INTRODUCTION

In this book the same 2000 key syllables which were given in the Word Book in Tibetan alphabetical order are rearranged, according to their phonetic values, in English alphabetical order.

In each line the arrangement is (1) phonetic rendering (2) key number (3) the syllable in Tibetan characters (4) letter by letter transcription of the Tibetan characters (5) catch meaning of the syllable. In cases in which the meaning of the syllable is not known, there is given within brackets the meaning of a common word in which the syllable occurs.

EXAMPLES:

Phonetic	Key number	Tibetan	Letter by letter transcription	Catch meaning
cha	1032	ཇ	cha	*(trouble)
cha	1078	ཇལ་	lchag	rod.
chá	1204	ཇ་	ja	tea.
chá	2406	ཇའ་	bya	bird.

Where the basic identity of different meanings of a syllable is doubtful, separate key numbers have been assigned to the different meanings. See for example chhe 1116 to 1122; gyu 846 to 858; je 1254, 1256.

- * indicates a syllable which does not occur in colloquial Tibetan as a complete word. There are many single syllables which are used as complete words in classical Tibetan but not in the spoken language of the present day.
- ? in place of a catch meaning indicates that the meaning of the syllable has not been determined.
- () round a final consonant indicates that the letter is sounded only very faintly or not at all or is sounded in some words and not in others.

The following abbreviations are used when necessary to save space:—

adj:— adjective or adjectival; adv:— adverb or adverbial; approx:— approximately; Ch:— Chinese; conjn:—conjunction; expl:— expletive; (H)—honorific; imp:— imperative; Ind:— Indian; indef:— indefinite; infin:— infinitive; interrog:— interrogative; intr:— intransitive; miscell:— miscellaneous; Mongol:— Mongolian; tr:— transitive; termn:— termination; v:— vide, or see.

NOTE ON THE TIBETAN ALPHABET

In the Introduction to the Word Book it has been stated that phonetic renderings and letter by letter transcription will be dealt with in the book on the Alphabet. A note on these matters and on the Tibetan alphabetical system may be useful at this stage.

Exclusive of certain reversed consonants which are used only in Sanskrit words the Tibetan alphabetical system consists of 30 simple consonants, including 2 letters which are used as bases for vowels; 5 vowels, of which 4 are written, the vowel a (ah) being deemed to be inherent when no other vowel is written; and a number of compound consonants, which are formed by writing one consonant above or below another consonant.

When there are no complicating factors, the approximate phonetic equivalents of the simple consonants are as shown below in ordinary type. The same equivalents are adopted, without regard to phonetic values, for letter by letter transcription with the exception that, for greater distinctness, the consonants which are rendered phonetically as k, ch, t, p, ts, s, are transcribed letter by letter as g, j, d, b, dz, z. ར་ is transcribed as h, and འ་ as a.

The letter by letter transcription values of these 8 letters are shown below in capitals.

SIMPLE CONSONANTS

ཀ་	k	ཁ་	kh	ག་	k'	G	ང་	ng
ཅ་	ch	ཅ་	chh	ཇ་	ch'	J	ཉ་	ny
ཏ་	t	ཐ་	th	ད་	t'	D	ན་	n
པ་	p	ཕ་	ph	བ་	p'	B	མ་	m
ཅ་	ts	ཅ་	tsh	ཇ་	ts'	DZ
ཇ་	w	ཉ་	sh'	ཇ་	s'	Z	ཨ་	(nil)H.
ཡ་	y	ར་	r	ལ་	l
ག་	sh	ས་	s	ཏ་	h		ཨ་	(nil)A.

The values of the consonants are approximately as in English. The letters which bear the mark ' are sounded more heavily than the similar letters without the mark ', but final k' is often almost or entirely silent. kh is sounded like the kh in the Hindustani word khana, food; not like the kh in khana, house, or in kharab, bad. Bell compares the 'ckh' in 'block-head'. ph is a slightly aspirated p and is not like f.

Tibetan school children say their alphabet, with the vowel a added, in the order ka, kha, k'a, nga; cha, chha, ch'a, nya; ta, tha, t'a, na; pa, pha, p'a, ma; tsa, tsha, t'sa, wa; sha, sh'a, a, ya; ra, la, sha, sa; ha, a.

VOWELS

The vowel a (ah) is present in any syllable to which no vowel sign is attached. The signs for the other vowels are:

◌̆	i	written above the consonant.
◌̇	ubelow.....
◌̈	eabove.....
◌̉	oabove.....

The vowels are called ◌̆ kī-ku; ◌̇ sháp-kyu; ◌̈ deng-bu; ◌̉ na-ro. The vowels are pronounced approximately as in Italian 'do, re, mi, fa'. u is like the u in full when it occurs in the middle of a syllable, but like oo in hoot when it occurs at the beginning or end of a syllable. o and u in their modified renderings of ö and ü are pronounced like the ö in the German word hören and the u in the French word sur (compare Bell's Grammar chapter 1).

Except when carried by ◌̆ or ◌̇, the vowel is sounded after the letter to which it is attached.

INITIAL CONSONANTS

The letter which carries the vowel is called the initial consonant.

COMPOUND CONSONANTS

These are formed by writing ◌̆ w abbreviated to ◌̆, ◌̇ y abbreviated to ◌̇, ◌̈ r abbreviated to ◌̈, ◌̉ h, and ◌̆ l, below the initial consonant; and ◌̈ r, usually abbreviated to ◌̈, ◌̆ l, and ◌̇ s, above the initial consonant.

The letters written below the initial consonant are said to be subjoined. Those written above the initial consonant are said to be superadded.

PREFIXED CONSONANTS

The letters which occur as prefixes to the initial consonants are ག་ g, ད་ d, བ་ b, མ་ m, and འ་

FINAL LETTERS

Every Tibetan syllable ends with a vowel or with ག་ g, འ་ ng, ད་ d, ར་ n, བ་ b, མ་ m, འ་, ར་ r, འ་ l, མ་ s.

མ་ s also occurs as a second final letter after ག་ g, འ་ ng, བ་ b, མ་ m.

The compound (subjoined and superadded), prefixed, and final letters affect the sound of consonants and of vowels in various ways which cannot be explained here in detail. It may however be noted that prefixed and superadded consonants tend to alter k, ch, t, p, ts, s, to g, j, d, b, dz, z; that ཡ་ y subjoined to ག་ p, ག་ ph, བ་ p, results in the sounds ch, chh, ch; that ད་ t, ར་ n, འ་ l, མ་ s, as final letters modify the vowel a into e, u into ü, and o into ö; and that ད་ t, འ་ l, མ་ s, as final letters are silent.

On the other hand, in words of more than one syllable, a letter which would be silent if it occurred at the end of a word is apt to be pronounced when followed by another syllable in the same word, and prefixed consonants which are silent at the beginning of a word tend to be picked up by a preceding syllable in the same word. And there are many irregularities of pronunciation.

LETTER BY LETTER TRANSCRIPTION

In these books letter by letter transcription is given only as an aid to the deciphering of the Tibetan letters. Being non-phonetic except in the case of very simple syllables it should be discarded at the earliest possible stage.

Letter by letter transcriptions of Tibetan characters are given in these books (1) from left to right and (2) from top to bottom. Vowels are placed in their proper phonetic position i. e. after the letters to which they are attached. Thus under key number 954 in the Word Book the syllable འབྱུར་ is transcribed as bsgyur. Similarly under key number 2554 འབྲི་ is transcribed as hbri.

ORDER OF WORDS IN DICTIONARIES.

In order to find a syllable in a dictionary or in the Word Book it is necessary to determine which is the initial letter. Under the initial letter the sequence is as follows:

- 1 the simple letter with the vowel a (followed by one or more final letters in Tibetan alphabetical sequence).
- 2 the simple letter with the vowels འ i, འ u, འ e, འ o, in that order.
- 3 compounds of the initial letter formed by subjoining བ w, བ y, བ r, བ l, བ s, in that order.

- 4 the simple letter, or a compound letter made by subjoining another letter, preceded by ग् g, द् d, ब् b, म् m, न्, in that order.
- 5 compound letters formed by superadding र् r, ल् l, स् s, in that order.

Rule 4 works within rule 5, rule 3 within rule 4, rule 2 within rule 3, and rule 1 within rule 2.

If the approximate sound of a syllable is known the easiest way of finding it in the Word Book is to look it up first in the book of Syllables. A rule of thumb for quick reference to Sarat Chandra Das's Dictionary is to divide the key number by 3 and turn on another 80 pages for key numbers round about 2700, but progressively less as the key numbers recede from 2700. For reference to Jaschke's dictionary (reprint 1934), divide the key number by 6 and turn back about 35 pages.
