di ghyen-la do-gyu-yin.

Now we are near the Cho-khang :

*Dháta Chokhang-ghi tsdnuai lep-
song.*

Do you see yon tall poplar :

Há-gi sho'po ringpo di t'ong chog-ghá ?

Well ! what is it :

Yákpo ! Ghang é du' ?

That poplar grows up from the sacred hair of Buddha lying beneath it :

Dhe wok-la Jho-woi tá-dho-ker kur tang ihu-pai, sho'po di f'ung jhung.

And do you see that column
there :

Pá-gi do-ring dhe-la t'ong-ghá ?

Tell me what it means :

Dhe ghang yin ngá-la she'.

That column is a memorial of the victory by Tibetans over the Chinese :

Pō'pa-yi Gyá-nák-pa la jóm-pa-i wang-dhu shor-na je-do shik doring dhe lang-nai de'.

Behold the portico of the Cho-khang ! We will enter :

Cho-khang-ghi ka-chen-kyi gyágo di toi-shik ! Nang-la dogyu-yin.

First, we enter the Tí-tsang-khang :

*Ngün-la Tí-tsang - khang - ghi
- nang-la ihug-ghin-du'.*

Now the image-keeper comes ;
he will explain everything :

*Dhá-tá ku-nyer di yong-ghi-re' ;
khorang kün she'-yong.*

This one is the famous image of the most precious lord (Buddha) :

Di-ká Jho-wo Rimpochhe-yi ku-ten rák-chen di yó'.

This image here is not the representation of him as Buddha : in this figure he is only 12 years old ; and therefore you see a young prince but not the Victorious
One Perfected :

Di ku-ten di Sang-gye-kyi yib ma re' : di yib-la khung (for khorang) lo chu-nyi ting-la mempé mi yong ; dhende gyálshrái ihön-nu shik t'ong rung, Chomdendai di t'ong-ghi-me'.

See you ; the face is remarkably beautiful :

Nyi-rang ši shik ! Ser-ihál ("the golden face," honorific for ihál) di nyam-ts'árua re'.

Yonder stands the image of Tsong-khápa. Beside him has been placed the fossil rock named Amolonkha :

Why is that piece of rock
there ; and what is that bell upon it :

Tsongkhápa discovered that rock himself in a cavern ; and that bell is the bell which was used by Mongalputtra :

Over there in that chapel you see the blessed eleven-faced Chenresi :

That figure was made at the command of King Srong-tsan-gampo ; and then the king and his four wives having died, their spirits were absorbed into that image :

It is a marvellous image :

Pass into the outer courtyard :

In the courtyard stands the effigy of Tho-wo-me-tsikpa :
further on have been placed Tang-tong Gyal-po, and the lo-tsá-wa Marpa :

Tang-tong Gyalpo lived 60 years in his mother's womb before birth :

But look ! what numbers of mice are running about :

Monks have transmigrated into those mice :

Há-gi-la Tsong-khápa-yi ku-ten di qeng-te dö'. Dhe-tsd-né ghak kampò Amolonkhá dhen-de jhá-wa di shák-ne du'.

*Há-gi p'á-wong dhe ghang-la ten-

*P'uk-pa nangla Teongkhápa nyirang-ghi p'á-wong dhe nye

*P'á-ki lháten-la Chenresi chuchi-

Kye-wái ngen-la Tang-tong Gyal-lo qhuk chu shu-ghi re'.

Yinna-yang toi tang ! tsiki du-du kor-kor gyuk.

*Khor-la ge-long-ts'o ni tsí-ki tern

Upstairs there are other Tsang-khang and other shrines :	Yá-t'ok la Tsáng-khang shen tang kuten shen shá yó'.
What gods shall we see upstairs :	Yá-t'ok la lá ghang shi-gyu ?
In the Bar-khang are Lha-mo Mák-jorma and the god Tamdin :	Bár-khang ki nang-la Mákjorma Lhámo Tamdin Lá shu-so.
Greatest of all, the image of Paldan Lha-mo is above :	Teng-la, ts'angma nangne chhem-po, Pánden Lá-mo shu-so.
Well, well ; we must perform full homage another day :	Yák-po, yák-po ; shák shen la ngá-chák chhó'i-jál yong-su ts'al gó'i.
Yes, Sir :	Lhá, lá-so.
We cannot make the circuit of all at one time :	Ngái tsar-chik la kang-gha-i chhó'i-khor gyu chok-pa me'.
Give some bakshish to the idol-keeper :	Ku-nyer la solrá (or chá-gá) ter nang.

THE SCAVENGER BEGGARS.

There are some scavengers hastening after me :	Tá-tá ro-gya-wa shik ngai jo-la nyek-ki duk.
I will not listen to them :	Ngá dhe-tak la t'ó'i gyu min.
I shall treat them with contempt :	Ngá kho-chák la ngen-chhen teng-gyu-yin-no.
An alms, an alms ; give, give !	Dom-bu, dombu ; ter-nang, ter-nang.
I have nothing to give you :	Ngá khyó'la ter gyu chang me'.
We are very poor men :	Ngáchá wál-p'ongpa re.'
You shall bestow some present :	Khyó' la chá-gá shik chin gó'i.
Get away, you rogues, you vultures :	Há-la gyuk ! ngempa-po khyó' ! chá-lák khyó' !
Give, give ! you are rich :	Jhin ! Jhin ! Khyó' chhuk-po duk.
I shall call the watchmen :	Ngái korchakpa la ke tang-gyu-yin.

- Call, call! you must give one ṭanka:
Rák! Rák! Khyō' la ṭanka chik ter gōi.
- One ṭanka! not even a khá-gang:
Ṭangka chí'! Khá-kang chí' lí-re me'.
- You have been a month in Lháśá, yet there is nothing at all for us:
Dá-wá chí' nai khyō'rang Lháśá-la p'ep rung ngá-ts'o-la chang me'.
- Who cares! Who cares! I shall not give you anything:
A-u-se! á-u-se! Ngá-rang-ghi ye ma ter-gyu-re' (or ye ter-gyn ma re').
- Ah then! wait until we get you (lít: come to us):
Jhyá-ra! ngá-ts'o-la leb-pa t'uk guk-te dō'chik.
- Don't bawl like that, filthy Rogya-pa:
Rogyá-pa ts'ichen! Dhende chá-cho ma gyap.
- All right; listen here! when you are a corpse, tying a rope to your neck we will drag you like a dog outside the gates of the city.
T'ik-t'ik; di-la nyōn shik! Khyōrang ro-ne p'o-wa-la, rang-ghi ke-la t'ákpa chhing-nai, khyi dhang ḡa-te khyōrang ḡhong-khyer-kyi go-mo p'en-chhe' drü' yong.
- We will tear you to pieces:
Chhdak-ṭum-la khyō'rang shral-gyu-re'.
- Come along: these scavengers are indeed the pests of Lháśá:
Nyampo shok: ro-gya-wa di Lháśá-i ngen-rim mō'do.
- They have been bawling away at me:
Khongts'o ngá-rang-la māngpo bár ghi-yō'.
- Where do they live:
Ghá-pa de'-ki-de'?
- They live on the eastern side, beyond Bhanakshol, in houses built of bone:
Shar-chhyok-la, Bhana-sho' p'en-chhe'-la, rui-pá-chen khyim-la nai-ghi-re'.
- Though they dress in rags, they are very rich:
Shrulpo ghyōn rung, kho-la nōr māngpo re'.
- Remember it is thus said of them:—"Though outside their houses bristle with Sem-la ngei chí'—" P'i-lok-la di khyim di rá-cho-ne tsup-tsup jhung rung; nang-lok-la horns, inside indeed they sparkle with coins." dhekho-na nak-kyang-ne sák edík ts'er" dhendé sung-ghi-yó'.

 Many persons are afraid of the scavengers who are very fierce : Ngar-po-chen yó'pai rogyá-wa di gháchhen-kyi jík jhung.

GOLD PIECES.

Ser-sho = Rupees 9½.
Ser-sáng = Rupees 60.
 (Both coins rarely seen).

N.B.—The common silver fangka coined in Tibet, and known variously as nák-fang, chō'fang, and Genden fangka, is about the size of an English half penny but thinner. The legend on this coin is འཇམ་གྱི་ལྷ་དབང་ལྷན་པོ་བྱང་ཕྱོད་ལས་ It is marked so as to be cut into various pieces; and the khá-ghang, kar-ngá, (i.e., 5 kar-ma), chipchhye' and sho-ghang, are merely the fangka cut or broken into ½, ⅓, ¼, and ⅕ parts respectively. In Kham, the Indian rupee, which is current all over Tibet, is preferred to the fangka, and is styled P'iling gormo. In Sikkim the rupee is termed tiruk, in Ladak girmo, in Central Tibet gyá-fam and chhi-gor. The large silver ingot, styled in Tibet do-ts'e or tá-mí-ma, circulates in Tibet, Turkistan, and Mongolia, yámbhu being the Turki name and kurs the Mongol term. Its value varies, being sometimes as low in Indian currency as Rs. 125.

MEAT MEASURE.

1 gyári = 1 lb.
2 gyári = 1 dum .
2 dum = 1 lhu .
3 lhu = 1 suk .

CORN AND LIQUIDS.

1 chámka = $\frac{1}{2}$ lb or 1 pint.
2 chámka = 1 bre or qhe .
5 bre = 1 bo .
4 bo = 1 khal .
25 khal = 1 bhor-ra .

TEA WEIGHTS.

1 parkhá = 4 to 5 lbs.
4 parkhá = 1 ko-toi .
3 ko-toi = 1 gám .
2 gám = 1 gál or gyáp .

LINEAL MEASUREMENTS.

Pi'to: span between thumb and forefinger stretched without straining.

T'o-ghang: span between thumb and little finger.

Kang-ghang: length from elbow to knuckles.

T'u-ghang: distance from elbow to tip of middle finger.

Domba: distance from finger-tip to finger-tip, both arms outstretched.

(N.B.—A "piece" of Nambhu cloth at Gyantse measures 9 domba or 54 feet).

Gyang-t'ák: distance to which the voice will reach (about 300 yards).

Ts'd-lam: distance traversable before breakfast (about 5 miles).

Nyin-lam: a day's journey; differentiated also into luk-pe nyinlam "a sheep-driver's march" (6 miles); kang-t'ang-ghi nyinlam: "foot-march;" and tá-pe nyin-lam: "a horseman's march" (22 miles).

The Chinese Li of 486½ yards is frequently used in Eastern Tibet.

TITLES, &C., IN TIBET.

Gyálwá Rimpochhé: the Dalai Lama or Grand Lama of Lhá-sá.

Kyáp-gön: "Protector"—familiar designation when speaking of the Grand Lama.

Dési or Sákyong: the Regent or Temporal Ruler of Tibet, who is, however, always an ecclesiastic.

Gyálts'ap Rimpochhé and Gyálpo: popular titles of the Regent, especially in use in the provinces.

Ká-lön : official title of each of the five members of the Privy Council, or kúshák, which advises the Regent in state affairs.

Shá-pé (ཞེས་པ་བད་ "lotus-foot") : other and more popular title of a kálön.

De-wa Jong : popular designation for "the Tibetan Government" or "Grand Lama's jurisdiction."

Kálön-shák Lhen-gyai (བཀའ་ཁྲིམས་གཤམ་གསལ་སྐྱོན་གྱིས་) : the full designation of the Regent's Council, supreme in Judicial, Legislative and Executive Administration.

Kálön-T'i-pa : the Speaker or Chairman of the Council.

Chyi-khyáb Khempo (སྤྱི་བུ་བཀའ་མཁན་པོ་) : the sole ecclesiastical member of the Council (the other four being laymen) who is now the brother of the former Dalai Lama and known as the Lha-lu Tá Lama at Lhásá and also by the Chinese name of Tá Lama.

Ampán ལམ་པ་བཅོད་ : title of the two representatives of Chinese interests at the Court of Lhásá and whose "advice" is of paramount influence at the present day in Tibet.

Panchhen Rimpochhe : the Head Lama of Tashi-lhümpo Monastery and titular temporal ruler of the province of Tsang. He is held to be the incarnation of the 4th Dhyani Buddha, Wö' pákme' (འོད་དབུགས་མེད་)

Géden De-pa Lama : the Head of the Gálden Monastery, said to rank in Ui ecclesiastically next after the Gyalwa Rimpochhe. He is not an incarnate lama, but is nominated, under Chinese influence, ostensibly on the choice of the Kálöns.

Kusho P'ákpa Do-gön : the Head of the Sá-kyá Monastery.

Möd-pa Lama : the Head of the Sera Monastery, near Lhásá.

Dong-pa Lama : the lay co-ruler of Mindol Ling (སྐོན་གྲོལ་གླིང་) the principal Nyingma monastery in Tibet.

Má Rimpochhe: title borne by the Head of the great Jhang Táklung Monastery, 40 miles north of Lháśá.

Chásák: the Regent's secretary or deputy. The Grand Lama has also a Chásák.

Dá lo-ye: ampans' aide-de-camps (two in number).

Ká-ḡhung (འགྲན་པ་): secretaries of the Ká-löns.

T'im-pön-chyi: the Chief Judge of Lháśá from whom appeal lies sometimes direct to the Ká-löns.

Shál-chhe-pa: literally "the Big-faced One;" another Judge.

Chhák-dzō-pa: government Treasurers at Lháśá, five in number to whom the Jongpöns pay in the revenue they collect in the provinces.

Jong-pön: officials, mainly civil but with a limited military control, who govern the various Jongs (རྫོང་) or petty districts into which all Tibet (save in the Jhang-t'ang) is portioned out, collecting revenue, &c.; answering to our "Collectors" in India. Of these there are 53.

Chyi-khyab of Nyá-grong in Khams is the Dalai Lama's Commissioner for the administration of this special portion of the kingdom. He ranks above the 53 ordinary Jong-pöns.

Garpön of Rudok: a special governor of the western districts of Gart'ok and Rudok conjointly.

Dhung-khor-pa: civilian officers; working in Lháśá as subordinates to the Ká-ḡhung or Ka-löns' secretaries, but in the provinces under the Jong-pön, to the office of which they aspire to attain.

Tse-rung-pa: ecclesiastical office-clerks ranking with the foregoing and managing the financial business of very large monasteries

Ser-yik-pa (གསེར་ཡིག་པ་ "golden-letter bearer"): name given to special envoy of the Emperor of China or of the Dalai Lama, bearing presents and formal greetings between the two Courts.

Tulku: any incarnate lama, i. e., a lama holding in his personality the spirit of some departed saint.

Kusho (ལྷན་པོ་ལྷན་པོ་) : title of honour placed before the personal name of a person of position, lay or clerical, male or female.

Rimpochhs : "most precious;" title added after the names of Incarnate lamas and heads of important Gompas; sometimes appended to official designation, sometimes to personal name.

Lhá and Kusho are frequently used in first addressing persons as we should say "Sir" and "My Lord."

Pömbo : also Pömbo Rimpochhs : "Officer!" "most precious chief;" forms of address to Government officials.

Lhácham (ལྷ་མོ་) : female title like our "Lady." It is affixed to the names of the wives and widows of lay notables. Often also used alone when speaking of or to such ladies.

Cham Kusho : honorific female title, but inferior to Lhácham.

Cham-chhung : unmarried ladies' title answering to our "Miss" or perhaps rather "Hon'ble Miss;" as it is only applied to the upper classes.

Lha-yum Kusho : lady dowager.

Khempo (མཁེན་པོ་) : abbot or head of the larger monasteries;

but said to be a Degree attaching personally and not necessarily to the holders of particular offices; perhaps like our D.D.

De-pa (ལྷོ་པ་) : territorial chiefs having feudal authority, but without prejudice to the paramount claims of the Tibetan Government; a common title in Eastern districts where sounded Deba.

T'so-pön (ཚོགས་དཔོན་) : president of the headmen of a set or "circle" of villages, elected by his brother headmen to control the whole khor or circle in its relations with other village circles.

Pi-pön (ཕྱི་དཔོན་) : ordinary headman of a single village.

Gen-po or Gen-sum : village elders who (as in Russia) elect the Pi-pön.

Gerpa : zemindar or land-owner

Mi-ser: tenants of small-holdings, held from monasteries or noblemen or direct from Crown. A numerous class answering to the small farmers in Ireland or crofters in Scotland; but subjected to considerable taxation of produce and with heavy liabilities of personal service (tá-ū and ū-lák).

P'á-pün and P'á-ts'en: in a village, those denizens of it having the same lha or household god.

Ts'e-yok: "life-servants" or slaves, reduced to that condition through gambling or debts, and, occasionally, by capture and purchase.

RELIGIOUS EDIFICES; AND ADJUNCTS THEREOF.

Ling: a large collegiate monastery analogous to the Christian abbey.

Chhoidé: a lamasery where Tantrik and occult studies are specially followed.

Gōmpa (often Gōmba): any ordinary lamasery, large or small.

Shigön: small village gompas with only 3 or 4 inmates in adjacent butas.

Tá-ts'ang: special schools or "chairs" established within the larger monasteries, for the teaching of particular doctrines and generally endowed with property, land, &c.

P'uk: a recluse's cave, often inaccessible to outsiders, and usually such caverns are found together in a colony styled Ri-s'oi. Name also given to any set of hermits' cells, not necessarily caverns.

Ri-s'oi-ba: the dwellers in the P'uk.

Chhörtén: cenotaphs of stone, built upon a series of square steps, and often containing a saint's relics. They follow one general pattern capable of certain modifications and are of all sizes; being mostly small solid masses of masonry; yet in some cases exaggerated into huge structures 8 or 9 storeys high, containing chapels, shrines, images, and relics, as in the fine *chhörtén*s at Gyantse and Jhampa Ling.

Mendang: long narrow heap of inscribed stones banked-up betwixt two low lenthly parallel walls. Sometimes, as in one example at Leh, more than a mile long, and is formed by degrees from every pious traveller, as he passes, depositing a slab inscribed with sacred formulæ.

Máni Khorlo (or simply khorlo): prayer cylinders, both the portable ones worked in the hand like a child's rattle and the large barrels fixed on pivots. Those worked by running streams are styled Ohhu-khor.

Máni Lhákhang: shed or house sheltering series of prayer-barrels arranged like a system of huge bobbins; so named when isolated from any religious edifice.

Tsuk-lá-khang: the temple attached to large monastery.

Lhá-khang: ordinary temple isolated from any monastery.

Du-khang: worship-hall of a Gompa.

Ts'o-khang: general congregation-hall in large Gompas where public ceremonies are held.

Gong-khang: chapel in temple wherein the images of demons and "terrific deities" are segregated.

Gyá-p'ik; or Gep'i: a cube-shaped structure with concave sides, being a wooden framework covered with gilded metal plates, and placed as a dome on temples.

Láb-ding: enclosure where travellers can pitch tents.

Sung-bum: conical stone oven outside houses in which juniper is burnt as offering to propitiate evil spirits.

Lü-ku: metal images.

Dampa: large erect figure of any deity.

Nyák lu-ku: licentious-posed figures.

Dün-chok: offering-table for flowers.

Shu-mar: chief lamp before the larger images.

Mar-me: small lamps burning before deities; and used in large numbers at kangsha rites. They are small brass bowls of butter with floating wicks.

Ohhó kyok: libation-bowl; sometimes made of skull with gilded metal cover and with stand beautifully chased and ornamented. Frequently known as ts'e ghi bhumpa.

Mé-long: convex mirror of oval shape over which, in forecasts, holy water is poured.

Damaru: small drum composed of two skull-tops fastened back to back, the opening on either side being covered with prepared fish-skin; sometimes having pendant tassels of bunches of human hair.

Dorje: sacred implement held in the hand during ceremonials and shaped like very small hand-dumbbells with open-work knob at each end. Originally meant to represent a thunderbolt.

P'ur-bhu: ornamental-headed brass javelin with three-sided spike, used by priests during exorcisms against demons. The original p'urbhu is in Sera Gompa, Lhása.

Kang-dhung: long thin trumpet made of hollow human thigh-bone; sometimes the joint-end has a piece of human skin very neatly sewn round it, or a thong-like piece hanging to it. Used in temple ceremonial.

Dhilbhu: small brass bell with elaborate handle.

Dhung-kar: Conch-shells, blown as interludes in congregational book recitals.

Dhung-chhen: great copper trumpet, about 8 feet long, blown at 3 a. m. to summon inmates of gompas to the morning rites in the du-khang. Requires two men to hold it up.

Yai-khyil Dhung-kar: white conch-shell with whorl twisting to right, very rare and when of large size, almost priceless. Used in monasteries as calling horns.

Gyá-ling: long cornet-like trumpet with holes and stops.

Bá-dung: copper trumpet or horn without side-holes or stops.

Roi-ma (འཛོམ་མ་) small brass cymbals in pairs.

Si-nyen (བསྐྱེད་ལྷན་པ་) cymbals of better tone and with cloth pad to hold with on either side.

Ngá: large drums with long handles placed in temples and often taken out for ceremonies in houses.

Ghang-ngá: large heavy metal gong.

Yáng-yik: music-score used in more elaborate temple-music for trumpets and conches.

Bumpa: flagon for holy-water, with a lid and long spout, and with holes at top for tall bunch of peacock-feathers.

T'á-bum (ཐུམ་འབྲུག་) one of the varieties of Bumpa; a small teapot-like vessel clad in red nabá and with peacock feather in hole at top. Often of silver.

Ohhá-bum: much larger variety like a tea-urn with spout and with receptacle in lid for flowers. Sometimes termed Jhya-ma-bum.

Shön-ghö (བཞོན་གྲོ་) or Shön- tong: a tall open copper vessel.

Nabäd: wrappings of coloured silk or satin put on idols, books, bowls, &c., and regarded as the "clothes" of such implements.

Torma: many kinds of sacrificial offering are thus styled; but name usually applied to small effigies of butter stamped with various sacred devices, or else to pieces of wood or moulded clay, coloured, on which are plastered small slabs and medals made of butter.

Pöi-rengbu: incense-tapers, very thin and generally coloured pink, burning rapidly and emitting slight odour; used by visitors to shrines who light them at lamp burning before image they would honour.

Mendré: small cone, bee-hive-shaped, stuck all over with raw rice, with dabs of paint here and there, and placed near the Shu-már. A hole in the apex serves as a receptacle or vase for unused and partly-burnt incense-tapers.

Bák: masks for use in devils' dance on the Guru Pema festival. When not in use are hung up on the walls of temples, with coloured robes and sleeves draped beneath to represent body of face depicted by mask.

Kyülkhor: framework or shelves on which series of images are grouped; also any sacred diagram on floor (maṅḍal).

Gyen-ts'en (རྒྱལ་མཚན་): the Buddhist "flag of victory."

Seen in two styles: (1) a tall cylinder of black felt with a white line or insertion encircling it near lower end, and two vertical lines of white running from top to bottom at right-angles to other white band. Closed in at top where it narrows so as to be often almost like a shut umbrella, and sometimes surmounted by metal trident.

(2) Also, made up of three colours, red, yellow, and blue, arranged flounce-like one above the other, with a white flounce between each colour; and placed on tops of poles which are planted in the ground near temples and chhörtens. The first kind decorate the eaves of gompas and palaces.

Dár-chho and Lungtá : flags inscribed with mystic formula and strips of coloured cloth fastened to tall poles; the wind fluttering the flags and so uttering the prayers printed thereon. Lung-tá signifies "airy horse."

Lü' (ལུ) or ལོ Dö (in Sikkim) : reeds or very thin straight twigs about 2 feet in height, strung with yarn of various colours and bits of stick, in close likeness to the yards and rigging on a ship's mast. When anyone is sick, these are made and planted beside the path nearest to the house. As they are supposed to resemble the natural dwelling of demons which cause sickness, the demons are presumed to be enticed therein out of the sick man's body.

Shol-dum : gauze cylinder placed over lamp; at top a metal rod, projecting therefrom, holds another smaller cylinder of paper inscribed with prayers above the lamp-flame; and, being freely suspended, the draught from the flame causes it to revolve.

TIBETAN MYTHOLOGY.

The following are the colloquial designations of the more popular deities, saints, &c., whose effigies are to be seen in Tibetan temples :—

SANG-GYE SHÁKYA Buddha Shakyamuni, the Buddha who T'UBPA; or JHO-O last appeared on earth; known also as BIMPOCHEE : Chomdendai, and familiarly as "the Jho." There are said to be three original or "self-sprung" images of the Jho: one in the Jho-khang at Lhásá, representing him as a boy of 12; one in the Chan-than-sze temple at Peking, as an adult; and a third in the golden temple of Kumbum, near Koko Nur, as an old man. Copies in bronze of these three occur in the chief Tibetan temples.

JHAMPA (ཇམཔ་);
OR JHAMPA GOMPO:

the Buddha to come (Sansk: Maitreya), generally portrayed as seated European-fashion and not as other deities. Many gigantic figures exist; one 70 feet high at Potala; another 180 feet high in Jhampa Bum-ling temple in Amdo; others in the Rong Jhamchhen Gompa in Tsang and in Daipung Monastery. These huge images are styled Jhamchhen.

WÖ'PÁKME'; OR TS'K-PÁKME':

the Sanskrit Amitabha the Dhyani Buddha from whom emanated the famous Chen-raisi. He is incarnated in the successive Panchhen Rimpochhe of Tashilhümpo, who is thus spiritual father of the Grand Lama of Lhasá.

JHO-O MI-KYÖ' DORJE:

the Dhyani Buddha corresponding to the Sanskrit Akshobhya. A gilt image of this being, said to be 1,200 years' old, is the chief treasure in the Ramochhe temple at Lhasá.

JHO-O CHEN-RAISI:

the great protecting genius of Tibet, incarnated in the Grand Lama of Lhasá. He is a Ye-shei Sem-Pa or Dhyani Sattwa, spiritually emanating from Wö'pákme', though actually born from a lotos. Usually depicted with eleven faces and many arms (properly 1,000) and in the palm of each hand an eye. His full Tibetan name is Spyan-ras-gzijs Dbang-p'yug (Sansk: Avalokiteswara.)

JÁM-YANG; OR JÁM-PÁL:

known as the Shön-nur gyurpa or Renewer of Youth; a Dhyani Sattwa, in sanctity second only to Chenraisi. He is constantly incarnated in the current Head of Sakya Monastery. Appears in temples seated, with crossed in-folded legs and upturned soles, on a large lotos. Brandishes gadá or mace in right hand and a dorje in his left.

DORJE CHHANG:

a third Dhyani Sattwa, who was evolved from the Dhyani Buddha Mi-kyō Dorje. Chief shrine is in Chakpouri Medical Monastery at Lhásá. Often figured in his "terrific aspect" with screaming face and dishevelled hair, his body painted scarlet. He flourishes the dorje. In Gyantse Chhörtén is a famous golden statue of this guardian of the Gelukpa order. (Sansk: Vájravan).

ZEKZEN:

Kashyapa Buddha, or the Atom Eater; a Buddha who lived on earth in a former age. Relics of his corporeal substance seem still plentiful, as they are served up in medical pills obtainable from several Tibetan dignitaries.

LAKNA DORJE; or CHHYAKDOR:

subduer of evil spirits and guardian of the mystic doctrine. Represented with hanging belly and with open mouth displaying three large fangs. Often confounded with Dorje Chhang (also styled Chhyakdor) and also with the next deity.

LAKNA DORJE; or CHHYAKNA DORJE:

De-pōn or Ruler of the Noiñin or mountain spirits. He may be distinguished from the just-mentioned deity by his green paint or green clothing. Known in Tantrik ceremonial as "the green-robed Lakna Dorje."

DOLMA (ལྷོ་མ་);
or TÖ-MA:

"She who delivers;" the chief goddess of Tibet who has ever co-operated with Chenraisi for the good of mortals. Her spirit has disintegrated itself into 21 branch emanations whose images grouped in series are known as a Dolma kyilkhor.

DORJE P'ÁMO; or DORJE NÁLJORMA:

benevolent goddess at one time incarnated in form of a sow, hence her name "The Sow with the Dorje." Often figured in a curious medley of an upright pig backed by one or more females conjoined in one image. Incarnated in lady-abbess of Samding Monastery, Yamdok; but another female incarnation occurs in a community on margin of Namts'o Chhyidmo, a third at Markula in Lahul. The Pig-lady is also specially worshipped at Tsün-mo-t'ang Gompa in North Sikkim.

PÁNDEN LHÁMO
དབང་ལྷ་མོ་

a ferocious goddess figured in riotous attitude, trampling on the mangled remains of her lovers whom she has decoyed to destruction, and with uplifted bowl from which she is jauntily drinking their blood. Over her arm there dangles a huge rosary of skulls, and she carries both dorje and gada (club). Known also as Pánden Mák-jorma.

T'O-NYER CHENMA:

another terrifying goddess, "she who is wrinkled with anger," who was at one time incarnated as Zák-khri, Nepalese wife of king Srong-tsan Gampo.

TÁNDIN:

a god always painted red and generally in human form, but occasionally appearing with a horse's head and neck but a man's body. Classed as a f'owo or wrathful deity, because, though well-disposed to men, he terrifies demons by neighing.

SHINJE; or DORJE
JIK-JHYE':

the Lord of Death, figured with sword and many faces, but has several distinct forms represented. His coercion is one of the chief feats of the Ngák-pa or Tantrik priests who then make use of rosaries formed of discs of human skull or of ele- phant stomach-stone. Shinje is sometimes figured presiding over a cauldron in which he is boiling the heads of the doomed.

- NAM-SE ; or NAM-T'OI God of Riches, said to be the same as SHEE : Kuwera, but title really means "Son of the listening ears." Usually depicted with retinue of aerial sprites; and he is always painted either yellow or else black.
- ZAMBHÁLA : a Ngák lü' or Tantrik deity, often confounded with Nam-se, and usually figured clasping to his breast with lustful gestures some female deity.
- ME'-LHÁ-YI GYA-PO : king of the fire-spirits, endowed with power to purge from consequences of sin those souls in the Bardo whose form of re-birth is so far undetermined. Figured sometimes as seated astride a red ram, sometimes as perched on a huge lotos beneath an umbrella.
- PE'-HAR ; or CHHOI- king of the astrologers, represented in KYONG : Gompas as a king riding on a yellow or white lion, and robed in tiger-skin. He is the yidam or tutelary deity of the professional astrologers attached to the Ramochhe temple at Lhásá who, as a body, are likewise known by his name. However, the chief of the class, the incarnation of Pe-har himself, resides at Ná-chhung grove near Lhásá. This personage is styled Ná-chhung Chhoikyong, is treated with divine honours, and he it is who forecasts, on a vacancy, the characteristics whereby the new Grand Lama of Lhásá may be identified.
- GOMA SHI ; or CHHOI- synonyms for the four terrific doorkeepers KYONG SHI ; or JIK- or guardians of the doctrine, and in Bud-
TEH-KYI GYAL-CHHEN dhist literature described as four kings
SHI ; or the "Dik dwelling on the edges of the top of Mount Rajas :" Meru to protect the 33 greater gods. They usually seem to be painted on the outside walls of the Gongkhang and the monastery treasure chamber, where they are represented as reeking with gore, wreathed in skulls, and of hideous aspect. Of the four, one carries a hook, another a chain, a third a snare, and the fourth a bell; each bearing in the right hand a bowl, representative of the world. Flames surround the figures together with a retinue of animal-headed demons.

TSONG-KHAPA; OR;
JE RIMPOCHHE:

deified hero; the great Buddhist reformer and founder of the Gelukpa school. Died 1440 A.D. Life-sized figures and relics of him abound everywhere; the most costly effigies being set up in the Galden and Kumbum monasteries which he founded.

PEMA JUNG-NAI; OR GURU RIMPOCHHE:

the well-known Padma Sambhawa, deviser of much eclectic ceremonial and jugglery, founder of the Urgyenpa sect, and everywhere popular, especially in Derge, Tsang, and Sikkim. Grottoes where the saint lived are shewn in all parts, in some of which refuse of his food in the shape of a reddish dust is still sold. His sayings as contained in his "Lotos Picture-writings" are universally quoted. Other names popularly designating the saint are Urgyen Pema and Guru Pema. In Tantrik rites he is held to assume a terrific as well as a mild aspect and is then styled Dorje Dholöt.

P'UL JHUNG; OR JHO-O ATISHA:

the famous Bengal paṇḍit, Atisha, otherwise Dipankara Buddha, who came from Magadha as a missionary to Tibet for the revivification of Buddhism. Labouring for 17 years, he died 1053 A.D. at Nyet'ang near Lhásá. Deified and greatly revered.

- DOM RIMPOCHHE : bromston, pupil of Atisha, and founder of Kadampa sect. Built Rading Gompa, to the north of Lhásá, and there a huge effigy of the saint is worshipped. His tomb is shewn in Jhang Taklung Gompa, 35 miles N.N.E. of Lhásá.
- LHACHAM MAN-DARAWA : wife of Guru Rimpoche! Her shrine is at Ribo Tagzang near Mount Everest.
- SÁKYÁ PANDITA : the famous teacher who founded the sect whose head-quarters continue still at Sá-kyá Monastery (50 miles due north of Mount Everest). Died circa 1245 A.D.
- SO'NG-TSEN GÁMPO - (སྲོང་བཙན་གླམ་པོ་)
or JE GÁMPO : the king of Tibet who introduced learning and therewith the beginnings of the Buddhist faith into Tibet, circa 680 A.D. His effigy and those of his two wives, the Chinese and Nipalese princesses, have been set up in almost every monastery in the land. The most highly revered images of the trio, into which it is said their essences were absorbed, are those preserved in the Jho-khang, Lhásá.
- LOMPO GAR : prime minister of foregoing king, incarnate, now-a-days in abbots of Tengyai Ling, Lhásá.
- T'ANG-TONG GYALPO : a lama of piety and engineering skill who built eight chain bridges over the Yeru Tsangpo, 250 years ago. An amusing anecdote of the saint's birth is given in the Nineteenth Century, October 1889.
- SHÁBDUNG NGAKWANG
NANGYAL : a saint of literary and engineering skill. He built, 200 years ago, chain bridges over rivers on the Bhutanese border, and is held to be still incarnate in the successive heads of Tashichhoidzong Monastery, the chief lamasery of Bhutan.

- CHHOI-GYAL TERDAR a deified hero who has appeared on earth so far 17 times; incarnate in the successive heads of Mindol Ling.
- LINGPA :
- LAMA JE P'AKMODUP : known also as Situ Gyalpo, a saintly Tibetan king—the first to gain sway over the whole country, built many forts and monasteries; died 1372 A.D. His image and the tombs of the 18 kings of the dynasty he founded exist at Densat'il, a ruinous gumpa on the left bank of the Yeru, 15 miles east of Tse-t'ang.

Subjoined are the colloquial designations of the different classes of lesser deities, demons, and other supernatural orders :—

Rik-sin : the 8 sages expert in Tantrik arts, of whom the chief is styled Lo-pön Hum-kara (i. e., Pema Jung-nai.)

Lhá : any minor god, including local deities and all Brahmins.

Lhá-min : an order of beings ever at war, through spiritual rivalry, with the lhá.

Shrimpo and Shrin-mo : male and female monsters, hostile to man, dwelling under huge boulders in valleys. They devour travellers unprotected by greater deities whose aids against shrimpo should be propitiated before starting on a journey. Correspond to the Rakshása and Rakshási of Sanskrit mythology.

Yidák : lost souls in goblin bodies of stupendous size, often several miles in height, but with tiny mouths which prevent eating aught save the smallest crumbs. They groan terribly with hunger and cause earthquakes.

Noi-jin : mountain-gods haunting peaks and passes. Many mountain ranges in Tibet are named after them with varying appendix names; e. g., Noi-jin T'ang-la range S.E., of Tengri Nur, the summits of which are said to be embodiments of the Noi-jin king and 860 of his attendants. Namt'oi-shre, god of riches, is called by many the Noi-jin king, and in this last character is sometimes styled Muk-dzin: "holder of the mist."

Lhándé: imps of demoniac character dwelling underground during the day, and at night-time amusing themselves by riding on the backs of foxes, the yelping of which beasts is caused by the blows of the goblins. They carry as their cudgels the huge flowering stems of the greater mullein, which plant is therefore styled in Tibet Lhande berka. The Jhándé is a variety endowed with wings.

Lu: deities in the form of water-serpents inhabiting lakes, rivers, and wells. Benignant towards man, they construct at the bottom of lakes gorgeous palaces wherein they watch over great treasures as well as the lives of fish which have been restored to the water as propitiatory sacrifices after being caught. They are of four varieties, a sacred pond to the N. of Potala in Lhásá, for example, being reserved by law for piebald Lu. When provoked the Lu cause damage by hail and floods; but payment of sur-f'al or "hail tax" to a Tantrik lama insures your property against such injury.

Támchho': a fabulous horse whose mouth forms the source of the great Yeru river.

Dri-ia: sprites inhabiting the air, of fairy-like form, who divert themselves by playing on ko-p'ong or guitars. They subsist solely on odours: consuming the sweetest scents of flowers as well as the foulest stench from privies and slaughter-houses. Butchers burn offal of beasts on pedestals to propitiate these beings, who are often said to be incarnated as bees, wasps, &c.

Khá-đoma: witches of vast form under five queens, whose spirits now dwell in costly figures which have been set up to their honour in Rámochhe Temple, Lhásá, where their powerful aid to mortals may be duly invoked.

Má-mo : other female spirits, but of a mischievous disposition.

Shib-dák : the particular god of the soil in each village with the surrounding country appertaining thereto. The number of Shib-dák is accordingly great; and every traveller arriving within the boundaries of a fresh place will do well to propitiate the local gods of its soil. Incarnated, at times, as monkeys, they ride upon hares, bearing bows and arrows of straw and shields fashioned from huge toadstools.

T'áb-lhá : god of the domestic hearth, invoked after pollutions caused by the boiling over of milk, &c.

Tsen : solitary demons haunting particular mountain-paths, but possessed of the habit and power of entering the bodily frame of a human being and causing him to be afflicted with fever and divers other special diseases.

Dön-chen : evil spirits which enter the body in bevises of 15 or 18 occasioning either death by apoplexy or violent attacks of epilepsy and lock-jaw. The rainbow is deemed to be caused by these spirits coming down in troops to drink.

Dé (bdud) : is held to be the nearest equivalent to our Satan. In later days many devils or dú'po have, however, been developed; and the female devils or dú'mo haunt lakes for the purpose of feeding on the bodies of monks thrown in as food for fish.

Gong-po and Gong-mo : are demons inspiring jealousy, desire for money, cowardice, and licentiousness.

Gék : subtle inhabitants of the valleys who put obstacles in the way of travellers to sacred spots and hinder those engaged in the erection of Uákhang (temples) and chhorten. The Hindu god Ganesa is regarded by Tibetans as the "King of the Gék" and "Remover" of these obstacles.

Khyung : a monster bird akin to the roc of the Arabs and the Garuda bird of Hindu literature. He does the bidding of Dorje Chhang, the Boddhisattwa. The Bön priests or sorcerers of Tibet, who are anti-Buddhists, regard him as their protector, and most of the Bön-pa religious houses are dedicated in name to the Khyung.

Dhul-bhum-mo: female satyrs with poisonous horns.

Pung-shri and má-ki-shri: underground demons of the gnome type, who devour children; taking also possession of the hearth after broth and milk have boiled over, unless ceremonial cleansing is performed.

BUDDHIST SECTS.

[The Buddhists of Tibet are split up into about 18 different schools or sects, several of which, however, are not bitterly opposed to one another. There are two great divisions or classes of these sects, namely, the Nyingma or ancient schools, and the Sarma or new schools. Besides the general division named Nyingma, one sect of this class is likewise particularly denominated the Nyingma sect. The Nyingma votaries are chiefly distinguished for their practice of magic ceremonial; consequently members of the chief Sarma sect, the Gelukpa, often resort to Nyingma lamas on special occasions].

GELUKPA (དགེལུགས་པ་): The most popular of all the sects; the established church of Tibetan Buddhism; a reformed development set afloat by Tsong-khapa in the 14th century. The Dalai Lama of Lhásá, the Panchhen Rimpoche of Táshilümpo, and their establishments, together with all the leading monasteries in the province of Ui, hold Gelukpa tenets. Their chief lamaseries are Gálden, Samye, Daipung, Sera, and the Four Lings of Lhásá, in Ui; Táshilümpo, Gyángtse, Dongtse, &c., in Tsáng; Kumbum near Koko Nur; together with hosts of other large establishments in Khams; also many in Ladak, of which the principal are Pi-tuk, Samtan Ling, and Likir. The gelongs of this sect wear red clothing, but a cap and sacred pouch of amber-coloured cloth; hence their designation "Yellow-hat" Buddhist. The Mongol and Spiti Gelukpa wear yellow robes as well as yellow caps.

KĀDAMPA (བཀའ་བརྒྱུད་མཐའ་བ་): A school, the result of the first reformation of Tibetan Buddhism under the Indian paṇḍit Atisha in the 11th century, its tenets being eventually shaped by Bromston, strictly upon Mahāyana lines. Now closely allied to the Gelukpa school, which has acquired possession of its head centre Rading Gompa. Most of the Kādampa establishments are in P'anyul district, N.-E. of Lhásá; but they are now nearly all in ruinous condition.

KĀGYŪ'PA (བཀའ་རྩུབ་པ་): One of the leading Nyingma or "Red Cap" sects, originally started in opposition to the reforms of Bromston. Its votaries profess acquaintance with the deepest subtleties of Tantrik learning and meditative science. The presiding deity of the sect is Lagna Dorje, otherwise Dorje Chhang. Most of the so-called Dukpa monasteries in Tibet, such as Dorje-ták on the Yeru Tsangpo, belong to it. In Ladak a most powerful body, the principal establishments of that country, such as Hémis, Karzog, Hanlé, Chhimré, owning allegiance to its tenets.

NYINGMAPA (རྩུབ་པ་): Professedly the most venerable of the schools and governed by the precepts of the Yoga-charya system. The head centre is Mindol Ling, a very ancient monastery some 45 miles S.-E. of Lhásá. Its gompas may be known by the red and blue stripes decorating the outer walls. The monks wear red robes with red hat and red pouch.

LHO-DUKPA (ལྷོ་དུཀ་པ་): The prevailing sect in Bhutan, with head-quarters at Tśhichhoidzong, under the Dharma Raja. Branches of the sect exist in Tibet, e. g., at Rálung, Dechhen Dzong, &c.; whilst, curious to relate, all the monasteries built round Mount Kailasa near Lake Map'ang (Manasarowar) are peopled by its votaries, the establishments being exclusively under lamas who have been trained at Tšichhoi-dzong.

KARMAPA (ཀམ་པ་): A sect much followed in Nipal, professing to be deeply versed in the forecasting of karma. Samding monastery on Lake Yamdok belongs to this communion. The dress is red with black cap and black pouch.

DZOK-CHEMPA (ཇོ་མཚོ་ཤར་པ་): The sect most predominant in Sikkim, professing Atiyoga doctrine and regarding Padma Jungnai (Padma Sambhava) as their founder. Pemayangtse (Pemiongchi) monastery in Sikkim is head centre of the "Urgyenpa," as the adherents of the school are often styled. In professed imitation of their founder, who is allotted a wife named Mandarawa, many lamas marry or have loose ideas concerning female society, and differ from other Buddhists in the important particular of slaying animals in sacrifice. The dress is a dark red robe with brown cap and pouch. Extensive colonies of this sect exist in Dergé and Zokchhen in Eastern Tibet, the latter district deriving its name therefrom.

SÁ-KYÁPA (ས་སྐྱུ་པ་): Formerly a powerful body, the successive chief lamas of the famous Sá-kya monastery having at one period (1270-1340 A.D.) governed the whole kingdom of Tibet. Sá-kya Gompa (Lat. 28° 54' 30 N. Long. 87° 56' E.) is still the seat of this once august Red-cap community; and other Sá-kyápa lamaserics continue to flourish, e. g., P'enyl Nalendra, Gongkar Chhoide, Ngor Gompa, Kyisho Rawana, &c., &c.

JO-WANGPA (ཇོ་མོ་གླང་པ་): A modern or Sarma sect of Yellow Caps which originated in P'unts'o Ling under Kun-khyen Jowo Nang with peculiar dogmas said to be akin to the Gelukpa. Its adherents profess much asceticism, study the Dulwa texts, and are less idolatrous than other Buddhists.

DI-KHUNGPA (འབྲི་ཁུང་པ) or Di-gumpa: An ancient body, formerly of immense influence, being rivals of the Sá-kyápa; with several large establishments still kept up both in Ui and in Ladak. Lama Yuru, Sháchhugul, Yangdi Karpo (near Lháśá) and Di-khung Ts'el Gompa all belong to this sect. At the last-named, which stands 70 miles N. E. of Lháśá, resides the incarnation of Di-khung Chhoije Kyobpa, the founder of the sect.

TÁKLUNGPA (སྤྲུག་ལུང་པ):	} Three Red Cap sects; the last-named being the body predominant in Spiti. Riwochhe on the Ngul Chhu is an important Táklungpa monastery.
YE-TAK-PA (ཉི་ཐག་པ):
CHHAK-GYÁ-PA (མུག་གྲུ་ས་པ):

SHI-JHE'PA (ཞི་ཇེ་པ): A community differentiated as the result of the labours of the Hindu Buddhist missionary, P'ákpa P'á Tampa Sang-gye; boasting a small following in Khams, as well as in Dengri district where P'a Tampa lies buried.

KUN-CHHOI-TSANGPA (ཀུན་ཚོས་གཙུག་པ): A sect with a few monasteries in the districts bordering on Yunnan.

BHÖN or PÖN-PO: These are professedly anti-Buddhists and represent the ancient religious cult of the land, correspondent with the Shámans of Mongolia. Their priests are of both sexes, females being preferred, and deal largely in sorcery and animal sacrifices. Their services are in constant requisition especially among the Himalayan tribes and in remote districts of Eastern Tibet. Their mode of circumambulation is with the left side turned to the object concerned—the exact converse of the Buddhist method. Several Bhōn monasteries exist in the Khyungpo district, W. of Chhamdo. The Pōn-po themselves are often designated Khyungpo after their guardian the Khyung bird. In Sikkim the Lepchas and Limbus follow the Bhōn cult.

ABLE—ABOVE.

The verbs appear here in the infinitive form, though they rarely occur thus in practice. The verbal root alone is generally used; or else the root with some affix annexed indicative of tense, such as yin, re', du', jhung, yong, &c.

The Ládaki words are in large part current in Rudok and Western Tibet. In Balti the dialect is slightly different, the letters s and r occurring more frequently as the first letter in a word, while the infinitive affix is changed to chas. In Tsang, Kirong, and Sikkim this affix becomes she, and in parts of Sikkim and Bhutan, nyi.

N. B.—Before using this Vocabulary, the Notes on Pronunciation on page 131 should be referred to.

ENGLISH—LADAKI—CENTRAL TIBETAN COLLOQUIAL —LITERARY TIBETAN.

The verbs appear here in the infinitive form, though they rarely occur thus in practice. The verbal root alone is generally used; or else the root with some affix annexed indicative of tense, such as yin, re', du', jhung, yong, &c.

The Ladaki words are in large part current in Rudok and Western Tibet. In Balti the dialect is slightly different, the letters s and r occurring more frequently as the first letter in a word, while the infinitive affix is changed to chas. In Tsang, Kiron, and Sikkim this affix becomes she, and in parts of Sikkim and Bhutan, nyi.

N. B.—Before using this Vocabulary, the Notes on Pronunciation on page 131 should be referred to.

APPENDIX.

MONGOL-TARTAR WORDS AND PHRASES.

[Mongol traders and pilgrims are constantly encountered in N.-E. Tibet and at Lhásá. These mostly speak Tibetan, but give to many letters a peculiar pronunciation. Thus gy is usually sounded j, and khy and ky as chh and ch; while d and t, ts and ch are often interchanged. It was probably this distorted pronunciation which influenced the American traveller, Mr. Rockhill, to adopt his extraordinary system of transliteration for Tibetan place-names in his, otherwise, most reliable narrative of exploration. The man who taught Mr. Rockhill at Peking was evidently a Mongol; and the various syllabary in his Appendix, wherein he sets forth the phonics of Lhásá, was plainly founded on Mongol information. As a possible aid to travellers, I have thought it well to annex a few useful words and phrases in Mongolized Tibetan as well as in the genuine Mongol language, the latter the colloquial idiom of the South. N.B.—In Mongol words, the vowels marked long, thus á, â, &c., have a greatly prolonged and somewhat guttural intonation, being sounded deep in the throat. The h is likewise guttural, being identic with the Persian ح in such words as khobar, khuda, &c. The Mongol adjective, unlike the Tibetan, precedes its noun.]
